LAUGHING JUICE

by

Leo Szilard

Trude always had a way with children. On this particular day Retty dropped in with her kids, David and his older sister Margie. David, who is six, ^{*}is very fond of Trude but nothing would please him on this particular occasion.

"He has been a bad boy all afternoon. I don't know what got into him", his mother said, by way of apology.

"Oh, he is not a bad boy", said Trude, "he is just in a bad mood".

"I am in a bad mood", said David.

"I have just the thing for a bad mood", said Trude.

"What is that?" asked David.

"Laughing juice;" said Trude "I keep it for just such occasions. Whenever I am in a bad mood I take it and it makes me laugh."

She went into the kitchen and came back with a glass of raspberry juice in sparkling water. David put the glass to his lips, the spray tickled his nose, and he started to laugh. We laughed also. He drank a little more and he laughed some more. We laughed some more also. After he drank it all he looked puzzled.

"What is in it that makes you laugh?" he asked.

Trude always had a way with children. On this particular day ^{Rebby} dropped in with her ^{kids} children, David and his sister Margie. David, who is six, is very fond of Trude but nothing would please him on this particular occasion.

"He has been a bad boy all afternoon. I don't know what got into him" said his mother, by way of apology.

"Oh, he is not a bad boy" said Trude "he ^{is in} just ~~has~~ a bad mood."

"I ^{am in} ~~have~~ a bad mood" said David.

"I have just the thing for a bad mood" said Trude.

"What is that?" asked David.

"Laughing juice" said Trude "I keep it for just such ^{an} occasions."

Whenever I am in a bad mood I take it and it makes me laugh!"

She ^{went} vanished into the kitchen and came back with a glass of raspberry juice in sparkling water. David put the glass to his lips, ~~and~~ ^{and} the spray ~~may~~ have tickled his nose, ~~for~~ he started to laugh. We laughed also. He drank a little more and he laughed some more. We laughed some more also. ^{He finished it all and ~~put~~ up,} ~~when he was all through with it he looked sort of~~ puzzled.

"What is in it that makes you laugh?" he asked.
