THE very words "Southern California" bring to mind a smiling summer land rich with tropical vegetation and heavy with the perfume of flowers. It is the home of people who appreciate the beauties and comforts of life. And the social center of this fair land of blue skies and balmy breezes is the U. S. Grant Hotel, the pride of San Diego. One has only to be a guest at this palatial hostelry, or even a visitor enjoying the hospitality of the Bivouac Grill, to understand the reasons for the decided preference shown for the U. S. Grant. Built at a cost of $2,000,000, it is the best appointed and the most modern hotel on the Pacific Coast. Every convenience and comfort a patron could possibly demand is at his instant service. The location itself leaves nothing to be desired. It has what every successful hotel must have—accessibility.

U.S. GRANT HOTEL
THE LOBBY

FACING the Plaza with its year-round riot of luxuriant tropical flowers, with a view from most of its rooms of the wonderful harbor, the U. S. Grant Hotel is close to every attraction, and through its transportation facilities is in immediate touch with more remote places of interest. Every room is an outside room, light and airy. For the convenience of parties rooms may be arranged in suites of any size. The hotel is not far from the Spreckels Theater, the new million dollar playhouse, and all the other leading amusement resorts. There's no trouble about securing the accommodations you yourself want, because there are 500 guest rooms. You feel as safe on the top floor as on the ground floor, since the entire hotel is of concrete, fire-proof construction. An idea of its size may be gained from the statement that the main lobby covers an area equal to one-eighth of a city block, and has a seating capacity of several hundred people.

U.S. GRANT HOTEL
DINNING ROOM

SPEAKING of service—the cuisine of the U. S. Grant Hotel is the standard by which tourists and residents gauge other coast hotels. What you wish to eat, at the hour you wish it, and served as it would be in the mansion of a magnate—but at reasonable prices—that is the U. S. Grant way of satisfying the inner man. Don't forget the Bivouac Grill, that gathering place of kindred spirits, which is famous from coast to coast. It is patronized by men and women who appreciate the good things of life. The Turkish Baths are most elaborate, there being departments for both men and women, open day and night. Each has a swimming pool with salt water pumped continuously direct from the ocean. Skilled attendants are constantly in charge. Large assembly rooms, spacious corridors, an artistic dining salon, a rathskeller, private dining rooms, cafe, grill room, a ball room and a swimming pool testify to the thoughtfulness of the builders of this hotel in catering to a fastidious public.

POOL

COME to the U. S. Grant Hotel if you wish to enjoy golf, polo, tennis, and aviation at their best. These sports are found here under ideal conditions. Cards to the country club are issued to guests by the hotel management. All the year yachting, rowing and fishing offer opportunities to be excelled nowhere else for those who love the water. There is never a month that sea-bathing is not possible. The dances at the hotel are most popular with the young people. At frequent intervals San Diego Bay is the rendezvous of the warships, and the brass buttons of the navy lend their charm to the hotel's social life. Fort Rosecrans, too, furnishes its quota to enliven all festive occasions. The climate is mild, there being no sudden changes of temperature. The average is sixty-two degrees, and it seldom varies more than ten degrees from this.

Bivouac Grill

YOU will have to see the Bivouac Grill to appreciate it. Thousands of dollars have been spent in producing the picturesque atmosphere from which this noted gathering place of discriminating diners takes its name. The mural paintings are all of military subjects, and the walls are decorated with military accoutrements which further enhance the martial spirit of the place. Each niche in the wall has been subjected to individual treatment, and no nation has been slighted in the distribution of military honors.

Ball Room

Particularly pleasing are the sections devoted to historic scenes from French, English, Russian, Turkish and American fields of glory. There is not a dish you could order in New York, Paris, Vienna, Cairo or London, but what can be served you here. No wonder this hotel is the resort of those who appreciate the best. It is under the management of Mr. James H. Holmes, whose wide experience as a managing director of successful resort hostleries made plain to him that in the U. S. Grant he had the greatest opportunity of his long career to cater to a public which enjoys the best of everything.
