Payoffs to Amateur Athletes Uncovered

by David Eisen
Executive Editor

University recruiters are promising high school and junior college athletes various illegal inducements in what amounts to a bidding war, and sometimes have not delivered, sources have told the Judy Sweet can relax: no illegal payoffs were uncovered here.

Triton Times in recent exclusive interviews.

The sources, who are closely tied to the track and field and basketball scenes in Southern California, referred mainly to those sports but acknowledged similar activity in many other college areas.

The information linked illegal maneuvers with track and field stars such as Dwight Stones and John Walker, the upper echelon of college basketball, as well as recruiters, scouts and coaches across the nation.

The sources, who all asked not to be identified, described a current collegiate sports picture that includes:

-Recruiters enticing high school seniors and junior college athletes with money, equipment, jobs and a social life—all of which are illegal under National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) rules—and often renege if the athlete does not perform up to expectations;

-Pay-offs to women athletes, once non-existent, are now on the up-swing;

-“Amateur” athletes, primarily in track and field, illegally be given money to perform in meets around the country; and

-Academic work of the athletes often being taken care of through a variety of methods, often with the knowledge of professors.

Stones Jumping Up In World

Other recent information has backed up the claims of the sources. The June 13 issue of Time magazine will identify high jumper Dwight Stones as being currently investigated by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), and possibly owing as much as $50,000 in back income taxes. The income allegedly resulted from payments for performing in meets to the ex-Long Beach State star, which would have been illegal for Stones, who is still considered an amateur.

The Michigan State student newspaper has alleged that Ohio State coaches have promised and paid money to recruits, paid police officers to transport prospective players.

Though the amounts of similar activity, according to the sources, is prevalent in Southern California, it is relatively sparse in San Diego. While San Diego State University was said to have made “a few illegal moves,” none were found at UCSD. The University of Southern California and San Jose State were named as two of the most blatantly illegal.

Brent Clark, a NCAA rules enforcement representative, told the Triton Times that recruits can be given “anything commonly related to the educational experience. That includes room, board, tuition and books.” Though Clark acknowledged a minimum of infractions, he said, “We expect the universities to follow the rules and generally they do. When they don’t, we are disappointed and we have to react.”

For some institutions, that reaction includes being barred from television and post-season tournaments for various periods of time.

Of the college recruiters, one source said, “They come to your house to sell you, and then later you get nothing. How is a high

Interaction Seen as Key To Better Reg Fee Panel

by Mark Stadler
Managing Editor

The student co-chairperson of the 1977-78 Advisory Committee on Student Fee Programs has set increased communication between the committee and students as her primary goal for next year.

“The students don’t know what the committee is or what it does. They just know their registration fees are going up and they blame it on us,” Third College junior Marsha Harris said in an interview Monday.

The 12-member committee, composed of seven students and five administrators makes recommendations on the uses and levels of all student fees to the Vice-chancellor and Dean of Student Affairs, who in turn advises the Chancellor. The committee is co-chaired by a student, elected by past student committee members, and a representative of the student affairs department.

Allocates Reg Fee

The committee is commonly called the reg fee committee because the bulk of its work concerns the annual $360 registration fee. Programs and services funded by reg fee monies include student health services, recreational and intercollegiate athletics, planning and career placement, financial aid services and the student affairs branch.

And it is the level and allocation of the registration fee that has caused the most controversy for the advisory committee this past year.

The committee recommended a registration fee for 1977-78 of $120 per quarter. That recommendation—which was accepted by Chancellor McElroy—represented a compromise between committee members, Harris said.

Second Part of the Revelle Interview

What UCSD Students Need is “a Cause”

by Bert Lee
Staff Writer

Earlier this quarter Revelle College convened its first convocation in memorial to the ideas and visions of its founding fathers. One of those present was Dr. Roger Revelle, who offered insights into the basic philosophical and practical problems which confronted UCSD in its early formative stages and also detailed the early hopes of the college.

The Triton Times once again goes to Revelle to get his views on a number of situations surrounding UCSD.

TT: I understand that the purpose of the college cluster system and of the rigid curriculum requirements is to help the student to develop his latent ability to learn. But are structure and curriculum enough in themselves? Many students are not excited about learning simply because they view education precisely in terms of a structured and constraining life.

Revelle: I guess one of my fundamental beliefs is that people are happiest when they have a cause that they can lose themselves in, when they are involved in something bigger than they are. One of the happiest times of my life was when I was involved in the building of this university, which is much bigger than any man.

One analogy to this is the building of a cathedral. The cathedral was built by many people, but nobody knows who they were. There were many people involved, not for their own glory, but for the greater glory of God. They were sustained by a vision of something greater than they were, something transcendent.

This is one of the main things we should try to teach our students; that we are best off when we are working for something greater than ourselves. Of course, we have to believe wholeheartedly in what we’re doing.

The main problem is to get students involved. In a sense, radical politics is an important element of the university because it is something that students can really lose themselves in. But students need to work to become experts in a particular field if they want to get their cause heard and understood by others.

Students Rally Again Against UC Holdings

by Mark Stadler
Managing Editor

UCSD communications professor Herb Schiller warned students yesterday against being tricked by the media into false arguments that a victory by black South Africans will lead to a suppression of human rights.

“Anything people who have been dominated for 300 years do to liberate themselves from their oppressors is good. Rather than being a suppression of human rights, it would be a cleansing of the poisons that have choked our system,” Schiller said.

Schiller was one of several speakers at a rally on Revelle plaza yesterday against UC investments in corporations that do business with the white supremacist government of South Africa. It was the second such demonstration here in the past week, and was attended by about 200 people.

The rally was followed by a march of about 100 people through campus and the chancellor’s complex, where the marchers filed peacefully past Chancellor McElroy’s office, chanting and clapping.

Wider Framework

Schiller said the whole question of the South African struggle has to be seen in a wider framework than that of the media—or image-making context.

“Nothing happens unless people do something,” he said.

Schiller linked the recent concern expressed by the US government and media over South African conditions to the increased struggle of South African blacks. Still, he said, the media will be presenting the same structure in different terms.

“We have to keep our wits about us in order to decipher the new terms and not be misled by them,” the communications professor said.

Also speaking at the rally was sociology professor Gail Omvedt, who said she plans to resign her position to protest UC involvement in South Africa.

Omvedt said the revolution of South African blacks is inevitable, and that American investments can only prop up the white minority government there for a little longer.

She also said the Soviet Union is no better than the United States, as it seems determined to set up a series of client states, dominated by bourgeois capitalists, in Africa.

“The struggle in South Africa is the struggle against a system that oppresses us as well,” she told the crowd.

Slick Response

Literature graduate student Gene Holland, one of four students who spoke with McElroy during last Friday’s demonstration, also spoke at the rally. He termed the response of McElroy and the Regents to student demands as “slick.”

Last Ish: Goodbye

This is it.

Today marks our 90th, and last, newspaper of 1976-77. It’s been fun. Some of us will be here all summer, so correspondence can still be sent to Triton Times, UCSD B-016, La Jolla, 92038.

As for you, go on vacation, go to the beach, go make some money.

We’ll be back next year with a new cast of characters. We hope you’ll be back, too.

AS Works for Students?

Summer is rapidly approaching. The students will no longer be on campus to check up on the ASUCSD or the administration, however both groups will continue to operate.

Budgets have not yet been approved. I have been told by many ASUCSD officers that they will not be approved until MECHA's and BSU's allocations have been slashed.

Rumors claiming that the ASUCSD will raise fees and vote itself salaries are circulating. Over the summer students will have no control.

As of yet the ASUCSD has taken no action to implement the referendum results. When will the ASUCSD begin acting in accordance with the students' wishes?

In the fall petitions will circulate. These petitions will call for a Constitutional Convention, the Convention students voted overwhelmingly in favor of in the recent ASUCSD elections.

This summer think about the changes you would like to see in the Constitution—discuss them with your friends. We must prepare to hold a militant Constitutional Convention this fall.

Teachers on Strike

In a glass case outside the Pacific Beach Junior High School principal's office are four wooden plaques from the Valley Forge Freedom Foundation.

Outside PBJH this week, a group of about 35 teachers have been exercising those American rights. Holding signs, they stroll quietly past the school, as part of a general teacher strike...

About 80 percent of PBJH teachers are on strike, according to geography teacher Frank Meyers. This percentage, especially for a traditionally conservative school like PBJH, stands quite well compared to the city-wide average which as of Tuesday night was about 15 percent.

While teacher strikes have occurred in other major cities, this is the first one in San Diego. It happened at least in part because of timing, and the need for bargaining power.

So the teachers are on strike. And the classrooms are being attended by non-striking teachers, substitutes, teacher assistants and community "volunteers"...

"Sure money's important, but it's not the only thing, contrary to the impression the media is giving," Meyers said.

Classroom size is probably the biggest sticking point in the negotiations. The administration provides statistics on average classroom size. It derives the figure by dividing the total students at a school by the number of teachers...

"But average class size doesn't make a difference to a kid in a class of 40. Average class size is meaningless. What we want is a maximum class size. But the administration won't even bargain on the point," Meyers said.

While the teachers picket outside, children in the building next to them look out the windows, tossing paper airplanes and shouting.

Apparently they aren't. According to the teachers, and several school kids, the situation in the classrooms is verging on chaos.

While some of the classes must have been attended by capable people, a lot of them are attended only by a body, a person who is there only because the law requires someone to be there.

When asked for comment on these developments, PBJH principal Robert Menke refused to talk and referred a reporter to the San Diego Unified School District's Public Information Office.

But one teacher knew the attendance figures for Monday. She said the PBJH vice-principal told her 20 percent of the students were absent Monday morning.

One thing that has excited PBJH teachers is the sense of solidarity they have found among themselves. "The most amazing thing is that so many teachers are here," Meyers said.

Letters to the Editor

Israel is More Progressive than any Arab State

Arab's claims of being anti-Zionist, and not anti-Semitic, are ludicrous, and contradict historical realities.

When the Young Socialist Alliance takes this stance, and at the same time proclaims freedom, national determination and social justice, we could naively be confused.

It is only of late, that Arab leaders have recognized that anti-Semitism, expressed as such, is not favorably received by the west.

How can this not be, when in Egypt alone, during World War II, Nasser, Sadat, Prime Minister Ali Maher Pasha, Chief of Staff Aziz el Misri, and King Farouk were all pro-Nazis? In Syria during that time, the entire political spectrum was aligned with the Axis powers.

Arab leaders continue to use "Zionism" and "world Jewry" interchangeably, if not to the west, then at least to their own people. A 1967 UNESCO investigation found 80 out of 108 Arab schoolbooks used in Gaza and the West Bank to be unsuitable for use because of their anti-Jewish and genocidal expoundings.

In Syria today, Jews must carry identity cards. They cannot drive or have a telephone. They are forbidden to leave, cannot travel freely and cannot occupy public positions.

In Israel, in 1975, there were four Arabs who were in Parliament. Of these, one was the Deputy Minister of Communications, and the other was the Deputy Speaker of Parliament (the Knesset).

"Zionism is a political movement organically related to world imperialism and hostile to all movements of liberation and progress in the world.

In seventeen of the Arab League states, including Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Iraq and Libya, there is no free press. In Israel, there is. As of 1974, there was a 12% illiteracy rate in Israel, as compared to 65% in Egypt, 62% in Jordan, 60% in Syria and 73% in Libya.

Yes, Young Socialists, you let your utopian ideals get compromised by adopting euphemisms that stand for violence and hatred against Jews ever since Jews have been around.

separation of church and state, while at least 12 Arab states have constitutions which proclaim that Islam is to be the state religion. Finally, is the Young Socialist Alliance aware of the dichotomy between the status of women in Israel and the status of women elsewhere in the mid-east?

Unlike the young Socialists, we are not naively fooled. We look behind these words and see an Arab boycott which discriminates against not only businesses which deal with Israel, but one that also discriminates against businesses and firms that have Jews on their board of directors as owners and executives.

So, you really is more racist? Which societies are closer to the full emancipation of their peoples, all their peoples? As far as utopian ideals go, which countries in the middle east are striving fastest, in real terms (such as hospital building, education, farming improvements, and birth control programs) to achieve them?

Young Socialists, you said there are many Jews in your midsts. This is undoubtedly true, but then, there are many socialists who do not espouse your particular brand of Socialism either.

HARLAN SIMON

YSA Condemns Zionism, not Judaism

In the May 9 Triton Times, there was an article with the erroneous title "YSA Uses Israel as 'scapegoat'".

The latter two authored an article in the June 6 Triton Times. It is obvious they know absolutely nothing about our organization, and we resent their blatant lies.

But the biggest lie is that we are "blatantly antisemitic". Our position on Israel is that we advocate the creation of a democratic nonsectarian Palestine, where there are democratic liberties for all groups; Jewish, Christian, and Moslem.

Contemporary Zionism is not simply the movement for a Jewish homeland. That alone is a commendable ideal. The key question is: Do the Israelis have the right to displace nearly an entire nation of people, keep them out by force, expropriate their property and land, and do some of the same things in the occupied (i.e. conquered) territories? The answer is NO!

Although only a minority of the refugees are still living in the UN-run refugee camps (644,000 out of 3.2 million Palestinians), it has been the terrible burden of their plight especially with their rapidly increasing population that has been the basis for much of the conflict between Israel and the Arab nations.

Concerning the "humane relationship" between the Palestinians and Israelis that Eric Fishbein spoke of, we hope he will consider a few "whys" in return: Why has "progressive" Israel bombarded refugee camps with napalm at various times in the past?

Why do Israeli police shoot down rioting Arabs in the West Bank? And why are those "contented" folks rioting in the first place?

Fight Rape

A Wisconsin county judge recently gave men permission to rape women. In a rape case, county judge Archie Simonson justified the gang rape of a 16-year-old girl as a normal reaction to a socially permissive environment. He has interpreted a violent act against women as a natural act. Our sisters in Madison, Wisconsin are calling for the removal of this judge from office. We are supporting this action by circulating petitions.

The issue I addressed in the previous letter was: an increase in fees to pay officers a salary. Jeff

The teachers will need that solidarity, as they are fighting against strong odds. Schools are under fire these days, as society's scapegoat for the decline in morals among young people. The San Diego Union and Evening Tribune have both editorially blasted the teachers. The public is strongly opposed to public employee has assured me that he would fight, and even veto, a bill to pay officers a salary. Jeff is working hard to put the new government on its feet. Which is no easy job with critics like me on the sidelines. I wish the ASUCSD much luck, and much criticism.

But the teachers seem determined, and they should keep struggling because they're making some good points. Administrators should not be paid more than teachers; the practice causes many good teachers to move out of the classroom where they are desperately needed. The San Diego school district does have too many administrators, who operate in isolation, making decisions affecting students they never see. Classroom size is directly proportional to teaching effectiveness; no one can seriously expect a teacher to be effective with 40 kids in the classroom.

And, as the teachers continue to picket peacefully, another car passes by on the street. The driver honks, and waves a clenched fist. The teachers grin and wave back.

Koalas Raise Question Of Dietetic Preferences

Eucalyptus Leaves...

I think the proposal of the koala as a school mascot is a stupid and tasteless idea. The koala is too cute, too meek and shy and easily victimized. It suggests, not strength and achievement, but frailty and ineptitude. The triton, on the other hand, is a servant of no less a being than Venus, the Goddess of Love. Witness a passage I happened to come across:

And lo! at her unuttered will, her ocean-servants are in waiting: the daughters of Nereus are there singing their song, and Portunas, and Salacia, and the tiny charioteer of the dolphin, with a host of Tritons leaping through the billows. And one blows softly through his sounding sea-shell, another spreads a silken web against the sun, a third presents the mirror to the eyes of his mistress, while the others swim side by side below, drawing her chariot. Such was the escort of Venus as she went upon the sea.

(Walter Pater, Marius the Epicurean, ch. 5)

The triton is an active being, performing a variety of functions, working together with his fellows to serve an important and beautiful cause. He is not a stuffed animal hiding in his tree all day munching eucalyptus leaves.

...or Bullshit?

Hunter S. Thompson once said that listening to politicians speak was like having "dull speeches for breakfast, duller speeches for lunch and bullshit with gravy for dinner." Andy Schneider's koala letter (May 18, 1977) has convinced me that it is dinnertime at UCSD.

Schneider ran for ASUCSD President and later for Muir's ASUCSD representative on an issues platform. He said that he would work for important changes here, and somehow the koala vs. triton question does not seem to be as important as better student/TA ratios, Third College Unit II funding, keeping our library intact or any of the other problems facing our school and its new government.

What I would like to ask is that Muir College's ASUCSD representative be responsible enough to recognize the issues that are really important. Many people are watching the new government to see if it can work. There is a need for it to work. It can't work, though, if the people in it rush off on meaningless tangents the minute they are safely elected.

So please, for the students' sake, work on the issues that you said that you would. We need those changes more than we need koalas.

City Council Approves LJ Speciality Center

by Cindhi Hill
Staff Writer

The San Diego City Council Wednesday approved the La Jolla Specialty Center, a multi-unit shopping complex, slated for construction southeast of UCSD off La Jolla Village Ave.

The Council was meeting to hear an appeal by La Jolla merchant, Fred Scott, Jr. against a recent decision by the Planning Commission to approve the May Co./Bren Corp. project.

The shopping center was approved by the Planning Commission on March 15, overriding a Planning Department's recommendation to deny the permit because the center does not conform with the University Community Plan.

Councilman Leon Williams and Jess Haro voted against denial of the appeal.

Testimony was heard from Scott and his attorney, a constituency representing the May-Bren partnership, the Planning Dept., individuals from the University and La Jolla community areas, the chairman of the University Planning Group, and various members of the UCSD community, including the office of the Chancellor, the faculty, the ASUCSD and the Graduate Student Council.

Planning Department official Ken Kline, reiterated the department's previous recommendation that the shopping center be denied, and in addition suggested the rezoning of a northerly portion of the May/Bren property to R-3, a residential zoning. Such a rezoning would prevent commercial development of the property.

Bruce Henderson, Scott's attorney, said, "It is our contention that the specialty center is regional because it is designed to draw over 80 percent of its market from outside the local area."

"Therefore," Henderson said, "the question here is the viability of the University Community plan, which clearly states that a regional shopping center is not desirable for the area."

The presentation by the representatives of the Specialty Center was headed by the San Diego-based attorney Ferdinand Fletcher.

The design of the center was emphasized during a slide presentation, during which supporters of the center said, that because of the "heavy emphasis on use of natural materials and landscaping" and because it "will not have the sense of anchored ends" as in other shopping centers, the project is "not in a regional category as defined by the city of San Diego."

Dr. Walter Munk, representing campus faculty, Peter Tiersma of the Graduate Student Council and President Jeff Leifer, speaking for the ASUCSD, all indicated a unanimous opposition to the project due to its non-conformity with the Community plan, its

We knew we couldn't get the administration to accept $348 (the minimum reg fee level for next year) and we didn't want $372 (the maximum level). So we compromised on $360," Harris said.

Among the other issues which caused controversy for the committee were the cost of gynecological services at the Student Health Center and continued funding for intercollegiate and recreational athletics, the campus Day Care Center and the Crafts Center.

Alternate Plans

"There is only a minimal chance of funding free gynecological services directly through registration fee monies," Harris said. "But Rick Whitehill (the Associate Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs) is working on several alternative plans to allow free pap smears and pelvic examinations."

Among the methods being examined are using medical students to give free examinations as part of their education and allowing community health clinics to use campus facilities in exchange for giving free examinations to women students, Harris said.

In addition, intercollegiate and recreational athletics were funded on a permanent basis, while the Day Care Center and Crafts Center were placed on a "one-time only" funding basis, which means they will probably lose their reg fee funding after next year.

As for next year, Harris linked the further level of registration fees to several factors, including the rate of inflation and enrollment, and the salary raises the state legislature gives to UC employees.

(While the Legislature sets pay rates for UC employees, the university has to pay the actual salaries. The bulk of reg fee dollars goes to pay employee salaries.)

Harris also talked about her personal plans for next year. She plans to try increasing communication between the committee and the student body through a number of methods, including open forums every quarter and regular open lunches where students can talk to committee members, and by sending out press releases telling what the committee is doing.

Another Goal

Another of her personal goals is completion of a student services survey, to measure student feelings on services funded by the reg fee. Harris said the committee would use the survey when deciding what services should continue to receive reg fee funding.

Lodge's "Natural Avenue"; Lyrics Come to a Dead End

by Paul Watry
Staff Writer

As a group, the Moody Blues represented what was perhaps the most particular of all rock bands. Each album, meticulously produced, reflected the merging of five separate individuals; oftentimes fusing rock with symphonic sound.

It is impossible, then, to sever former member John Lodge from his earlier connections as a member of the band. He has certainly picked up a lot—especially from his partner Justin Hayward—in the art of producing and selling a successful album. Thus, it should be no surprise that his first solo album, Natural Avenue, should have echoes of earlier Moody Blues reverberating in its grooves. It is even less surprising when it is learned that Tony Clarke, producer of the Moody Blues, produced this album also.

The result, however glamorous, is not fruitful.

The selections on this album lack the creative spark and zest that characterized the Moody Blues. Compared to the melancholy introspection of Lodge's "Isn't Life Strange" or the brilliance of "Send Me No Wine," most songs here, by contrast, seem insipid.

Particularly mediocre are the songs "Carry Me," which is completely over-orchestrated and "Natural Avenue," which sounds like a weak parody of Justin Hayward's "Ride My Sea-Saw."

Though very weak, this album is an important one. It represents a breaking away of Lodge from the rest of the Moody Blues. Though not entirely evident by the Roger Dean cover, Natural Avenue avoids as much as possible the cosmic cliché that characterized the Moody Blues. No longer does Lodge sing about "This Garden Universe." Instead, he has opted for love lyrics.

The result is not too promising. But perhaps Lodge will get better at it. Lyrics from the album are amazingly bad. Lines like "Living on air you take / From the Earth for free / Money you make to pay / For all this liberty / just don't seem to make it nowadays. Neither does John Lodge. He is like a George Harrison...lost without his partners.

UCSD Poets Come Out of Woodwork

A glimpse at the Spring '77 issue of 'Roadwork' proves that UC San Diego houses a healthy group of poets and writers, comprised of both faculty members and students. 'Roadwork,' the campus literary journal was generated this year out of Helicon, the poetry journal, in an attempt to give student writing a wider audience than it has had here in past years, according to editor Larry Hartwick.

The Spring issue comes as a result of the large number of writers who submitted pieces for the winter issue. This quarter's issue has an expanded format with 80 instead of the usual 30 pages. The intent of the Spring issue is to bring in a greater cultural diversity in the writing than was present in past issues, Hartwick said. The cultural diversity that Hartwick speaks of is evident in the selections by faculty members. Shirley Williams, professor of literature, contributed several poems which incorporate black dialect. The poetry of Wai-Lim Yip, also a literature professor, reflect the Chinese technique of the poem as a montage of juxtaposed images.

The balance of the writing in the issue is by students, and much of it seems to deal with the individual's place in society. "In general," Hartwick said, "the writers take a less academic approach to the problem of the individual confronting society than in the last issue. In the last issue, the writers seemed to be more concerned with the artistic value of language. I think in this issue, that the writers have broken free from these constraints." The poetry and prose in the issue are complemented by graphics by artists from the UCSD and La Jolla communities. The most notable of these is Francoise Gilot, artist and former wife of Picasso, who contributed several pen and ink drawings for the issue. 'Roadwork' will go on sale in the bookstore on June 14. It a worthwhile purchase for anyone who is interested in the state of writing at UCSD.

The Long Goodbye

THE FINAL SEASON: a highlight film featuring the big plays and big days and big names and big games of the 1976-77 school year at U...rah! rah! rah!...C...rah! rah!...S...rah! rah!...D...rah! rah!...U...C-S-D...Fight! Fight! Fight!

(printed narration): (Italics) This story, unfortunately, is true. It tells the strange and terrible and exciting tale of one man's performance in the biggest game of all: the game of life. One man, one year, one school, "one dollar, please"-with one search: Who really is Number One-at UCSD? He followed the action, he called the play-by-play, he found the truth. Hardly a fairy tale (except for a few minor characters), this report reveals once and for all the forces of Good and Evil as they exist in their ever-lasting battle on the moral playfield of this university.

-cut to- A strung out man-child sitting in the corner of a smoke-filled but otherwise empty mansion...(voice-over narration): "I sat in my room trying to pick out the summertime left-overs that had collected between my teeth during the previous three months. I was waiting for the day to begin, the start of my last year at UCSD. I was hardly excited. Sunlight crawled up my window like a sick cockroach. My energy was as flat and stale as a football interview."

-cut to- The window. A rock crashes through the glass - quick pan-striking m-c between the legs where, luckily, one of his hands is. -cut to close-up- A folded piece of paper is attached to the rock. M-C unfolds the paper and we read: "DIPLOMA" This certifies that you have graduated from UCSD. To validate this certificate all you need is the proper signature. Get it, and you are free to go." (voice-over): "There was only one joker at UCSD who would try a trick like that. And my job was to find out who it was." -fade out-

-fade in- Long, virtuoso pan of the campus, finally zooming in on m-c in the center of Revelle Plaza, gathering signatures. None of them are the right one. A very beautiful woman walks by. (voice-over): "She looked as if it would cost $25 just to say hello to her. Why even her scarf was the kind you could find in the dark just by listening to it purr. But I had to try everyone."

m-c: "Move your stems this way, baby, and come over here and sign this." (He tries to make his voice sound as if someone has been using his tongue for sandpaper)

Beauty: "Beat it, lug." (Her voice could be used for paint remover)

m-c: "But I need your signature!"

Beauty: "Not mine, Asinine. But I can show you whose. Come this way."

(voice-over): "I tried to duplicate her every move but I could only get an erection."

-cut to- M-C and Beauty sitting in the sauna, towels rapped around their bodies.

m-c: "Three months have passed and I still haven't got the signature."

Beauty: "It's my fault, I've failed."

M-C leans over and kisses Beauty. (voice-over): "I kissed her. It was either that or slug her."

Beauty: "Oh, m-c, what's going on? I'm so confused. The whole world is spinning!"

m-c: "Well, that's good. If it was flat all the Chinese would fall off."

Beauty: "It's all so terrible, m-c. I'm about to black-out from stress."

M-C: "Go ahead and faint. I'll catch you on the first bounce."

She does. He doesn't. Instead, m-c leaves Beauty lying in a pool of sweat.

-cut to- Paul Saltman's office. M-C meets with the vice-chancellor. (Voice-over): "I had decided to take my search to the top. I walked into Saltman's office. The first thing I noticed was his jaw. It looked like a park bench. We shook hands. He had a grip that would have bent a girder. I said 'hello' in a voice that sounded like Rex Reed with his mouth full of soda crackers."

PS: "What can I do for you?"

(voice-over): "He spoke like he was applying vaseline between my legs."

m-c: "I need your signature."

PS: "I don't care about your's or anyone else's needs!" (voice-over): "The vaseline turned into Vik's Vapo Rub."

m-c: "I know about your surfing accident."

PS: "May I borrow your pen?"

(voice-over): "But again it was not the right signature."

-cut to- Black's Beach. M-C seen surfing. He paddles to the beach, takes off his wetsuit, and spends the next eight hours lying in the sun. (voice-over): "I went to the beach. The heroin was good."

-cut to- The chancellor's house. Follow shot of m-c walking through the long halls until... (voice-over): "I came into a room that had the general air of having been decorated by a parole from a nut house. The dominant color was monkey-bottom blue. 'Tex' sat at a desk about the size of the badminton court. His composed grey face was long enough to wrap twice around his neck. He wore a two-tone leisure jacket that would have been revolting on a zebra."

m-c: "Your signature, sir?"

Tex: "Sorry sonny."

m-c: "OK, then explain what you mean by Murphy's Law!"

Tex: "Where do I sign?"

(voice-over): "But again, no bueno. I was beginning to feel like a short length of chewed string."

-cut to- The first Election Day in six years at UCSD... (voice-over): "Revelle Plaza was like a piece of over-ripe fruit covered with ants. Jim Leifer barely had time to win before I approached him. It was the same old replay. But Leifer kept trying to recruit me for his cabinet. I was forced to level him with a Bolo punch that would have knocked the hind leg off of an elephant."

Pres: "You haven't seen the last of me."

m-c: "No, but the first of you turns my stomach."

-cut to- M-C huddled alone in a cement corner beneath the Central Library, his typewriter between his legs, the "DIPLOMA" down there too... (voice-over): "My quest had become as futile as the search for an open carbon bond. I felt I belonged at UCSD as much as a pearl onion in a banana split. I was the page from yesterday's calendar crumpled at the bottom of the waste basket. I had been snorting coke since the top of the page, but it hardly helped. My signature search had slowed to a turtle's gallop."

-cut to- A very ugly woman approaching m-c... (voice-over): "Yechhh! The sight of her sent my stomach into a fit of jumping jacks. She had a face that would have stopped a runaway horse. She looked as exclusive as a mailbox. But I was desperate."

m-c: "May I please have your signature?"

Ugly: "Sure, if you'd like to earn it."

m-c: "What do you think I am, a mercenary?"

Ugly: "Hopefully something much worse."

m-c: "You mean?"

Ugly: "Uh-hugh."

m-c: "After you."

(voice-over): "I was trapped. I felt as if I had just made up my mind to drive off a cliff. But only three inches passed before I slipped a pen into Horse Face's hand and jacked her into a name-signing state that filled in the dotted line. IT WAS THE ONE! I withdrew my deposit before it was cashed."

m-c: "Sorry, ma'am, but my job is finished."

Ugly: "Hells Bells, you men are all the same."

m-c: "So are all women - after the first nine."

Ugly: "You're about as honest as a slot machine."

(voice-over): "She almost got me to go back to her with that. But..."

m-c: "Listen, I want to tell you one thing I've learned since being at UCSD. THERE IS NO TRUTH UNDER A EUCALYPTUS TREE. That's a fact. See ya."

-cut to- FINE.

failure to serve University needs and the lack of student representation in any previous negotiations.

R.H. Hamstra, chairman of the University Planning Group, read a previously-unknown letter written by "a group of faculty members calling themselves a planning group" to the developers agreeing that commercial construction on the La Jolla Village site would not exceed 350,000 square feet and residential construction would equal 490,000 square feet, with a minimum of 147,000 square feet.

The specialty center is planned to be 350,000 square feet. Judith Monk, an active member in the University Planning Group, said after the council meeting, "It was completely out of order for Hamstra to make such a statement that the letter should be binding for the good of the University plan."

UCSD's Joe Greenstein Makes Canadian Nationals

by Jon Halperin
Sports Editor

The Place: Montreal, Canada
The Time: 2:15 am Eastern Standard Time
The Date: May 7 1977

Joe Greenstein, UCSD student, leaves Montreal's famous Limelight bar and promptly finds but the talented junior had already impressed head coach Sam Elitas enough to be named one of the final 10 players on the squad.

Greenstein was picked from a contingent of 47 players, the top Jewish ballplayers in the country. In fact, Greenstein, who champion Marquette), all ACC guard Brad Davis of Maryland and all CCAA guard Lewis Cohen would be his chief competition for starting position. He opted to forgo his trip to New York in favor of a better chance of starting for the Canadians.

High School Standout

Joe Greenstein was born in Toronto, Canada but moved west to Los Angeles with his parents in 1962. He prepped at US Grant high school, where as a senior (can you believe this) played center on the varsity squad. Grant won the league title that year, but ran up against Crenshaw High in the first round and was eliminated. Crenshaw is the home of Marques Johnson, Sudden Sam Smith, and Gregory Johns to name a few.

In his three years at UCSD, two with the varsity and one with the junior varsity, Greenstein came to be known as "Jumping Joe" because of his amazing leaping ability. It was this facet of his game which allowed him to play center in high school, despite his 6'2" height.

Always a terrific rebounder and an aggressive defender, Greenstein can usually be found in the middle of the action. In one game this past season, he almost caused a mass riot as he took an ill aimed swing at a Southern California College player. Both benches emptied, but no major altercation developed.

It was this aggressive style of play which ultimately sold Canadian head coach Sam Elitas and impressed the Americans.

Team Leaves in July

Greenstein will arrive in Montreal on June 26 and will go through two weeks of practice before taking off to Israel. His shoulder is fine now but his knees, which have always been questionable, may only last through the summer. That would be too bad, UCSD basketball could sure use Joe Greenstein.

UCSD basketball player Joe Greenstein out why Quebec drivers are the worst in the continent. Greenstein's rental car is broadsided by a vehicle that has just run a red light. In the process, he receives torn shoulder ligaments; an injury that almost costs him the experience of a lifetime.

Just hours earlier, he had qualified for the Canadian National Maccabian team which will compete in Israel this summer. The injury caused him to miss the second day of tryouts, grew up in Toronto and played his high school ball for Grant high school in North Hollywood, almost played for the Americans.

In a west coast tryout held a week earlier at UCLA, Greenstein, along with Joel Kramer of San Diego State, Lewis Cohen of Cal State San Luis Obispo, and two others were named to go to New York for the final cuts of the American squad.

However, when Greenstein learned that Gary Rosenberger (starting guard for national

by Don Armstrong
Staff Writer

This man may never be a baseball legend. Homerun hitters become legends. He simply wants to make it to the major leagues and hit for a high average. However, this should be good enough to put Gary Patton, UCSD's senior, first baseman/catcher, in the Triton Hall of Fame.

His goal may seem lofty, yet Patton has surprisingly good credentials. He also has a definite confidence and maturity which seems to spell success. Patton gives much of the credit for his self assurance to UCSD confidence instructor Bob Moss. Yet, "he has," as he puts it, "always had pro aspirations."

Patton was a two time All-City selection at Castlemont High in Oakland. His credentials were good enough to make the Kansas City Royals want to draft him out of high school and send him to the Arizona Instructional League. However, an uncooperative high school coach discouraged the Kansas City scouts. So, Patton enrolled at UCSD. He chose UCSD in order to "get a good education and prepare for the other parts of life."

This past summer, Patton played on the highly competitive Alaskan Collegiate League, a league which has helped develop many present major league ball players. When given a chance to play, Patton performed well, but the chances were few. He attributes this to the Alaskan League coach's low regard for UCSD's level of competition. Still, Patton does not regret having attended UCSD. He agrees with the philosophy that college sports should be intended for learning and enjoyment. Yet, he tells of having to push and inspire himself because many of his teammates were just out to have fun. Gary Patton takes baseball very seriously.

Professional baseball's draft of free agents will take place in early June. Having batted over .350 the past two seasons, Patton is confident about being drafted. A muscular 6 feet, 195 pounds, he looks the part of a major leaguer.

In spite of all this, an intangible is probably Patton's most notable characteristic. He is known for his strong character. He also has a very mature attitude, a definite wisdom about life. In spite of his athletic accomplishments, Patton says he tries not to "dwell on past successes." Instead, he "looks to the future." With the bat, glove, and mind of Gary Patton, you have to suspect that that future will be bright.

Editors Note: Patton was not selected in the primary phase of the pro draft, (LA Times June 8) He can now opt to be a free agent or continue his baseball training in a semipro league.

Committee Formed for Vice-chancellor Search

A committee comprised of administrators, faculty, students and staff will meet this summer to make recommendations to Chancellor McElroy on the person to fill the Vice-chancellor of Student Affairs position this fall.

The committee, to be chaired by chemistry professor Murray Goodman, will probably not start the actual interview process to select a successor for George Murphy until July, McElroy, who picked the committee, said Wednesday.

The delay is caused by affirmative action regulations that require posting of the job opening for one month, McElroy said.

When Murphy, who held the vice-chancellor and dean of student affairs post since 1968, resigned in April, McElroy promised a nation-wide search for a replacement. Physical Education department chairman Howard Hunt will hold the interim position until September.

The committee's student members are ASUCSD president Jeff Leifer, advisory committee on Student Fee Programs co-chair Marsha Harris and affirmative action committee member Donna Armstrong.

Third College Provost Joseph Watson and Fourth College Provost Lea Rudee will represent the campus' provosts.

Two faculty members were selected by McElroy, from a list of six presented by the Academic Senate's Committee on Committees. They are Goodman and Paul Libby, an AMES professor.

Former PE chairman Ted Forbes, campus budget office Bob Oakes, Affirmative Action Committee chairman Nick Atma, Student Health Services director Robert Allen and Joyce Hittenberger, of the Office of Graduate Studies and Research, are also on the committee.

The letter sent by UC President Saxon to 37 corporations active in South Africa (Triton Times, June 6) demonstrated that the Board of Regents are concerned only with the safety of its South African investments.

"The Regents' questions in the letter completely sidestepped the issues we (the students) are concerned with. The Regents are only concerned with keeping the system intact. We want to give South African back to the blacks," Holland said.

The students planned an all-night vigil for last night, with a candlelight march through the campus. They planned to end the vigil at dawn at the Chancellor's home.

Under-the-Table Payoffs to Student Athletes Told

school senior supposed to know that what he is being offered is illegal, and that it might be a good idea to get the offer in writing?"

Different Ways of Pay-Offs
For those who finally get the pay-offs, a source said, they see it in many forms. Jobs, for instance, that have been arranged to pay $10 per hour for playground supervision, the use of a car, new clothing and women are often used inducements. "The top two or three basketball players for major schools receive these things from the school, the alumni or a sponsor."

Sources said that the top college athletes are also given extra advantages in many of the nation's classrooms, beginning with extra tutoring and sometimes going as far as hiring someone to take the athletes' tests. One athlete is said to have been enrolled at a junior college where he accumulated about eight units, and he later admitted to friends that he never even knew the location of the school. "Professors usually know what's going on," a source said.

Though the "under the table" pay-offs have been mainly limited to men in the past, it was indicated that the occurrences with women are growing, particularly on the east and west coasts in basketball.

Few performers are willing to talk about the illegal inducements, and when they do, they often deny them. Ed Ratleff, now a guard for the Houston Rockets and formerly a star at Long Beach State, has said, "I played...for three years and made All-American two years. I know I didn't receive anything and I didn't ask for anything. Now if an All-American didn't receive anything, who else are they gonna give it to?"

Who paid for Dwight Stones' shirt?

"Subsidies" By Different Means

Regarding the college and club athletes who are paid by promoters to attend meets, one source said, "Someone has to subsidize the people who are supposed to be amateurs. The Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) has to turn its head, hundred dollars."

A source pointed to Americans Stones ("How do you think he bought a new condo and a Porsche?"), and Al Fuerback, French hurdler Guy Drut and New Zealand miler Walker as some of the richest from the promoter's practices.

Recent NCAA and AAU crackdowns on the illegal activities have "only a random effect," one source said. "The pay-offs are on the rise in many places, especially in the major schools where sports is a way of life."

"Some schools are now being priced out of the bidding war."

Vandals Enter UJS Office, Deface Posters

Vandals have broken in to the office of the Union of Jewish Students for the second time this year, and defaced posters with paint, according to UJS representative Eric Fishbein.

"We have no idea who is doing this," Fishbein said. "We haven't been approached personally by them—they apparently don't want to talk with us."

"It's reminiscent of the Nazi Germany years." The defacing occurred early this week, according to Fishbein. There was no indication yesterday of action by the UCSD police.

NEW YORK TO LA. ROUND TRIP by train.. $305 by plane.. $415 by Trailways.. $150!

It's a simple fact. No matter where you want to go over Spring Break, nobody can get you there and back for less than Trailways. As a matter of fact, right now, we'll take you anywhere in the U.S.A. for only $75.00. That's less than the price of a good term paper.

And talk about comfort. Every Trailways is climate controlled and equipped with reclining fabric seats. And unlike Greyhound, we have adjustable headrests and footrests. You'll fall asleep so fast you'll think you're still in class.

But don't believe us. Ask anybody who's ridden both a Trailways and a Greyhound. They'll tell you that it doesn't take a Ph.D to figure out Trailways gives you more.

Call your local Trailways Terminal for complete schedules and information on all our bargain fares. Because when it comes to saving money this Spring, we can all use a break.

Students Return from New Hampshire The Jailed are Back: "We're United"

by Laura Richter Staff Writer

Randy Erickson and Brian Ritter: two UCSD students who were fined and jailed in May as a result of their participation in the protest of the construction of Seabrook Nuclear Power Plant in New Hampshire.

Erickson and Ritter told of their personal commitment to the is redirected to Boston industry.

Ritter stressed that the organizational emphasis of the Clamshell Alliance is strictly peaceful, and he demonstrated the process of non-violence training with a film of the demonstration.

Many Protest

The site, 40 miles north of Boston, drew large numbers of criminal trespass, took place beginning May 1 and continued into the night. Authorities loaded demonstrators into school buses, and placed them in an armory, where they awaited mass trials. The sentencing for the protestors was 15 days in jail and a $100 fine.

The first several days of the 13 spent at the armory the treatment was termed "poor" and the food inadequate. "The only reason we survived was because we were prepared for a four day occupation of the nuke site," said Ritter. Both agreed that the conditions improved considerably during the remainder of their retention.

A "Tribal Dance"

Worthy of anthropological note was a massive "tribal dance," filmed with 650 people during a full moon at the time of the imprisonment. Said Ritter, "It continued for an hour and 40 minutes and the guard was petrified during the entire time. He thought we were going to make a break for it!"

Brian Ritter interviewed at a press conference Wednesday.

halting of nuclear power, which prompted their April 3400 mile trek to the East, at a Wednesday press conference in the Student Center. As members of the citizen's anti-nuclear power group, the Clamshell Alliance, the two participated in the non-violent demonstration and found it "a very encouraging experience."

"We're united against it," said Ritter of nuclear construction. He felt that there was more at stake than the safety hazards involved with nuclear power, citing possible violations of civil liberties and personal freedom. He said that those who benefited from nuclear power were utility companies, whose profits would double as a result. He explained that there is a 30 percent energy surplus in New Hampshire and most of the excess protestors from the city area. The crowd numbered 2500 at its height, and 1800 persons actually marched into the area surrounding the plant boundaries on April 30 and spent the night there.

On hand were state and local policemen, from the various municipalities in New Hampshire and the surrounding New England states. Later, the National Guard supervised those who had been arrested. "The National Guard was nice!" laughed Ritter.

Ritter felt that the additional presence of a mounted volunteer posse was "in a sense, used to intimidate people." Erickson added, though, that "The police could not believe that that many people could come together without any violence."
