25th ANNIVERSARY ORAL HISTORY PROJECT

Interview with Dr. John Galbraith
December 18, [1984]
Interviewer, Dr. Kathryn Ringrose

1 RINGROSE: On December eighteenth we locked ourselves in a faculty office here. I want to
2 start with the period when you were chairman of the southern section of the Senate.

3 GALBRAITH: I was chairman of the division.

4 RINGROSE: The division.

5 GALBRAITH: There was a chairman of the southern section who was different.

6 RINGROSE: Oh, ok. Yeah, I better get straight.

7 GALBRAITH: The southern and northern sections at each campus had a chairman.

8 RINGROSE: Had, had a division within the section.

9 GALBRAITH: That's been abolished since 1963 I think it was.

10 RINGROSE: At that time, the plans obviously were going forward for UCSD, and faculty was 11 being selected for the campus. And I think it would be interesting to have your perspective on 12 the planning down here since you at that point were at UCLA.

13 GALBRAITH: I was the chairman of the budget committee before I was chairman of the 14 Senate, so I had a good deal more to do with UCSD as a member and eventually chairman of 15 the budget committee. The attitude of the budget committee in my opinion, maybe it wasn't 16 representative of the campus but what is representative of the campus? There are different 17 points of view. One was supportiveness of public development of the UCSD campus mixed with 18 a bit of envy that UCSD was getting these highly paid luminaries and UCLA did not have the 19 resources to compete. This was the UCLA line. Now I understand from the UCSD point of view
20 it was held that these people were not being paid any more than what were being paid to top
21 people at UCLA. That's an arguable matter. But I suspect that there was more money being put 22 out per capita at UCSD than at UCLA but there was no disposition to try to block development
23 of this campus. It was recognized that this was a major center and we had to expand. After all 24 Clark Kerr had plans for nine [campuses] including San Francisco. And after 1965 he was 25 talking about eleven. One intercity campus in Los Angeles and one intercity campus in San 26 Francisco. So, the development of UCSD as an undergraduate/graduate institution was 27 inevitable. There was nothing that could be done to stop that once it was given that we needed
28 more campuses to accommodate the burgeoning student population.

29 RINGROSE: Did you, from UCLA's perspective, see this as essentially developing as a
30 science campus

31 GALBRAITH: Yes. In fact, I think that Roger [Revelle] saw it developing as a science campus. I
32 believe it not incorrect to say that Roger could visualize this as being the University's Caltech.
33 But better, of course.

34 RINGROSE: But better, right. I get the impression that there was some discussion among the 35 UCLA faculty about whether UCSD would pull its weight where undergraduates were 36 concerned. Did that ever get to the budget committee or was that discussed in other places?

37 GALBRAITH: I think that attitude would be an attitude of individuals rather than—. I don't think
38 there was that much notice being taken about UCSD. Louis Slichter opposed the development
39 of the campus I believe and thought that the needs could be provided by UCLA. But that's Louis
40 Slichter I could probably name several other people; George Mari the chairman of the statewide
41 committee was involved in a recommendation that would have delayed the development of this 42 as a burgeoning campus. I believe he didn't involve the idea that San Diego state might have a 43 component.

44 RINGROSE: Well, there was a point, in fact [Clark] Kerr talks about this, when the offer was 45 made to San Diego State that they would become the university down here. And that didn't go 46 through for reasons that I think are internal to San Diego State.

47 GALBRAITH: Probably. Anyway, the attitude of people that were on committees at UCLA, the 48 committees that related to the problem, was that they were not going to have a dog in the 49 manger attitude toward San Diego that Berkeley had had to UCLA. And I think that was a pretty 50 general attitude. There was a supportiveness of what Revelle was trying to do rather than 51 obstructionism. I think that was generally true with the UCLA campus.

52 RINGROSE: When I look at some of the early planning, really early planning materials down 53 here, it looks to me as though the original intention was for a very high-level collection of 54 technical institutes. Science oriented.

55 GALBRAITH: That's right, in fact, they were calling them institutes not departments.

56 RINGROSE: With a few very talented, very mature graduate students.

57 GALBRAITH: Yes

58 RINGROSE: And then you watch the plan gradually moving over, you aren't going to have 59 more graduate students, you're going to have some undergraduates, but they are going to be 60 very select. And so, on and the place gradually develops in an undergraduate direction. And you 61 know, what do you think was the stimulus for that move?

62 GALBRAITH: It's a response to an imperative that's been the view of our central administration.

63 RINGROSE: As opposed...

64 GALBRAITH: We had to have a large student population here because otherwise we would be 65 turning away lots of students. And in fact, we are turning away lots of students now. The 66 projections of population were excessively optimistic, as it turned out, and we had an 67 excessively pessimistic prediction later on which caused them to shut down expansion, reduce 68 capital improvements and so forth. But at the time that San Diego became a general campus it
69 was a response, as I say, to the fact that there were a lot of people that had to be 70 accommodated, a lot of undergraduate students and the existing six campuses could not 71 accommodate them.

72 RINGROSE: So, could one safely say that the price that [Roger] Revelle had to pay for getting 73 his high-level science campus was to agree to teach undergraduates?

74 GALBRAITH: Eventually, that's right. At first, it appeared that he might be able to develop a
75 research institute which was an enlargement from Scripps [Institution of Oceanography] into 76 other areas of the sciences. But, as I say, when you move toward 1960, and the planning of the 77 all-university program, it was quite clear that Revelle would have to accommodate that. He 78 couldn't have an elite group, but I think the second stage was to be a very small number of 79 undergraduates, that was the intermediate stage.

80 RINGROSE: And they were going to be very, very careful in selecting...

81 GALBRAITH: An elite, yes.

82 RINGROSE: And when I talked with Jim Arnold, and he started talking about the first group of 83 undergraduates indeed they were a highly select group. And the faculty almost loved them to 84 death.

85 GALBRAITH: Yes. Revelle College in its nascent stage had a very high, on any basis you
86 calculate it on, a very high level of undergraduates. I think it still does. If you compare the SAT's 87 at Revelle with the Berkeley SAT's I think you would probably be at least even.

88 RINGROSE: But they are nothing like they were at the beginning.

89 GALBRAITH: No.

90 RINGROSE: I sat down and plotted them out once. It's a big change from what they were.

91 GALBRAITH: But they are still high by comparison. Pick any other campus: Los Angeles.

92 RINGROSE: So, the UCLA faculty who were involved in planning saw this and understood 93 what was going on down here.

94 GALBRAITH: I think they did.

95 RINGROSE: Now were you also involved in the early plans for Irvine?

96 GALBRAITH: Yes, I was the chairman of the Irvine Advisory Committee. At the time I came 97 down here I was the chairman of the Irvine Advisory Committee, and our function was to act as 98 the budget committee and essentially mini-academic senate before the faculty arrives. So, the 99 Irvine recommendations for faculty went through our committee. On the committee there were 100 representatives from the other southern campuses. Carl Eckert was on the committee and there
101 was a representative from Riverside, one from Santa Barbara. I guess that's it. The one from 102 Santa Barbara never showed up but that committee set up ad hoc committees and acted as the 103 budget committee and sometimes did both. We had a record of about one week from the 104 submission of the application for an appointment to our recommendation for approval or 105 disapproval. It was quite remarkable.

106 RINGROSE: That's very remarkable. Would you say that there was a tendency to sort of, you
107 know, just to use UCSD and Irvine as an example, to treat these new campuses in the same
108 way or were there significant differences in the way they were developing and the attitudes 109 about them?

110 GALBRAITH: The character of the founding father at San Diego and the character of the 111 founding father at Irvine were very different. Dan Aldrich was from an agricultural discipline; he'd 112 been dean of agriculture. His ideas were to develop a major campus in terms of getting very 113 good people but from the beginning enthusiastic. There's nobody more enthusiastic than Dan
114 Aldrich when he has his mind made up—to develop a very large campus and he saw his faculty
115 as being people who are involved in teaching and in research. Whereas our faculty, in first 116 instance, came in with the research component almost exclusively. A big difference. So, the 117 character of the campus was reflected to a great extent in the outlook and personality of the 118 respective people who were involved in the first instance, Revelle and Aldrich. As the campuses
119 have developed, they've moved toward each other. I don't mean one is going down and one is 120 going up, but they moved toward each other.

121 RINGROSE: Right. No.

122 GALBRAITH: The Irvine campus is being very active in terms of fundraising. It's tapping into a 123 very large Orange County population, and there's a lot of money up near Irvine.

124 RINGROSE: Sure, they're well situated.

125 GALBRAITH: And they're doing very well. Aldrich did very well and [Jack] Peltason did very 126 well. And you can see similarities between the emphasis of [Richard] Atkinson and Peltason.
127 They are both very actively promoting large contributions from private sources. That's almost a 128 requirement for a presiding officer at the present time to be involved in massive fundraising.

129 RINGROSE: Even in a public institution?

130 GALBRAITH: ...around across the country, yes.

131 RINGROSE: It's a fairly new phenomenon. Is there anything else you would like to say about 132 that early period, you know, I'm trying to fill in the blanks and the conversation you had with 133 [Harry] Tuchmayer, in your UCLA interview...

134 GALBRAITH: The blanks. Well, I could tell you this is the personal side. It's really quite 135 accidental that I would have to come down here in the first place. If my daughter had not been 136 so obstructionist, she insisted that she wanted to finish high school and she didn't want to go
137 with us to England. I had a sabbatical leave. I was going to take a year off.

138 RINGROSE: Is that really how it happened?

139 GALBRAITH: Yes, '63-'64 I would have been in England. And I wouldn't have been appointed 140 to that committee. They went around to see the new university. A lot of things would have 141 happened differently. So, I stayed on '63-'64 and this was the time when Herb [York] resigned.

142 RINGROSE: Right.

143 GALBRAITH: And there was a place, there was an opening for a chancellor at Riverside. So
144 that got me involved, I was on the committee to seek a successor to Herb, so he could turn up
145 on committees. And the first choice of the committee as you might expect was Roger Revelle.
146 There was a forlorn hope that maybe he might be appointed. The next choices, I can't give you
147 them in order, a list, a short list, were Dean Rusk...

148 RINGROSE: Right.

149 GALBRAITH: ...and George Bundy, who were in high favor at that time. That changed very 150 drastically after the Vietnam War became a focus. Those were the people that the committee
151 was recommending. I don't believe that Kerr ever considered those alternatives. In fact, Kerr 152 told me that he could rely heavily on his selection in the first instance.

153 RINGROSE: So those possibilities never even went to the regents?

154 GALBRAITH: I don't think, no they didn't go to the regents.

155 RINGROSE: Now you had been down here as vice chancellor in '64.

156 GALBRAITH: I came down as vice chancellor on the first of July 1964 and Kerr's invitation to 157 me in the first place was "why don't you go down there as vice chancellor?" And I said, "I don't 158 want to go down as vice chancellor. I'm not prepared to commit myself to leaving the 159 professorial activity for administration." And then he said "Why don't you go down for a year. We 160 have an emergency situation." Which I think was true. So, I agreed to go down for a year and 161 the seductions of office crept in and I became more and more involved from July up to whatever 162 it was, September or October, when Kerr came down here. We had a conversation down at 163 Scripps [Institution of Oceanography].

164 RINGROSE: It was kind of about November that things really started to move.

165 GALBRAITH: Well, the regents appointed me in November. Yeah, November—the regents 166 meeting.

167 RINGROSE: Now, it seems to me looking at the paper that there was an enormous 168 administrative job down here because there hadn't been much administrative building on the 169 campus. It was a new campus and really it had only three years with a chancellor and still quite 170 small.

171 GALBRAITH: That's right.

172 RINGROSE: Would you talk about how you developed the administrative structures down
173 here?

174 GALBRAITH: Or how I didn't develop the administrative structures. We had very few people on 175 the top rung available. Bob Biron, as you know, was appointed at the same time I was as vice 176 chancellor. I didn't appoint Bob Biron, Kerr appointed Bob Biron.

177 RINGROSE: And he was a local person.

178 GALBRAITH: He was a local person, and he was very active in promoting the authorization of 179 this campus. He was very actively involved with the citizens groups, and he had experience as a 180 businessman, vice president of, oh what was the name of it... General Atomics.

181 RINGROSE: Yeah.

182 GALBRAITH: Before that, that airplane firm down in a down in...

183 RINGROSE: Was it Lockheed?

184 GALBRAITH: Not Lockheed.

185 RINGROSE: Yes, we both know what we are talking about, we'll sort that out.

186 GALBRAITH: Anyway, Bob Biron was vice chancellor. There was no other vice chancellor with 187 no vice chancellor for academic affairs. And that was the slot which I felt was the most important
188 to fill because I was acting as, in my early months, as chancellor and as vice chancellor, 189 involving such things as approving or disapproving recommendations for appointments which 190 takes a lot of time. There were a lot of appointments being made at that time. As I indicated to 191 you, I did make an effort to get one of the stalwarts from this campus, that is vice chancellor,
192 and I failed. Jim Arnold was my first choice, and he had the good sense to say no.

193 RINGROSE: He would have been a good V.C.

194 GALBRAITH: Anyway, eventually Carl Eckart became vice chancellor for academic affairs, and 195 I sought to expand the academic area of administration by appointing [Robert D.] Tschirgi, to be 196 vice chancellor for planning. This would be primarily leading to the college system, how we 197 would develop that. And eventually Fred [Frederick T.] Wall, who was up in Santa Barbara as

198 the graduate dean, I selected to be, that is with the advice of the faculty committee, to be the 199 vice chancellor for graduate studies and research. It would be a powerful job and these people
200 were approved in March 1966. They would have been approved in February if it hadn't been for 201 the fact that I had resigned at that time. So, they were approved February not March of 1966, 202 and that was the top administration for the duration of my tenure.

203 RINGROSE: Now who was managing the money under York, how was that handled?

204 GALBRAITH: Jack, Jack Clark, who went off to Cal Arts was in charge of that, also Herman
205 Johnson. But Jack Clark was primarily the person that was doing the control of the money.
206 Herman Johnson was also involved in the business area, and he became an assistant 207 essentially to Biron.

208 RINGROSE: That was a fairly new change. Was not, one of the things that Revelle talks about 209 is the problems, of when he was running the institute of trying to manage the money essentially
210 out of UCLA. His money was handled up there, and it was very difficult so that, then that shift
211 must have been made with York...

212 GALBRAITH: Yes, right. We had a pretty inadequate financial structure to control the finances.
213 But Biron shaped that up enough. Biron's a controversial character.

214 RINGROSE: Yes, it was a very unusual appointment, wasn't it?

215 GALBRAITH: Well, it was bound to be fraught with difficulties because Biron's view on the 216 universities and the faculty's view on the universities were directly opposed. And the faculty 217 detested Biron.

218 RINGROSE: Now this was more than, I know he was very conservative politically, but this was 219 more than just his political conservatism? Did this have to do with what the university is all 220 about?

221 GALBRAITH: Well yes, I'm speaking about his view, he was certainly not sympathetic to the 222 manifestations of unrest around here.

223 RINGROSE: But I'm trying to pin this down a little bit more. Perhaps he felt the purpose of the 224 university is oriented toward educating undergraduates or, or...?

225 GALBRAITH: Well, I don't think he thought that much in those terms.

226 RINGROSE: I'm trying to see a little more specifically where the conflicts might have been.

227 GALBRAITH: He came in at the time that faculty, depending on your point of view, were at their 228 best or at their worst. I regard the faculty who were the noisy element as being highly 229 irresponsible people, who took no risks whatsoever and involved the campus in difficulties with 230 the community which I thought were unnecessary. That may make me appear to be a 231 conservative, which I suppose in a way I am. But here I was as the Chancellor defending these

232 people before the community, and the community's regarding me as the person who was setting
233 the tone of the campus. It's a very interesting position to be in if I may use a passive adjective.
234 Although some of the things they did were really not worthy of a mature person. And I don't 235 have to quit to tell you that...

236 RINGROSE: No, no those...

237 GALBRAITH: ...some of these people are still around.

238 RINGROSE: And I think for some of them there's a certain embarrassment about it at this 239 point.

240 GALBRAITH: They don't like to talk about it.

241 RINGROSE: They don't like to talk about it. No. But those were times when I think lots of 242 people got very, very tied up in the moralities of things.

243 GALBRAITH: When I left in 1968, I got quite a few over the four years I was here, quite a few 244 anonymous communications and there was one anonymous postcard which said something to 245 the effect, "Three terrible things happened in nineteen hundred and seventeen: the United 246 States entered World War I, the communist revolution broke out, and you were born." You can 247 read an awful lot into that, sick hate. But anyway, now the University is regarded with great 248 respect by the community. There are very few people who seem anti-university point of view.
249 It's remarkable how that has changed.

250 RINGROSE: It is. And I think that's a fairly recent change I think when we came out here in the 251 early seventies you still felt a lot of hostility among a certain kind of old guard, about the 252 university and we've been watching that change. It's been good to see. You said that you
253 developed camp Matthews as a staging area for the new colleges. I'd like you to talk about that 254 and about the college system and how you worked that out because it's a very complex
255 structure. It would have been a lot easier, I'm sure, to develop UCSD in a conventional manner, 256 wouldn't it?

257 GALBRAITH: To develop UCSD in a conventional manner...

258 RINGROSE: Well, the way Irvine...

259 GALBRAITH: ...would have made it very difficult to have the college system working very well.
260 Because in the conventional manner you get a building and then you get another building.
261 There's a spacing of years. What Matthews represented to me and to Harry Wellman, who had 262 a great deal to do with this, was an opportunity to have students housed and going to class in 263 these ex-Marine Corp barracks at a minimal cost. Renovation of camp Matthews was nothing 264 like what it would take to build a building. And we provided residential accommodations, you've 265 seen these wooden housing units down there. The idea was that with these students being in 266 Matthews for three year or so we would have a basis for building a college all at one time. A 267 college should have a unity, it should be relating to the fact that it has a distinctive identity which

268 is rather difficult to do if you are building a building at a time. Now you might say that Revelle
269 college has a distinctive character, we'll never build another Revelle college.

270 RINGROSE: In fact, it was built essentially all at one time.

271 GALBRAITH: Yes, right. So that's the basis on which the state authorized us to renovate 272 Matthews. The state recognized that it was a good deal. Whoever the state was at that time.
273 The director of finance, that was the [Gov. Edmund G.] Brown administration at the time of the 274 beginning and they were perhaps more supportive than Brown's successor. I've forgotten who 275 he was. Ah, the actor, I guess. Anyway, that was, that was a step and that's how Muir got built 276 as a unit through the fact that we had these students in Matthews for that period of time. And 277 the idea was Third college was going to be the same way, and it has worked. There were a lot
278 of people at UCSD who thought that it was, that the best thing to do with Matthews was to 279 demolish it, that it was an eyesore. I think what happened turned out to be quite attractive. A lot
280 of people over in Matthews would rather be there than any of these big cement buildings.

281 RINGROSE: Do you think it's going to continue to be used as a staging area in that way or that 282 it's just going to be Warren college forever with patches on it?

283 GALBRAITH: Well, the agreement no longer holds with the freeze on capital money. That 284 changed the whole character of the thing, no longer getting these large amounts for a college.
285 So, I hope that it's not going to be the Warren campus indefinitely. I hope it's going to be Warren
286 elsewhere and I hope they'll go back to calling it Matthews. Matthews represents the link with 287 the occupants before, Warren doesn't mean a thing as far as that area is concerned.

288 RINGROSE: And you also were responsible for developing a number of departments... you 289 worked on some.

290 GALBRAITH: I was responsible for developing some departments and John Stewart was 291 responsible for developing others. The history department was nonexistent, there was no
292 historian on campus. There was a committee meeting which was seeking a chairman for the 293 history department. The committee in my opinion committed a capital crime by the way it
294 proceeded. It sent out broadcasts around the country asking people if they would be interested 295 in being chairman of the history department at UCSD. A lot of my friends were invited to 296 respond. And a lot of these people took the letter and went to the administration and said, "Here
297 I am an author," which was not true but that's what they did. And this spread around the country
298 that UCSD was asking all these people to be chairman and it made it a very, very difficult task to 299 find anybody who would take it. UCSD was just regarded as a nothing and a no prospect
300 campus for a historian. We didn't have library resources and what would be the reason to go
301 down aside from getting money for it. There are people who will do that, but generally speaking 302 the best are going to ask questions beyond what's the salary.

303 RINGROSE: But you are absolutely right, I mean it was just in the profession it was seen as a 304 bit of a joke, what was going on out here.

305 GALBRAITH: So that carried over, into the time I was here. We didn't have a chairman as I
306 mentioned to you on those previous occasions. We had three— We had two people that had 307 been appointed, neither of whom should have been chairman for different reasons. Geoffrey 308 Barraclough was the first appointment, an outstanding historian. And Gabe [Gabriel] Jackson.
309 Gabe was an excellent historian, but he wasn't the chairman type. We wanted Leftonsta Rianos 310 as the third and for reasons which were not entirely clear, but which involved his disinclination to 311 come down because of the antipathy for a relative I believe, in the San Diego area.

312 RINGROSE: He's mentioned that there really were personal reasons of that sort for their not 313 making the move at that time.

314 GALBRAITH: But he might possibly have been a chairman, I don't know. But nevertheless, he 315 decided to stay at Northwestern.

316 RINGROSE: And his wife had a career at Northwestern.

317 GALBRAITH: Yes, that's right. So, throughout the period up to '68 we had people essentially
318 rotating as acting chairman, though they did quite call it that. [Samuel] Baron was chairman for a
319 year or so, Gabe took the chairmanship about the time that you came in, before [Ramon] Ruiz.

320 RINGROSE: Ruiz was chairman when we came in.

321 GALBRAITH: Ok. Then before him then I think Jackson was chairman for a while.

322 RINGROSE: I know that he was chairman, I'm not absolutely sure what the chronology was 323 before we came.

324 GALBRAITH: Anyway, there was no chairman who had the attributes of what a chairman
325 should be prior to Ruiz.

326 RINGROSE: Now did you, did you personally select any of these people or...

327 GALBRAITH: I personally selected Barraclough and Jackson. And these two then proceeded to 328 make a search for other people and they got involved with [Guillermo] Céspedes' appointment.
329 Of course, I had to approve that they initially came from Jackson and Barraclough, Céspedes, 330 [Stanley A.] Chodorow.

331 GALBRAITH: That was a little later, a little later. In the first group it was Céspedes and Baron
332 and Curtis Wilson who was at St. John's in New Mexico. Those were the initial and Chodorow
333 came in later and also Franz Nauen. These were all involved with people who had come into the 334 history department, I didn't interfere with the history department. It was not my job to sit there in 335 department meetings and say I think you should do this or do that. It was not an entirely 336 satisfactory situation and I think that certainly transformed. Mike Parrish by the way was 337 appointed in '68 that was the last year I was here I was appointed and who else.

338 RINGROSE: I think [Robert C.] Ritchie came at that point.

339 GALBRAITH: I'm not sure about Ritchie, Harry Scheiber, I think maybe.

340 RINGROSE: Might have been, might have been the year after...

341 GALBRAITH: Yes, I think it was after.

342 RINGROSE: ...you were here.

343 GALBRAITH: But they were, they came in about that time. But Harry was appointed and came 344 here in '68. And maybe Scheiber, was here. I think he was here.

345 RINGROSE: But we were talking earlier about the department and the fact that it was slow 346 developing as a department.

347 GALBRAITH: Well, there were a variety of reasons for that. Perhaps it would have been better 348 to start out with a larger component of younger people.

349 RINGROSE: But that wasn't the UCSD pattern.

350 GALBRAITH: No, it wasn't, right. Well, that was the first department then the other departments
351 did have chairmen from the beginning. We didn't have that problem of that albatross around our 352 neck with regard to anthropology, Mel [Melford E.] Spiro became the chairman. I think he's 353 created an outstanding department. I believe it's one of the best of the humanities. And Joe
354 Gusfield was recommended by Fred Wall who had known him at the University of Illinois. And I
355 think he came, he had very good credentials too. I don't know very much about sociology.
356 Sociology has its own characteristics. I think it's a respectable department...

357 RINGROSE: Now, was there a plan to the order in which you started departments like this?
358 I've never been sure of that.

359 GALBRAITH: That had to do perhaps with my sense of priorities. We had in mind a political 360 science department, but I didn't think it had the same degree of urgency as a history department
361 or anthropology or sociology department. Political science is a field that touches history in a way
362 I suppose. We had in mind the next chairman to be from political science.

363 RINGROSE: Ah...

364 GALBRAITH: It was somebody, I think Falk from Princeton was the one that the faculty had 365 recommended. We got Richard Falk.

366 RINGROSE: So, this was a matter of thinking in terms of undergraduate needs?

367 GALBRAITH: Yes.

368 RINGROSE: Essentially developing an undergraduate curriculum and these were the courses
369 you needed to staff.

370 GALBRAITH: With people with the same characteristics as scholars though that we had been 371 looking for in the first place. We were not looking for a person primarily in terms of his 372 undergraduate teaching ability. We were looking for a person with considerable ability
373 demonstrated by his research to be a member of these departments. And I think we have done 374 that over the years and still do.

375 RINGROSE: And your choice of departments, you are making very conservative departments.
376 You're starting or choices of departments, you're starting your very traditional, I mean old line, 377 philosophy...

378 GALBRAITH: Irvine did not do that. And I think that the fact that they didn't do it was 379 responsible for a real mess on the Irvine campus.

380 RINGROSE: Oh really? I don't know anything about that.

381 GALBRAITH: They appointed, I think Ivan Enderoc would admit this, I've forgotten the man's 382 name, he wanted to have a school of social science. Taking everything. And his view of social 383 science was going to be... his personal view was going to infuse that whole school. It didn't work
384 and he went off to Stanford and he's up there now. I don't think he created anything up there, 385 he's working with the political science department. You can make... you can throw dice, of 386 course and develop another institution, it's going to be a department. Whatever you want to call 387 it. That's the way our university is structured. The efforts that have been made to break away 388 from that departmental structure, have uniformly lasted about two to three years and then they 389 succumb. Like Joe, Joe what's his name? I've forgotten his name. Who had us develop an 390 integrated program across the departmental lines up at Berkeley? Mustine did one up at 391 Berkeley. But they don't last.

392 RINGROSE: That's true and everyone notices. Many people have remarked about that where 393 this campus is concerned, that interdisciplinary programs just don't seem to thrive down here.
394 And everyone pays lip-service to the fact that we ought to have them. That there is something 395 wrong with us if we don't have more interdisciplinary programs.

396 GALBRAITH: Well, they do perform a good function if the people are willing to work at it and 397 recognize that it may not be to their academic interest in shaking things up for a while.

398 RINGROSE: Now some people see this as related to the college structure and I'm wondering if 399 you'd comment on that. They suggest that the original college plan was designed to foster
400 interdisciplinary work within colleges.

401 GALBRAITH: The original plan for first college, for Revelle college, envisaged a great tight
402 curriculum which was across departmental lines. The humanities program was involved from the 403 beginning and the integration of humanities and science which was envisaged was in the 404 original plan. And the options of students were very, very restricted. And the linguistics
405 programs, I think they had to learn to speak the language, that was very ambitious. That didn't 406 really reflect the character of undergraduates that we were getting even in the first instances.

407 This place was a real grind to the students if you read the comments of that first freshmen class.
408 The fact that they are just working all the time to stay afloat.

409 RINGROSE: Jim Arnold makes some marvelous comments in the interview I did with him
410 about this. You know they loved them to death, they were so excited to finally have students.
411 And have such bright students, that they just kind of were all over them.

412 GALBRAITH: Well, the students developed neurological problems in the process by being 413 loved to death. Well, the colleges were supposed to do that, yes. Whether they are doing it is a
414 matter of argument. Obviously, the Muir program is somewhat different from the Revelle
415 program. And it is primarily, I think it would be fair to say, primarily under the lower division
416 programs which show distinctive identity. Muir's lower division is somewhat different from 417 Revelle's. Third is different from fourth. Maybe that's the way it is but departments do crib and 418 confine options.

419 RINGROSE: Well, one of the things that several people have observed, and I'm curious to see
420 what you think about this, is that it seems that initially, well let me back up a minute. A faculty
421 will group itself into clusters, in one way or another within an institution. And the original hope
422 was that the faculty would group itself into clusters by college. And yet...

423 GALBRAITH: It was a forlorn hope. That no one...

424 RINGROSE: It was a forlorn... and yet ultimately it has done what happens everywhere else
425 the faculty has grouped itself by discipline. And several people have speculated about why this 426 should be so and there are the obvious reasons that your very existence in the profession
427 almost depends on the fact that you...

428 GALBRAITH: Your career is dependent on what your colleagues in your discipline think of you.

429 RINGROSE: As opposed to someone in literature who has similar interest but never could, so
430 write you a letter. And this seems to be the answer that everyone comes down to and I, and I
431 wondered if you would agree with this or have some other ideas about why we have ultimately 432 evolved in this very traditional direction.

433 GALBRAITH: The people who came into universities in the sixties were, I think, probably the 434 most spoiled generation of academics. And certainly, in living memory. They were courted by 435 universities, offered inducements financially and the competition was as great as the 436 competition for the really top students. More so maybe. And they came to the university feeling
437 that they were doing the university a favor. And I'm not speaking just about here, I'm speaking
438 generally. I know from what I've seen of other campuses that it's the same way. There was no
439 particular allegiance to the university. The allegiance was to self and self-writ-large was the 440 department.

441 RINGROSE: And the profession.

442 GALBRAITH: It wasn't always that way. There were faculty members in the previous era who 443 had different sets, of course, of priorities, but obviously wanted to advance themselves. But 444 there was a feeling of commitment to the institution. It was a privilege for them to be in the 445 institution, so forth and so on. There was a great deal more of this back and forth among 446 departments then, in my opinion, than there has been since the sixties despite these efforts. I
447 can't remember Joe's last name. He really put a tremendous amount of effort into that college of 448 his. But the departments' evaluations of these people were affected adversely by their being 449 involved in this kind of... You can't keep people very long under these circumstances. They 450 resign. So, it is partly a matter of a structure, or maybe it's the inertia, I don't know, that works 451 with the whole whatever the force is against interdisciplinary activity.

452 RINGROSE: Well, it is certainly true that the techniques for evaluating faculty have changed
453 over the years.

454 GALBRAITH: Yes, that's right.

455 RINGROSE: And this is something administrations have bought into, too.

456 GALBRAITH: Administrations have compounded the felony. Administrators complain that the 457 faculty don't show much inclination to deal with freshmen undergraduates, that they want to 458 concentrate on research and graduate students. Well, that's the monster that our Frankenstein
459 produced. The administration that always complains about all these things is still busy bringing 460 in people with precisely the characteristics they deplore.

461 RINGROSE: If they are going to take the books and weight them on a scale...

462 GALBRAITH: Exactly.

463 RINGROSE: ...people are going to try to write more books to put on the scale.

464 GALBRAITH: That's right, that's what they help to create.

465 RINGROSE: One of the things that went on during your time as chancellor that you didn't
466 discuss in the UCLA interview and that I think is very interesting has to do with the negotiations
467 for the purchase of Black Farms property. I am only beginning to get anywhere near the bottom 468 of everything that was going on. Black Farms. The relationship between Mr. Black and [Edwin 469 W.] Pauley, Regent Pauley. The problems with John Stull. Then there was the later investigation
470 that Reagan made into the price that was paid for the property. Someone named Tom Gibson
471 supposedly came down and looked into all of that. And it is very clear that as chancellor this 472 must have been very difficult to deal with and a lot of it was aimed at you and reflected the 473 times. But what was really going on there?

474 GALBRAITH: Ah, I can't say very much in terms of direct knowledge. It isn't that I'm disinclined
475 to say anything, but it is a fact that I did not have direct knowledge. In the division of authority, 476 well of course the regents are always the ultimate authority, but in particular the regents have 477 jealously kept to themselves the matter of real estate. This is not, it is not now and was not...

[END PART ONE, BEGIN PART TWO]

478 RINGROSE: So, chancellors...

479 GALBRAITH: Chancellors had no authority whatsoever in the real estate area, acquisitions real 480 estate. That is the province of the regents and of the Regents' Committee in particular. That's 481 the appropriate committee and the treasurer working for these regents. I met Bill Black, Senior,
482 only once. We, Bob Biron, and I went down to see him before the negotiations started.

483 RINGROSE: Now there—

484 GALBRAITH: We did that on our own. That was not authorized by the regents, and we could 485 not make any deals with Bill Black, and he recognized that.

486 RINGROSE: There had been interest in the property to predate your time as chancellor.

487 GALBRAITH: Oh, yes. And Mark Herd told me that the university freely was very much 488 interested in this property as an equivalent of the Irvine inclusion area.

489 RINGROSE: Right.

490 GALBRAITH: Irvine, as you know, has an inclusion area which can be used for different 491 purposes than strictly academic. If they wanted to build faculty housing, they could do that. The 492 Black Farms or the La Jolla Farms offered a very desirable area that could be developed for 493 purposes which were not quite the same as those on campus. There are a lot of vacant lots,
494 there were some beautiful properties; but the knoll particularly is probably one of the best
495 properties in Southern California, certainly the best undeveloped property. I hope it stays
496 undeveloped. But anyway, Bob Hammond negotiated with Black and the arrangements that 497 were made were not referred to us at all. We had no knowledge whatsoever of the details, of the 498 negotiation price or any such thing. Now you mentioned John Stull, this brings John Stull into 499 the picture. John Stull was friendly prior to the Black Farms purchase. He was friendly up till the 500 news came out of the intending closure of the deal. John Stull called me from the airport. He 501 was very irate, and he wanted details on what had taken place. I said 'Well, why don't you come
502 out and we'll have a drink and talk about this.' This was when I was living on Green Tree Lane
503 before the University Housing. He came out and he asked me questions about what does this 504 involve in terms of the protection of the residents and the risk as we go down the line, price of 505 this and that. I said I didn't know. And his conclusion was that I was stonewalling. So, this is the 506 case where the chancellor takes the heat.

507 RINGROSE: And you could understand his thinking, you ought to know, and I can also, given 508 how the regents operate understanding you're not knowing.

509 GALBRAITH: I can understand that. Sure, anyway. I told the regents that they were going to 510 get quite a lot of negative effect from all this. Not just the residents would be irate, a lot of other 511 people would be irate. And that was dismissed out of hand. I remember Ed Carter saying it was 512 ridiculous. What I was saying was you'd better try to carry on a campaign to explain these things

513 to people to the best of your ability. They didn't do it. But we tried to move into the matter in 514 terms of getting information to the residents. We talked; our administration talked to the 515 residents. But without any authority to do anything beyond just saying well we'll refer this up to 516 the regents.

517 RINGROSE: Now at this point about perhaps a fifth of the properties had been sold. Right?
518 The Farms area.

519 GALBRAITH: About that I'll bet.

520 RINGROSE: And it was presumably covenanted property and there was the use of the horse 521 track and...

522 GALBRAITH: Well, that's what the residents thought. That's what the residents thought.

523 RINGROSE: ...and the private beach and so on.

524 GALBRAITH: That was in the brochure, but it wasn't in the legal document by which the person 525 acquired the property.

526 RINGROSE: I see. Ok.

527 GALBRAITH: That's a small detail. I mean they had no rights whatsoever. The person that they 528 should have been focusing their attention on was Bill Black Sr.

529 RINGROSE: Bill Black, yes.

530 GALBRAITH: Who essentially sold them out. He didn't carry through the promises that were 531 being made in the brochure which attracted these people.

532 RINGROSE: Because I've seen that brochure and it's very clear...

533 GALBRAITH: Yes, oh it is.

534 RINGROSE: ...exactly what they thought they were getting.

535 GALBRAITH: But the document, the transfer doesn't have any such records. That wasn't just 536 accidental.

537 RINGROSE: But he probably couldn't have gotten away with selling that property to anything
538 but some kind of a big state institution.

539 GALBRAITH: Well, I think that's probably right. Not on my estimate. And he wanted money
540 then. Of course, it was made impossible for his son to live very well. That's a lot of money there.
541 I think I mentioned to you that as far as the house was concerned, which the chancellor
542 occupies, we could have had it for nothing.

543 RINGROSE: Now when, how did you learn this?

544 GALBRAITH: Clark Kerr informed me, I think it was Clark Kerr, that Black who was a good
545 friend of Ed Pauley, had offered the house and the contents to the university. And Pauley for 546 reasons that remain obscure did not refer this to the full Board of Regents.

547 RINGROSE: Would this have been part of the land deal? Or a separate... this was a separate 548 thing.

549 GALBRAITH: No, it was separate. It was before the land deal. It was strictly the house that was 550 involved. Now when the land deal went through the valuation of that house raised a lot of anger.
551 I forgot what it was valued at but five acres and so forth and so on. It was up in the millions
552 somewhere. And people were saying they are buying a house for the chancellor. He's going to 553 live in oriental splendor up there. Of course, no chancellor has ever lived there, or any interest.
554 Mind you, I don't like the house particularly. But that became a symbol of the extravagance of 555 the university. And of course, that relates in a way to these workmen who were building the 556 mailbox with the representation of the library on top. That was John Stull's supporter who was 557 taking the pictures of this sort of thing. They were out to do anything they could to embarrass
558 the university. Now how do you embarrass the university? You embarrass the university
559 representative on the spot. You don't embarrass the regents.

560 RINGROSE: Now Stull, you said that Stull really made a very sudden turnaround and his...

561 GALBRAITH: Oh yes.

562 RINGROSE: ...attitudes toward the university. And it has looked to me as though he was 563 working on behalf of real estate interests that perhaps his arguments involved taking real estate
564 off the tax rolls. And well, what do you think his real motives were?

565 GALBRAITH: I think his dominant motive was peak resentment, anger bordering on fury that he 566 had not been informed. This was his area and he felt that he should have been informed. And 567 his espousal of the rights of the residents was politically in his interest. And his denunciations of 568 the subversive activities, so called on campuses, was also in his interest. Now he hadn't been 569 doing that prior to the Black Farms negotiations being completed.

570 RINGROSE: I never really put it all together, but it's right after that he starts watching the flags 571 go up and down the flag poles and all of that.

572 GALBRAITH: Oh, that's right.

573 RINGROSE: And all of that kind of business that there is a real harassment that starts going 574 on.

575 GALBRAITH: The whole San Diego delegation prior to that time had been supportive of the 576 university despite the activities on this campus because it was our university, San Diego's
577 university. And they wanted it to grow and prosper. In the ways that they thought proper. Pete

578 Wilson, Clair Burgener, the whole delegation, Jack Schrade who is a neanderthal. Right. Never 579 criticized the university, in fact, he didn't even after the Black Farms matter. He was in the 580 Senate. And they were, they represented a very strong lobby for the University. Very strong 581 indeed.

582 RINGROSE: Now it is clear there were some fairly important and very vocal people that lived
583 on the Farms at the time.

584 GALBRAITH: Yes.

585 RINGROSE: What did they stand to lose? It seems to me that I saw something about some 586 kind of a right of first refusal written into those contracts if they ever sold their properties. There's 587 something, wasn't there something like that that went on?

588 GALBRAITH: I'm not aware of that, maybe but I don't really know. I don't think so. But 589 nevertheless, they were fearful that the value of their property would be reduced by what the 590 university was going to do. What was the university going to do with this property? How is it
591 going to affect our lifestyle? Well, it's the same issue that's permeated the so-called Black 592 Horse.

593 RINGROSE: Right, I was about to say what we are really saying here is nothing has changed.

594 GALBRAITH: Now I can accept a share of the responsibility because during my last year we 595 worked out a plan for the Black Horse ridings. It wasn't called Black Horse Farm; it was just 596 called the ridings.

597 RINGROSE: The ridings, the stables.

598 GALBRAITH: Yes, right. We had a plan. This was at the time we were thinking very big about 599 theater. And Michael Langham had agreed to be the director of the theater. And a very well-
600 known Chicago architect was selected by the name of Goldberg.

601 RINGROSE: Right.

602 GALBRAITH: And Langham and Goldberg had a love feast working on the great theater which 603 had among its other attributes a very very high price tag. Eventually came out to about seven 604 million, something like that. Maybe a little bit more than seven million. But seven million was 605 worth seven million.

606 RINGROSE: That's a lot for a theater.

607 GALBRAITH: A big. But what we were talking about, prior to that time, was about three million.
608 Robert Peterson supplanted Marion Longster, much to her distress. And justifiably so. And we 609 thought he would be a great fundraiser. After all he had a lot of money himself. And he became 610 part of the threesome. That this great theater, a very large theater much larger than Mandeville 611 actually.

612 RINGROSE: Now I guess it was the plans were written up in major theater magazines and it 613 was...

614 GALBRAITH: Oh yes. There are these plans. They exist. Anyway, we couldn't come anywhere
615 near seven million dollars. And the thing lapsed, but one of the things that spun-off from that 616 was Mandel/Weisse because part of the money that the theater and arts foundation got came 617 from this Zoro Ranch, which was decreed to be an illegal arrangement.

618 RINGROSE: This was the Templeton Foundation properties...

619 GALBRAITH: That's right.

620 RINGROSE: ...which is also an interesting story...

621 GALBRAITH: That involves Bob Peterson too.

622 RINGROSE: ... in itself.

623 GALBRAITH: But anyway, they got that money as part of their component. Somehow the other
624 half of the money dropped out, the original arrangement was that the Theater Arts Foundation
625 would put up a million and a half, which they didn't have. And the University would put up a
626 million and a half from fees. And I don't know how students would have reacted to that. But it
627 would be three million dollars, well we didn't have the three million dollars much less the seven 628 so this was a real fiasco. Well relating to this, that's related to what we were planning for the 629 horse area. We'd have the theater over there and across the highway from the theater there 630 would be a parking building.

631 RINGROSE: Very sensible plan.

632 GALBRAITH: Parking building and we'd have an overpass over to the theater. And then we 633 would have a small shop related to students. Does this sound familiar?

634 RINGROSE: It sounds terribly familiar!

635 GALBRAITH: All shops related to students in that area. We weren't talking about hotel rooms or 636 anything like that. And that was, that never came up to the light because at the time that I left it
637 was still, well a hole had been blown in it by the fact that it didn't have a theater. But it would 638 have been wonderful to have a theater there.

639 RINGROSE: Oh, I'll bet right now the people who live, the neighbors would give anything to 640 have that instead of what they are ultimately going to get.

641 GALBRAITH: Well, they hated it then anyway, they would have hated it if it had been 642 publicized. We never got to the point where the plan was ever formalized. Then Bill McGill came 643 in about that time and the plan essentially, Bill had other preoccupations, and that went by the 644 boards until now, before Dick Atkinson was the beneficiary of the outrage. Did I get off of the 645 subject?

646 RINGROSE: No, no you really didn't, that whole business is very important to the campus
647 community relations. La Jolla is a funny community.

648 GALBRAITH: Is it a community? Is it what they call, what is it, a good address? I suppose there
649 is a community there somewhere. It's mostly refugees, a lot of them are refugees from Texas
650 and various other areas of the country. Community to me connotes an area where people have 651 taken root and are maybe part of the environment rather than having recent associations with 652 other places where they made their money and so forth. La Jolla has a lot of money they say 653 but it doesn't show up very much in terms of what they contribute. There are some exceptions.
654 Cecil Green, of course did contribute very handsomely to Scripps. Naming Cecil Green though 655 where do you go from there, there's not that much money that's being made available. But 656 maybe that will be proved to be wrong with our thirty million. I don't know how that's going.

657 RINGROSE: Earlier, you mentioned that Regent Pauley didn't take the offer of the house to 658 the regents.

659 GALBRAITH: That's right.

660 RINGROSE: And Pauley is...

661 GALBRAITH: It's hard to believe but that seems to be it.

662 RINGROSE: Pauley is a very enigmatic figure in the whole founding of UCSD. He was so
663 opposed to it. It comes up again and again. And I wondered if you had any comments you 664 wanted to make about that.

665 GALBRAITH: Pauley was in the tradition of the dominant chair or chairman of the regents. He 666 succeeded another individual who dominated the regents. He was the lawyer of the first...

667 RINGROSE: Yes, I can't remember his name either.

668 GALBRAITH: ...involved with loyalty...

669 RINGROSE: Right.

670 GALBRAITH: Anyway...

671 RINGROSE: It's not on the top of my brain right now.

672 GALBRAITH: Anyway, he was that kind of a Regent. And when he passed off the regents, 673 Pauley became the power. Looking at Pauley, at the time that I observed Pauley, I wondered 674 how he had all of that power. The man seemed to be on his last legs. He very rarely had much 675 to say. He came in obviously a crippled individual, whatever it was that he had wrong with him.
676 And you thought, well, this man doesn't have much time to live. Where is all of this energy

677 coming from? Well apparently, it was there. It's remarkable that he was able to exercise such 678 influence over people who were themselves very strong-minded individuals. These were not just 679 cream puffs that were sitting around. They were powerful people. Buff Chandler was not an 680 insignificant personality, she was a powerhouse.

681 RINGROSE: She tended to side with him on a lot of issues.

682 GALBRAITH: Yes, that's part of the problem, I guess. That Ed Carter, Buffy Chandler, the Los 683 Angeles regents, represented a caucus essentially which worked on the UCLA issues.

684 RINGROSE: You make the comment in your interview for UCLA that Chancellor [Franklin]
685 Murphy seems to have been able to tap into that.

686 GALBRAITH: He had that power base. We had nothing. By the way, DeWitt Higgs was 687 admirable, he was not a San Diego Regent. He was a University Regent. But that wasn't the 688 way the UCLA people played it. The Los Angeles component backed the nationalism of Murphy.
689 It was a very, very strong combination which Kerr could not resist. They were too much for Kerr.
690 We got our regent as a consequence of this resignation issue. Pat Brown promised that we'd 691 have a San Diego Regent, that was part of the inducement for me to remove my resignation.
692 That one regent of course doesn't really provide much in the way of clout, whoever that regent 693 might be.

694 RINGROSE: Well, Higgs was admirable because he managed to get along with those people.

695 GALBRAITH: Yes.

696 RINGROSE: Which I find truly remarkable.

697 GALBRAITH: Yes, he was a very good Regent. But we don't have a plaque...

698 RINGROSE: Well, I, leaving Regent Pauley aside, you know everything I've read about 699 Regent Chandler inclines me to feel like she is a good person.

700 GALBRAITH: She is. But she's also a person who when she has something in mind is single-
701 minded, forceful and works for the good. At the same time, she is intolerant of anybody getting 702 in her way. She is a "madam theater" in Los Angeles. She twisted arms and they got lots of 703 money from people because of Buff Chandler's importuning is not quite it, it's not strong
704 enough. They were putting the arm on people.

705 RINGROSE: Now she... Was she supportive of the theater effort down here?

706 GALBRAITH: Yes.

707 RINGROSE: She was.

708 GALBRAITH: But not in terms of money.

709 RINGROSE: But not supportive enough.

710 GALBRAITH: We tried to get Norton Simon to get interested in the theater. And we were going 711 to put Gregory Peck on, and Norton Simon made it clear that he didn't want anything to do with 712 the theater. I thought, you know, that he was so much of an ego maniac that he'd love to have a 713 theater named for him.

714 RINGROSE: Well, the impression that I get, that I got talking to other people about the whole
715 theater issue was that the community down here was not really united about the style of theater 716 they wanted.

717 GALBRAITH: Oh, there's the Old Globe. The Old Globe regarded this theater as menace.

718 RINGROSE: Well but there was also a kind of community campus split about what kind of a 719 theater this would be.

720 GALBRAITH: Yeah, but I didn't see that manifestation so much as the Old Globe feelings of 721 concern. Greg Noll and company came out on several occasions and voiced their fears. This 722 theater was going to be doing Shakespeare, it would be drawing away from the Old Globe and I
723 can understand its point of view. Our response to that it was going to make both better. The 724 elements, they work together actually. I think probably that would have been the case. But the 725 Old Globe constituency, they had a very strong constituency, were not supportive of the 726 University's ideas for the theater. That was one of the factors in the inability to raise funds 727 because these people were not just passive, they were negative.

728 RINGROSE: Well, it's a shame, that was a really fine opportunity that got away...

729 GALBRAITH: Yes, that's right.

730 RINGROSE: Almost killed by an excess of enthusiasm. At least that's the impression I get 731 when I read some of the other things that people have said about it.

732 GALBRAITH: That's right the enthusiasm was not matched by the resources.

733 RINGROSE: Now at the time you were Chancellor the community plan was also starting to 734 develop and certainly it was not the community plan that we have now. But initially the hope was 735 that some kind of an integrated plan for this area could be developed, and we all know that's 736 pretty much gone by the boards. I'm curious to know where things were when you were 737 Chancellor and, and what you envisioned for this area. What people had hoped to do here.

738 GALBRAITH: The original community plan involved a development of industries, light
739 industries, non-smokestack industries. High technology industries which would relate to the 740 University's eminence in the scientific field. That's still of course involved. It also involved the 741 University having, if not a veto, a right-of-participation in changes that would be made in the 742 plan. The original plan had as part of it the development of what is now called the La Jolla
743 Village as a place which would relate to the University. Residential apartments which would be

744 within the means of the faculty and students. That was still the way it was in the sixties. There
745 was a golden triangle that was not in the picture at all at that particular time. Somewhere this 746 original agreement was ignored or broken, whatever you want to call it, by the city which was 747 subject to very strong pressures from the developers. My impression is that the city ignored
748 protest from either or both the chancellor and the faculty. The faculty committee was supposed 749 to be overseeing this and I know that they did protest. But that wasn't considered, apparently,
750 seriously by the city. But that was something which was not part of the sixties, as far as I know,
751 especially in 1968. There was a very close liaison between us and UCSD and the mayor and 752 the city manager.

753 RINGROSE: My impression is that it was continued through the McGill administration so I
754 think this must have pretty much fallen apart on Chancellor McElroy. Though one could suggest 755 that it may have been related to the loss of prestige that the University suffered in the early 756 seventies and the very late sixties.

757 GALBRAITH: We didn't have the image that we had before. But anyway, they were still 758 cooperating in the sixties at a time when our publicity wasn't that great. I have high regard for 759 Mayor [Frank] Curran, who I think has been rather maligned, he wasn't a particularly impressive 760 individual physically, or he didn't make eloquent speeches. He did recognize the obligation of 761 the city to honor its agreement with the University to have us as part of the decision-making 762 process. So did Walter Hahn who was the city manager. Incidentally, his name, his last name, is 763 the same as that of the developer, Ernest Hahn, the developer.

764 RINGROSE: Right, right.

765 GALBRAITH: Very different people.

766 RINGROSE: Very different people. I also get the impression that in about the late sixties there 767 were pieces of this area that were picked up by some large developers who had a fair amount of 768 outside funding and clout.

769 GALBRAITH: Yes, I think that's true. There was a, I'm trying to remember the...

770 RINGROSE: Well, there's a big Chicago developer that tries to move in. There's a lot of 771 discussion about that.

772 GALBRAITH: But I don't think that the plan had been changed in the sixties.

773 RINGROSE: No, they held out against this particular, this particular one.

774 GALBRAITH: I think we still had access to the people in charge, of course, with Pete Wilson, I
775 think. When did Pete become mayor? About, it was after I left, I think. It had been the election
776 with Butler and Wilson. I forget when it was, maybe 1970 or something like that. But peak
777 developers, if they were in the picture, weren't getting what they wanted. They were trying to 778 remember the half Chinese individual who was a developer. What was his name? He was half 779 Chinese, and he had a Spanish name so he must have been half Chinese and half...

780 RINGROSE: This would have been in the late sixties.

781 GALBRAITH: Yeah, I'm trying to remember, it wasn't Blanco, it was something like that. There
782 were two people who were involved, one of whom was the innocent one of whom was the black 783 head. You could look it up. It was an amazing scandal.

784 RINGROSE: Yes, I'll have to dig that out.

785 GALBRAITH: They had ambitions in this area. One of them went bankrupt.

786 RINGROSE: Hum, OK.

787 GALBRAITH: But they were pretty small potatoes by comparison with some of the developers
788 moving in. The city council perhaps was a different kind of city council from what we have.

789 RINGROSE: Well, the faculty members I have talked to who served on the community
790 planning committee, funny you know I've asked them, you know, what kind of clout they thought 791 they had. And it's as though when the committee was first set up, and the community and the 792 campus began working together, these people felt as though they were listened to and even 793 though the University didn't own this land, that there really was a serious commitment to rational
794 development. And you can just hear their frustration as they talk about how things developed 795 over the years.

796 GALBRAITH: Well, the faculty committee, in itself, didn't have a lot of, to use that much
797 overused word, a lot of clout. Faculty committees in the sixties, they formed faculty committees 798 for a variety of purposes, including amusingly enough, promoting close relations with the 799 community. But it's something of the nature, we have met the enemy and they are us. The 800 enemy was the faculty as far as they were concerned and this faculty committee was talking
801 about how we can promote a close relationship with the community, when the faculty as a whole
802 showed no interest whatsoever in involvement with the community. Very few faculty members
803 were involved in any civic activities leaving aside the matter of politics. They just didn't involve 804 themselves.

805 RINGROSE: Do you think this is generally characteristic of faculty members or just the group
806 here?

807 GALBRAITH: It probably is different where they involved themselves with their peers and their 808 preoccupations aren't with their own particular community divorced. And of course, there is no
809 greater contrast than between this University and La Jolla. I guess Westwood would be similar,
810 except that Westwood isn't really that quite the same thing. Westwood and Bel Aire are not 811 quite the same as La Jolla.

812 RINGROSE: You couldn't find a more conservative community than La Jolla.

813 GALBRAITH: Oh, it is a tremendous contrast.

814 RINGROSE: And ah...

815 GALBRAITH: It wasn't just anti-Semitism though; anti-Semitism is emphasized a lot. It's a 816 feeling that these people represent a threat, whether they are Jews, Christians, or atheists,
817 represent a threat to the way of life, whatever that may be, of La Jolla.

818 Gabriel Jackson was the object of attention of an outraged neighbor, you'll probably find him in 819 one of the clippings around, who was demanding that something be done about these Jacksons
820 who were dirty and didn't keep up their property and a variety of other things.

821 RINGROSE: Didn't close their garage door.

822 GALBRAITH: All of that kind of thing. It was quite clear what it was all about was that Gabriel
823 Jackson and his wife were academic types. And this woman was obviously of unsound mind
824 any way, that she represents the lunatic fringe. She didn't want these faculty members ruining 825 their property.

826 RINGROSE: Well, and then conversely, in on one of these tapes you'll find one of the senior 827 faculty members saying, "Well we turned this into a pretty good town, the first thing we did was 828 fix up the high school." So, you know there are obviously, there are interests the faculty have 829 and ways in which they are going to impose themselves upon a community, that won't 830 necessarily be welcomed by all parts of the community.

831 GALBRAITH: Well, that's true.

832 RINGROSE: So, who knows, perhaps Regent Pauley was right, that this was a terrible place
833 to put a university. Maybe we should have been stuck way out in the boonies in Mira Mesa 834 somewhere.

835 GALBRAITH: Of course, the option wasn't there really, there's no realistic option. UCLA was 836 put down in a community that developed around UCLA. And Westwood is a creation of UCLA.
837 Not because of UCLA's ideas but because its existence attracted a lot of people regardless of 838 their attitudes toward the university and bought property around there and the developer made a
839 lot of money in the process. Well, we have the same thing here except that La Jolla was there
840 when Westwood was not. And both of them represent a development which is very, very sad 841 since the university did not have the opportunity, maybe it had the opportunity but didn't 842 exercise it, to have a border area which was university oriented, like Berkeley's. A lot of people
843 would say we don't want anything like Berkeley, look what happened there with all of the street
844 people and so forth. But it's an environment that is appropriate for a university and we do not 845 have that immediately right around. We've got La Jolla Farms instead of these shops and so 846 forth.

847 RINGROSE: Well, doesn't part of the problem lie in the conditions of land occupation that are 848 imposed upon the University. I mean we really have a very substantial piece of land here, but 849 we are very limited in what we can do with it.

850 GALBRAITH: That's right the deed prohibits us from doing certain things. If we had unlimited 851 jurisdiction, we could do such things as develop within the university's own area, housing, and 852 shops and so forth. But we can't do it under the conditions of the grant.

853 RINGROSE: And perhaps that's something that there aren't that many universities that are 854 founded from scratch.

855 GALBRAITH: That's true.

856 RINGROSE: And I think that's one lesson that someone can learn for the future in founding a 857 university.

858 GALBRAITH: If they ever have another university founded, I suppose they might learn from our 859 experience.

860 RINGROSE: That it really isn't a matter of owning a very large piece of property, you have to 861 have proper controls over that property so that you can have a large buffer zone that's multiple 862 use. I was hoping we could talk about the Medical School which really is a big can of worms.
863 There are a number of things that we can talk about where the Medical School is concerned. Dr.
864 Kerr made the comment in the interview with him that the budget went from twenty-five to one
865 hundred and twenty-five million dollars and that when he realized that it happened, he was 866 afraid to take it to the regents. I have a feeling you are going to have a lot of things to say about 867 that. Obviously, there was a lot of controversy over the kind of the medical school we were 868 going to have down here. And I've sort of heard discussion from various sides about this and 869 the relationship with the community is also an interesting issue where the med school is 870 concerned. I think I'm just going to turn you loose and see what you want to say about it from 871 your perspective because you really had to take the heat about it as chancellor.

872 GALBRAITH: The Medical School was visualized by faculty members, in particular David 873 Bonner as you know, as being a new type of institution entirely in the matter of functions in 874 medical school. It would have, obviously, the responsibility for doing research, but it was not 875 going to involve people in two categories, the basic sciences and the clinical. They would be 876 integrated. Medicine is a branch of Biology, I think that was [David] Bonner's statement, but he 877 may have put it more eloquently. That's what, essentially, he was talking about. And all of the 878 facilities of the Medical School would be in the area of the campus. The Medical School in turn 879 would be part of the general campus and not, as medical schools tend to be, off by themselves,
880 with their own particular ambience unrelated to the rest of the campus. This was going to be a
881 medical school like no other medical school. Now we were talking earlier about the problems of 882 doing something different. They are immense and they are tremendous when you consider what 883 kind of money these ideas have. These ideas have a tag on them for a very substantial amount
884 of money. At the least, it is a piece of a very substantial amount of money. Now what it involved
885 in the first instance was the attempt of an administration of the medical school without really
886 having any guidelines aside from the Bonner ideas by which they would proceed. Coming up 887 with a translation of these ideas into a plan and a plan which would be costed out at such and 888 such and so on. What would be the basis on which they could make these calculations.

889 Well, in the first place it was quite obvious to a lot of people that the Bonner plan could not
890 survive intact. The delightful dream of the clinicians and the basic scientists I'd better not say lie 891 down together, communing together in blissful harmony was not realistic at all, as was 892 demonstrated by subsequent events. And that a state university which is dependent upon on 893 legislature for funds could expect to get that kind of money, was an unrealistic expectation. All 894 that. Now the emphasis of the Kerr analysis, which incidentally reflects the fact that he wasn't in 895 touch with these things, if he didn't know that the thing had gone from twenty-five to...

[TAPE STOPPED AND RESTARTED]

896 RINGROSE: OK I think we can get going again here.

897 GALBRAITH: Alright, where were we?

898 RINGROSE: The floor polisher has gone around the corner.

899 GALBRAITH: Anyway, the guidelines were not quite clear as to how they were to proceed.
900 There was not an agreement between us and the University-wide Administration as it was then
901 called. And Clint Powell was sadly, he was Kerr's adviser for medical affairs, who in my opinion
902 could have been more helpful in asserting this is the way it's going to be. There wasn't that 903 much of a break with being allied by central administration, but they had an obligation to give 904 the campus some guidance as to how far the campus could go and what they were prepared to 905 give and were not and what they support. There wasn't enough of that. On the other side, our 906 campus really didn't have the machinery to carry out the intentions of the founding father, in this 907 case Bonner and company. Joe Stokes had no experience on the level of deanship of a medical 908 school and a particularly tough job of being the dean of a medical school which had to be built 909 from the bottom.

910 RINGROSE: Had he ever been really intimately involved with any medical school?

911 GALBRAITH: No, no he had not, no.

912 RINGROSE: I didn't realize that.

913 GALBRAITH: He'd been at a medical school, but he was not a top administrator.

914 RINGROSE: I see, ok.

915 GALBRAITH: He was the son of a very distinguished medical man that had been... Well, Joe 916 was presented with a peculiarly difficult job. It would have been daunting to anybody so I'm not 917 attacking Joe as the... I'm saying that we should have appointed somebody with more
918 experience. And you put all of that together and you come up with what looks like a Berkeley, 919 the workings of an awkward squad. They can't seem to make up their mind. That this plan has 920 changed this way and that way and so forth and that is a response to the various pressures that 921 occurred. The nearest the Medical School recruiting topflight people. The one that went back to 922 Harvard, that became disillusioned, what was his name, the heart specialist.

923 RINGROSE: Right.

924 GALBRAITH: And the surgeon, he's still around, what...

925 RINGROSE: I can't come up with it either. I know who you mean.

926 GALBRAITH: You know who these people are that I'm talking about, these were topflight
927 people and they had requirements. So how do you accommodate them? So, plans change as 928 each element comes into the picture and it changes into more and more money. The only 929 guideline which apparently has any significance is the guideline of this campus asserting that 930 we should be able to get as much as UCLA got for its medical school, which the statewide
931 administration found not really something they could sell.

932 RINGROSE: You mean as much as UCLA got totally for its medical school as opposed to a
933 sum that's equal to what UCLA was getting at that time toward big expansion.

934 GALBRAITH: The total picture.

935 RINGROSE: Yes.

936 GALBRAITH: And that was just in view of those who were involved in the university... that was 937 something that couldn't occur. Well, the situation then was that Joe, well, was essentially 938 appearing to be a person who really had no commitment to any particular plan. He was just 939 moving; well, he's still trying to get everything put together in a way which would satisfy the 940 various constituents. And with no, not entire success. People who were doing the costing out
941 here probably weren't as competent, some didn't have the competence to handle that job. It was 942 a very difficult job for them to carry out. There wasn't enough input from Berkeley to be helpful in 943 this. It became a situation where there is opposition, where people are fighting with each other 944 rather than cooperating on the matter.

945 Now to make a long story short, it became necessary in my view to replace Joe. There were 946 various things which were coming together which would have meant a disaster. Absolutely 947 undedicated disaster. Medical School had been authorized during Herb's time, and when was it,
948 when the dean was about sixty-three, maybe sixty-three. We were supposed to be producing 949 doctors in medical school and that involves getting students into medical school.

950 RINGROSE: This was...

951 GALBRAITH: And when all of this hassling is going on, and which is delaying any decision
952 being made about the requirements, the buildings, the hospital and so forth and so on. And 953 we're not moving ahead. Charlie Hitch, who was very definitely a whiz kid in matters of 954 accounting and so forth and I had conversations about this. His view was that this is going to 955 have to be resolved or we're going to have very serious developments. These early luminaries
956 came to see me also and said they could not support Joe as the dean. That included the one 957 who went to Harvard. And here we are confronting almost an enemy, the central administration.
958 That is not an accurate way of describing the relationship or what it ought to have been. They

959 did not consider themselves enemies. They tried to accommodate the campus, but they didn't 960 take a strong enough forceful stand in the first place to be helpful in this regard. Well, we had to 961 get rid of Joe and we got Bob Tschirgi who is a medical doctor as well as a Ph.D. And the myth
962 developed that Tschirgi had been sent down by Kerr.

963 RINGROSE: By Kerr, right. I've heard that from all kinds of people.

964 GALBRAITH: Which has no foundation whatsoever. It was my initiative to bring Tschirgi down
965 as a vice chancellor of planning. It wasn't envisaged as having to do with the medical school at 966 that point. Just one of these accidents that occurs. He had resigned from Kerr's staff as vice 967 president.

968 RINGROSE: Is that the reason he was not included in the, the [Robert] Hamburger ah...

969 GALBRAITH: Well, that involves some personality...

970 RINGROSE: ...affair?

971 GALBRAITH: ...problems. There's a personality problem between well, Tschirgi has his own 972 distinctive characteristics, and I won't go into that.

973 RINGROSE: Ok, no it's not the place.

974 GALBRAITH: Well anyway he, he was asked, I asked him to get busy on the planning and he 975 had meetings with the faculty, and they began to organize. We were getting things put together 976 and this worked out to the point where we were...

[END OF PART TWO, END OF INTERVIEW]
