Dear Laci:

Do you know Julius Fleischmann in Cincinnati?
Or have you close mutual friends? I should appreciate your dropping me a line.

If you are ever coming through Chicago, you will find me at the Quadrangle Club where I live, provided I am in town which is as likely as not to be the case.

Sincerely,

Leo Szilard

Dear Leo:

I don't know Julius Fleischmann but I do know his newly acquired son-in-law. The latter's name is Denny Ranschoff.

Does your inquiry mean we may see you here one of these days? We would be very glad.

Sincerely,

Ladislav Segoe

Dear Leo:

We were very sorry to have the bad news, can only trust that it is not quite as bad as hinted by the enclosed article from last night's paper, and that the therapy helps and also holds out hope for your complete recovery.

We are disappointed not having been informed about your illness before this. Please ask Bela to drop us a line from time to time about your progress - which we fervently hope will be increasingly more encouraging.

Right now there is no prospect of my being in or near New York in the near future - but in my line of work one can never tell.

Very best wishes from all of us here.

Affectionately,

Dear Leo:

Nelson Glueck called me yesterday to give me your greetings and a brief account of his conversation with you. He enjoyed meeting and talking to both of you.

You told him, he said, among other matters relating to me or us, that you were "peevied" by my failing to thank you for the copy of the Voice of the Dolphins you sent me with "Compliments of the Author." Whatever omissions or commissions I may be justly accused of respecting our mutual gross neglect of one another over the years - I am entirely innocent in this instance. My note of thanks, along with expressions of my surprise and some comments concerning the contents of this opus (which I read right away) were sent to the address you gave me the last time we talked over the "phone in New York (c/o A. N. Spanel - International Latex Corp.). I am sorry this didn't reach you, as I penned it longhand during an extended weekend stay at a nearby state park. We both enjoyed your satires - Vilma so much that she bought six copies for presents to her friends.

Unless Nelson Glueck mentioned it, you wouldn't know, of course, that Vilma is still on crutches, recovering from corrective hip surgery almost a year ago at Massachusetts General in Boston. Her progress, so her surgeon assures us, is better than the average, and we are hopeful he will let her trade her crutches for a cane after her next checkup in about six weeks. Fortunately, Vilma is blessed with a disposition that made it possible for her to keep up her spirits right along and also with patience to keep up with the elaborate routine of therapeutic exercises.

Aside from a rather difficult year on this account, which we knew for some time we shall have to face up to, we have no reasons to complain. My health is about what may be expected at 67, my office is and has
