University of California, San Diego

The march in downtown San Diego went well Wednesday with no incidents reported. Marchers were received with varied responses from the local citizens. While few classes were cancelled here on campus, UCSD students were well represented at the march.

Students Question Purpose of Naval Electronics Lab

"My purpose today is not recruitment, but education. I plan to tell you what the Naval Electronics Lab is, and the good effects not only for the Navy but for the civilian community as well." The amount of truth in this statement by Capt. Van Orden of NEL was the center of discussion Tuesday in a confrontation between the Navy and 50 UCSD students.

The confrontation occurred in a "job seminar" held in USB 2722. The seminar was attended by approximately 50 students, most of whom were less interested in employment at NEL than in the morality of U.S. involvement in Viet Nam.

Help Detect Viet Cong

Van Orden, graying and in uniform, listed ship navigation systems (used by the Coast Guard), aircraft beacons, and a new eye acuity test as NEL contributions to civilian society.

The students countered that such devices could also be used in Viet Nam for more efficient warfare. Byron King of SDS said that, "NEL has developed coastal detection systems in Viet Nam which identify small boats, often carrying NLF (Viet Cong) into South Viet Nam."

Van Orden agreed that "NEL does work for the Navy, and in so far as the Navy participates in Viet Nam, we do."

The students then pressed Van Orden for the main work of NEL, not "spin-offs" like the visual acuity test. Van Orden defined NEL's purpose as "primarily oriented to the needs of the U. S. Navy. Our purpose is to improve the communications and control systems for Navy ships and aircraft."

The final question addressed to Van Orden was whether he personally approved of the Viet Nam War. He replied that "I have taken an oath to defend the U. S. Constitution, and if the elected government decides on involvement in Viet Nam, I support that decision." The students' response to this was laughter.

The Antirecruitment Committee of SDS organized its opposition to NEL recruitment with a series of leaflets and a "sleep-in" the night before the 9 a.m. dialogue in USB 2722 with Capt. Van Orden.

The leaflets describe NEL's purpose as providing "electronic hardware for Naval operations which directly help the U.S. war effort in Indochina, and the capacity to intervene militarily in the other parts of the world on the side of U.S. Corporate interests." They added, "The only way we can directly hurt the war effort is by cutting off the supply of trained personnel that NEL and other similar places need. Last year the Commandant of the Marine Corps said they were without 800 Second Lieutenants as a result of anti-recruitment on many campuses."

Furthermore, SDS defended its attempts to stop recruitment "for the war effort" as not being an issue of free speech, because "this right (of free speech) is in life and death conflict with the right of the Vietnamese people to live and decide their own destiny."

For similar reasons, SDS has demonstrated against recruitments by General Electric, the CIA and the Armed Services this school year. Last year, demonstrators blocked Captain Stout, the Marine Corps recruiter from entering the Career Planning Office. Several students were identified by the administration and after a hearing were placed on disciplinary probation as a result of the demonstration.

A campus-wide referendum by the Associated Students last year after the Marine recruitment incident resulted in a 61 per cent approval of an "open recruiting policy," as now exists, allowing any and all recruiters to hold hours in the Career Planning Office. 78 per cent voted not to end all recruitment. Only 46 per cent voted to explore avenues "to exclude from the campus some recruiters, including those representing the military services..." This proposition was opposed by 54 per cent of those voting. Approximately two thirds of the student body voted in the referendum.

Classes Cancelled for Ecology Meet

Along with the political sanctions on pollution of our "concerned" President, Senator Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.) and Congressman Paul McCloskey (R-Calif.) declared that the week of April 22 be deemed "Environmental Teach-In Week." In compliance with this declaration the San Diego collegiate community is planning a whole series of events designed to "wet" your awareness about the dilemma of the human habitat.

Kicking off this week of weeks will be a convocation held at the noon hour on Monday, with classes cancelled for it. The keynote speaker will be UCSD physics professor Dr. Frank Halpern. Later in the day there will be a series of environment "flicks" from "The Slow Guillotine" to "Multiply and Subdue the Earth."

Plaza noon hour lecture-discussion periods will be held every day of environment week—it is healthy discussion which is needed to make this week one of communication.

Wednesday of the week is National Earth Day. As part of the activities designed to give one a grass roots "feel" for the problem, at San Diego State at 7 p.m. Sam Hinton, Guy Carawan, Clabe Hangan and Brautigam will present in folk sing-in style the flavor of life and why, and how, as John Todd, William Penn Mott, and A. Earl Davis will say, we can save it. Also at State this week there will be speakers from within and without the university on all aspects of pollution with workshops designed to show how many types of pollution are caused and what physical means can be employed to halt this environmental destruction.

Thursday night UCSD will present one of the country's foremost ecologists, of the same caliber as Paul Ehrlich or Barry Commoner: Dr. Rene Dubos, whose book "So Human an Animal," is a classic study in the development of man's potential to control his environment. Throughout the week there will be exhibits and activities as well. Some of these include an art gallery garbage room, a Muir garden exhibit, a population graph in Urey Hall, trips to Torrey Pines (how many have never been?), a bird walk, plus others.

Berkeley Update

Windows Smashed Thursday

Rioting re-erupted Thursday afternoon at Berkeley when a religious rally, unrelated to the demonstration, in Sproul Plaza was interrupted first by leaders of SDS and AS who apparently wished to calm the crowd, then by an unidentified group with a portable PA system who urged a crowd of 1000 to go to the campus administration building, California Hall. The crowd went there, broke several windows, and then, in reduced numbers, proceeded to Callihan Hall (ROTC), the faculty club, and Sproul Hall, breaking windows of the latter two. A line of police guarded Callihan, but police did not succeed in breaking up the group or warding off attacks of other buildings until 3:00. Later, rioters charged groups of policemen on Sproul Plaza. Police retaliated with CS and other tear gas. More people have been arrested and beaten, and a DAILY CALIFORNIAN reporter said police had attacked students without provocation.

A warrant was issued for Dan Siegel, Berkeley AS president, for inciting to riot in a speech given at the rally in Sproul Plaza Wednesday. When interviewed by UCB radio station KAL, he indicated that his previous statement said that "peaceful rallies are neither effective nor worthwhile; you need stronger measures." He stated that such measures would be of the nature of a general strike.

A militant demonstration at Berkeley, sponsored by SDS and the Student Mobilization Committee, broke into a riot Wednesday afternoon.

It began with a rally against the Vietnam war and ROTC in Sproul Plaza at noon, attended by about 500 people. From there, the demonstration moved first to University Hall, the University Administration Building, to protest University involvement in nuclear weapons research; then to the ROTC center at Callihan Hall, where the trouble began.

Members of the crowd began throwing water and paint-filled balloons at the 35 to 40 university policemen who were standing in front of the building. Some policemen circled in back of the crowd to the wooded area across from Callihan Hall to try to disperse them. A melee broke out between the police and demonstrators in the woods and the police began firing tear gas.

The crowd moved back towards the center of campus, where both university and Berkeley City Police met them and continued firing tear gas. Sporadic rioting occurred during the rest of the afternoon until 5:00. Most of the police stayed at the south end of Sproul Plaza, at the intersection of Bancroft and Telegraph, while a crowd stayed at the north end, around Sather Gate, and charged police lines, sometimes throwing rocks. Several trash can fires were set, and there were unsubstantiated rumors of a fire being set in a building.

A state of emergency was declared by Berkeley Chancellor Roger Heyns at 3:15.

A report to the Regents' meeting in San Francisco Thursday indicated that 20 people have been arrested including four identified as non-student members of the Weathermen splinter-group of SDS; one of them was from Baltimore, the rest were from the Bay Area. Numerous other persons are being sought on warrants issued on the basis of photographic evidence.

A reporter from the DAILY CALIFORNIAN said of the demonstration, "The crowd's mood was the most militant I've ever seen. These people weren't running from the police; they were charging police lines."

CONTEST!

See article for contest rules

Entry blanks in Triton Times office

A long list of prizes, including an appearance in a Universal movie, are being offered as part of the "Unbeauty Contest" being sponsored on 20 California college campuses by Pacific Southwest Airlines (PSA) and Universal Studios.

The contest, which runs through April, is open to all full-time undergraduate students. Contestants are encouraged to create a unique visual happening on their own faces by using makeup. The aim of the contest is to produce funny, bizarre, unusual, weird, horrible—or you name it—effects. The only limiting factor is the student's own imagination.

Universal suggests that participants in the contest contact their campus drama and theatrical arts departments for hints on how to effectively use makeup.

Local campus judging will be held on May 4 under the direction of PSA's campus representative Pam Peterson. The winner from each college will be invited to Universal Studio's Tour Center on May 9 for the grand finals.

The contest rules are simple. The makeup is to be self-applied on the facial area. There is no limit on the types of material that may be used. "Before and After" photographs must be submitted with the completed entry blank to your campus PSA rep before April 29.

Judges for the contest at Universal will include Bud and Mike Westmore, the studio's top makeup artists, and Billie Hayes who is currently starring as "Witchiepoop" in the new Universal motion picture "Pufnstuf."

The grand prize winner will appear in a Universal motion picture or television show (subject to production requirements) with a special makeup call personally handled by Bud Westmore. There will also be a lunch with the stars in the Studio Commissary and visits to several sets during shooting.

The winner will receive accommodations at the Sheraton-Universal Hotel of the Stars for three days and two nights with PSA providing air transportation and Valcar furnishing an automobile provided the winner is 21 or over.

For more information about the contest contact PSA campus representative Pam Peterson at 453-5408.
