BAC is a new group at UCSD that works to center black voices in the arts. We recognize the extreme lack of black students at UCSD, and hope to counter this fact by encouraging each other to create space and platforms for students of color. The goal is that our membership will make art practice at UCSD more collaborative and supportive.

Join us in celebrating BAC's first event and to learn about ways you can participate and become a part of the collective.

A UCSD team recently launched a FREE iOS APP called TUTUroomii to help LGBTQ+ young people and allies find ideal roommates in their own community. The APP enables customers to search for both roommates and available housing resources based on personal preferences. It also provides a chat platform to enable deeper communication so that APP users can have a better chance to find ideal roommates. Even if you don't need new roommates now, chances are you could find new LGBTQ+ friends on this APP.

Sounds cool? Why wait? Go check out TUTUroomii.

Theorizing From Diaspora

The "Greater Caribbean" as Archipelagic Assemblage

Dr. Michelle Stephens

Professor of Latino and Caribbean
Studies and English, Rutgers University

Is there a way to complicate both diasporic and sovereign understandings of Caribbeanness by returning to older notions of hemispheric space and mainland-island relationality? What the colonizers used to call, "The Greater Caribbean," could itself be a model for moving both with and beyond diaspora and nation in thinking about the US-Caribbean as an assemblage of archipelagic relations.
