Art, Activism, and Academia: Critical Gender Studies Perspectives on Intersectional Resistance

The CGS Program and the Nicholas Papadopoulos Endowed Lecture proudly present:

Black Feminist Genealogies: The Making of SOLHOTLex

Wednesday, May 31st, 10-11:30am
Women's Center, Conference Room
(Food will be served)

Dr. Chamara Jewel Kwakye and Mekha McGuire will discuss their process of expanding SOLHOT from its original location in Urbana-Champaign, Illinois to Lexington, Kentucky. They will answer questions on how frameworks like womanism and post-colonial feminist theory inform engagement around solidarity in SOLHOT-Lex and organizing Black girls while examining what critically engaged organizing looks like when the voices of Black girls are in symphony with the rest of the world's resistance struggles.

In addition to core funding from the Nicholas Papadopoulos Endowment and the Critical Gender Studies Program, this event is generously co-sponsored by the UC Consortium for Black Studies in California and by a Climate Grant from the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion. Any views or opinions expressed in this program are solely those of the speaker(s) and/or organizer(s) and do not necessarily represent those of the Office of the Vice Chancellor.

TRUMP'S WHITE HOUSE WON'T ACKNOWLEDGE JUNE AS LGBT PRIDE MONTH, EVEN AS EVERYONE ELSE DOES

BY CLAIRE SHAFFER ON 6/5/17 AT 4:31 PM

After years of precedent set by Barack Obama, President Donald Trump is breaking from tradition by failing to recognize June as LGBT Pride Month.

On the final day of May, the president issued five separate proclamations, choosing June to honor Caribbean-American heritage, African-American music, homeownership, the outdoors and the ocean. (Reporters and comedians alike noted the irony of the last two, in light of Trump pulling the U.S. out of the Paris Agreement last week.) An acknowledgement of June as a historic month for LGBT people was nowhere to be found.

LGBT advocates and former White House staffers took to Twitter to criticize the lack of recognition. Shin Inouye, a former member of Obama's communication staff, said Trump "couldn't be bothered" to recognize LGBT Pride Month and expressed that, given his record, "maybe it's for the best."

✓@tyleroakley

june is LGBTQ+ pride month
trump says it's national homeownership month prove you care, @realdonaldtrump 7:13 PM - 1 Jun 2017

The celebration of LGBT pride commemorates the Stonewall riots, which occurred near the end of June 1969 in New York City and are often considered the beginning of the modern LGBT rights movement.

As gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender rights have gained visibility and progress in recent years, LGBT Pride Month has begun to receive recognition at the federal level. President Bill Clinton was the first to officially declare June as Gay and Lesbian Pride Month, issuing a proclamation on June 2, 2000. After President George W. Bush failed to recognize LGBT pride during his terms, the Obama White House issued an annual proclamation for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Pride Month, beginning in 2011, according to the White House archives.

Although Trump has yet to issue an official proclamation, Politico reports that several federal agencies, such as the Pentagon, are hosting LGBT pride events, just as they did during Obama's two terms. Still, the lack of a presidential acknowledgment has forced these agencies to stop publishing any LGBT Pride-related documentation or posters indefinitely.

On June 1, Trump's oldest daughter, Ivanka Trump, tweeted her support of Pride 2017 and the LGBT community.

Ivanka Trump

Logging back on after Shavuot, wishing everyone a joyful #Pride2017. This month we celebrate and honor the #LGBTQ community.

6:21 PM - 1 Jun 2017

The tweet was met with a backlash from members of the community. Lucas Grindley, editor-in-chief of LGBT publication The Advocate, wrote in an op-ed that recognizing LGBT Pride Month in a tweet doesn't make her, or anyone in the Trump administration, an "ally." He noted Ivanka's silence as reports came in—twice—that her father planned to sign a "religious freedom" executive order, which would implicitly allow discrimination against LGBT people on the basis of religion.

"Don't call yourself a supporter if you haven't told a roomful of reporters that a 'religious freedom' order is tantamount to legalizing discrimination," wrote Grindley.

The Trump administration is not challenging in court a federal judge's injunction that bars Title IX, the federal law prohibiting gender discrimination in schools, from applying to transgender students. So while Trump has previously issued vocal support for LGBT rights, such as in his 2016 speech at the Republican National Convention, the actions of his administration have mainly garnered criticism, not support, from activists.

Sparks fly between DeVos, Dem on private school protections for LGBT students

BY LYDIA WHEELER - 06/06/17 11:56 AM EDT 723

Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore.) had a fiery exchange with Education Secretary Betsy DeVos Tuesday over whether she will prohibit private schools that receive federal funds from discriminating against LGBT students.

DeVos said schools that receive federal funds must follow federal laws, but Merkley pointed out that the federal laws in this area are foggy, referencing the February decision DeVos and Attorney General Jeff Sessions made to rescind Obama-era guidance directing schools to allow transgender students to use the bathroom that corresponds with their gender identity.

"On areas where the law is unsettled, this department is not going to be issuing decrees," DeVos said during a Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on the Education Department's proposed budget.

"That is a matter for Congress and the courts to settle."
But Merkley hammered her on the issue of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender student rights. "Is discrimination going to be allowed or not allowed under your understanding?" he pushed.

DeVos repeated herself in response. "I'm going back to what I said earlier," she said.

"Well what you said earlier didn't help us since this in an area of unsettled law," Merkley retorted.

Merkley then asked if discrimination on the basis of religion would be allowed in charter or private schools under DeVos' school voucher program.

"Again, for schools that receive federal funds, federal law must be followed," she said.

"What is that law in this case, to your understanding?" Merkley asked sharply. "Will such religious discrimination be accepted? Answer the question!"

When DeVos again repeated her previous answer, Merkley asked that the record show the secretary of Education refused to affirm that she would put forward a program that would ban discrimination based on students' gender identity or sexuality or ban discrimination based on religion.

"Senator, that's not what I said," DeVos protested. "Discrimination in any form is wrong. I don't support discrimination in any form."
