A.I.D.S. Clusters at LGBT Center

Experts identify pillow fort as possible source of unprecedented infection levels; administrators seek second opinion.

IN IT TO WIN IT

A band of UCSD Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer, Questioning, Intersex Alliance members — alongside supporters from the Hillcrest Medical Center — gathered outside Chancellor Marye Anne Foxe's office Wednesday to demand swift administrative response to a recent report that identified high levels of HIV in the student organization's office space.

Infected protestors dragged their weak bodies across campus toward Foxe's office, meekly injecting each other with emergency doses and touting signs with messages such as: "WE WANT AN EDUCATION, NOT A.I.D.S.!", "MY STUDENT ORG SHOULDN'T KILL ME" and "A.I.D.S. [does not equal] HIGHER EDUCATION."

The report was released in January 2008 by gender studies professor Man DeRin, who said he was inspired to conduct research when he noticed an unusual sticky substance oozing from the center's second-story window.

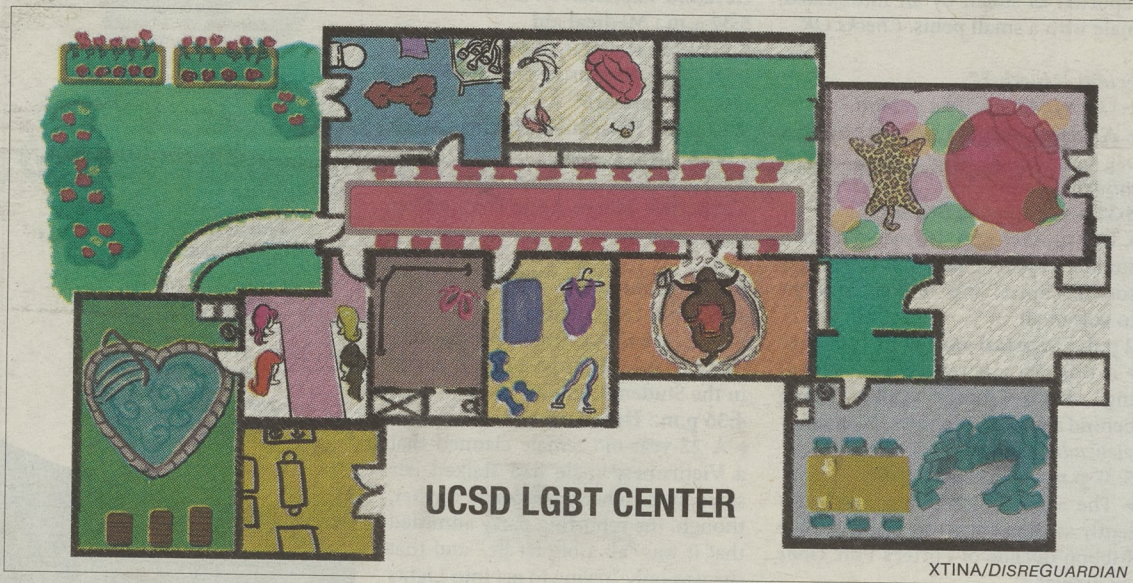

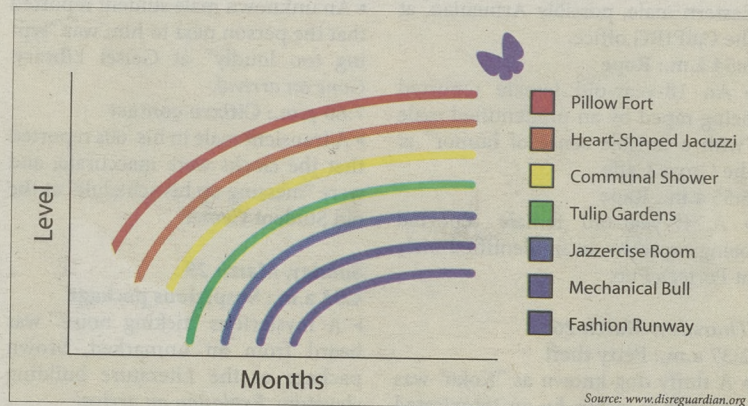

"It was really gross," he said.

After phoning the LGBT office to report a Kylie Minogue sighting at Rock Bottom, DeRin said he entered the vacated premises and ran tests on the majority of "suspicious" surfaces throughout the Student Center office. The highest levels — at 4.3 percent density — were detected within the pillow fort structure in the conference room.

After one year and two months of intense thinking, Foxe summoned international goose-feather expert Nasiche "Born in the Locust Season" Shakur on a red-eye flight from his African laboratory. Shakur is currently in the process of running extensive tests on a sampling of feathers from the fort. Meanwhile, the structure has been quarantined with yellow caution tape.

"Eight gays, three bisexuals, five transgenders and four-and-a-half intersex members have been diagnosed so far," said LGBT co-president Ben Dover. "And I'm not really sure about queer or questioning members, or what that means really, but they could very well be suffering too."

For reasons that remain unknown, no lesbians have been affected so far.

Ron "Lil' Queenie" Poindexter, who is currently lobbying for Asexuality to be fairly represented within the organization's acronym, said he is similarly outraged at the university's delay in addressing the A.I.D.S. crisis.

"This is no coincidence. It's time the university took down the fort," Poindexter said. "And that fugly yellow tape."

Friday Night Movie:

Mysterious Skin

LGBT RC, Conference Room

April 10th, 2009 | 4:30 PM

In 1981 Kansas, eight-year-olds Neil McCormick and Brian Lackey are sexually abused by their baseball coach. Brian reacts to what happens by developing psychogenic amnesia and blocking out the event, for many years suffering from violent nose bleeds. As Brian grows up he becomes a rather asexual, geekish boy, and glimpses of memories in recurring dreams make him believe he has been abducted by aliens. Neil, who had begun developing feelings for older men as a child (after reading his mother's adult magazines and watching his mother perform fellatio on an older boyfriend of hers), goes on to become a prostitute. When Brian turns 19 years old, he meets Neil for the first time since childhood and they uncover the secrets they share as well as beginning to heal one another.

travel to Martha's Vineyard for a weekend wedding getaway. Drama ensues as one-by-one their relationships start to crack under the pressure of closer examination. Newly successful screenwriter Noah looks to his friends for advice as he prepares to move his relationship to a more serious level while struggling to keep his first studio movie alive. But the friends are of little help as they juggle their own issues. Elder statesmen Chance and Eddie attempt to scratch their seven-year itch but worry their marriage has permanently lost its spark. And playboy Ricky flaunts his barely legal college student fling in the face of his monogamous friends but hides a surprising secret that threatens to rock the house. Add to the mix Alex's crazy-making wedding prep, a closeted superstar rapper, a high-maintenance studio exec, and a surprise visitor and you've got the makings of a hilarious and poignant romantic comedy.

Sexual Assault in the LGBT Community: Dialogue, Action and Ending the Violence

LGBT Resource Center, Conference Room

-- Wednesday, April 8th, 2009 | 5:00PM

Please join the professional staff of the LGBT Resource Center as we partner with the UC San Diego's Sexual Assault and Violence Prevention Resource Center (SARC) to create a safe place for dialogue on sexual assault within the LGBT community. The complexities of sexual assault in the LGBT community, especially the dynamics of outness, silence and fear, create roles for both LGBT folks and our allies to end the violence. Your participation will guide the dialogue about issues related to transgender violence and the violence experienced by bisexual, lesbian and gay men. Please join for dialogue and action.
