L. G. MAXWELL, PROPRIETOR.

THIS HOTEL, perched on a beautiful knoll in the very center of this classic valley, and at a height of nearly 700 feet above sea-level, commands one of the grandest and most varied panoramas of California scenery. The distance from the coast being some fourteen miles, the ocean breezes, which prevail throughout the day, are here entirely robbed of their harshness and humidity. As a summer and winter resort the Vale of Escondido stands unrivalled. Terminus of Santa Fe railway, 22 miles from Oceanside and 35 miles from San Diego. ~~48~~ Lands cheap and fertile.

HOTEL ESCONDIDO

L. G. MAXWELL, Proprietor.

The town of Escondido is situated at the terminus of the Southern California railway, 22 miles from Oceanside, 35 miles north of San Diego and 14 miles from the ocean, at an elevation of some 700 feet. The climate is an intermingling of mountain and sea air, making it desirable for both the weak and strong. Lands produce fruits, grain, vegetables, etc., etc., and are within reach of all.
