You are welcome to attend!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

So June is here and another year has passed for all of us Oceanids members. But with my summer schedule already including 3 weddings the future looks bright and happy.

Many thanks again to Margaret Acampora and Judy Skelton for our spring luncheon.

Thanks to Jean Lindsley for making arrangements for the awards. And though I cannot list everyone here, I want to thank all of you for making this such a great group to be involved with.

I look forward to working with you next year. For now, as Roy Rogers used to sing, "Happy Trails to You" this summer. Carole

Who has seen this book?

We know that copies of a particular novel were read and owned by many people who knew the Bullards at Scripps in the 1950's. Our efforts to locate a copy of the out of print novel have been unsuccessful.

Thanks for any help. Regards, Deborah.

The Scripps Institution of Oceanography Library and its Archives is seeking one or more copies of Margaret Bullard's novel "Love Goes West: An Entertainment" (London: H. Hamilton, 1953). Margaret was the wife of Sir Edward Bullard, who spent summers at SIO in the 1950's. Her novel is about the personal lives and interactions of a group of people working at an oceanographic station in California, and is thus loosely based on SIO. The SIO Library and its Archives have a modest collection of novels associated with Scripps and have not been able to locate this particular novel. You can see our web exhibit on novels connected with SIO at <http://scilib.ucsd.edu/sio/archives/siohstry/novels.html>

With information, please, contact Deborah Day, SIO Archivist, at 858-534-5970 or Peter Brueggeman, SIO Library Director, at 858-534-1230

Sabbaticalhomes.com is a web site launched last June to help academics on sabbatical leaves, research trips or exchange programs find suitable housing. There are currently 500 listings from 16 countries on four continents. Scholars can post their homes for rent and/or exchange, list their accommodation search, or search for what other academics have posted in the database. Because professors have very specific accommodation requirements working around school calendars instead of normal 12 month calendars, this is a service that others are finding quite useful. You can browse free of charge and the web site notes that listing is free until the one-thousandth posting.

Check out : www.sabbaticalhomes.com

International Center Kitchen Renovation Update:

Due to a long-standing need for a truly workable facility for Friday Café, "Cooking in America" plus many other fund-raising projects for the International Center, the kitchen needs to be remodeled and modernized.

With the help of a generous gift received, we at the Center intend to make this a reality this year.

But we need more funds. The project has to comply with building codes and University requirements, and that also adds to the cost. We are appealing to the membership of Oceanids to donate to this project in order for it to become a reality. Any donation to the kitchen fund will be greatly appreciated.

These donations are tax-deductible and will be matched $ for $ by Oceanids' funds (up to $1,000.00.)

You can give your check to Sallye Krause at the Oceanids' Spring Luncheon on Thursday, May 24th or send your contribution to:

Mary McIlwain,
6662 Avenida Manana,
La Jolla, CA 92037-6228

THANKS!!

Volunteer Opportunities

Each September, volunteer Orientation Assistants (OAs) welcome newly arrived international students and scholars to the UCSD campus and provide the kind of assistance most helpful to new arrivals: orientation to the campus and community, help with housing, and an active connection to the information and resources available at the International Center. Oceanids, Friends of the International Center, AEIA Tutors, and community members, along with study abroad returnees and international students and scholars, have enjoyed participating in this program in the past.

Volunteer OAs are needed again this year. OAs attend an all-day training session on Monday, August 27, and make a commitment of eight hours a week for the following three weeks. OAs also help host a Welcome Dinner on Tuesday, September 18. The International Center provides resources and training materials for the program. As a former OA described the program, "You will meet people from all over the world and provide a service they will never forget."

Qualifications include good communications and problem solving skills, cross-cultural sensitivity, patience and empathy. Familiarity with the UCSD campus is helpful, but not required.

Jane Reeder, Outreach and Volunteer
Programs Coordinator

For further information and an application form, contact the International Center's Front Office or call (858)534-3730.

OCEANIDS' INTEREST GROUPS

Interest Groups are the backbone of our Oceanids organization. They are here to meet the many varied needs of Faculty Families, especially those new to the UCSD campus, and the community. If you do not find an activity you would like to participate in, please contact Carole Ziegler, President @ 619-297-0798. If five or more Oceanids wish to start a new group, please let Carole know so we can inform other members. All we ask is that your members be Oceanids. If one has no affiliation with UCSD, she/he may belong to any of the many Friends groups on campus, as membership in a Friends organization allows one to join Oceanids. If you are not yet a member of Oceanids, please consider joining us today by calling Eleanor turn Suden at (858) 587-8865.

Letter from France

Somehow I expected to have plenty of time to write to you regularly while living the peaceful life deeply ensconced in the rural Lauragais (just south of Toulouse). However, my hyper-active friend Helene has me visit every medieval village and Cathare castle in the area, and makes me walk for hours along unmarked trails through the muddy fields, woods and hills that make up the Lauragais.

It has been raining a lot since we arrived here eight weeks ago. We did not find a house to rent for the three months we are here and stayed in a "chambre d'hote" (bed and breakfast) in the "Chateau de Varennes" (a 16th century castle, beautifully furnished, breakfast served on Limoges and Cristoffle) until we found a "gite-rural" (furnished apartment, minus sheets and towels) in a lesser castle, "Chateau de Lafont", whose owner loves to decorate in clashing patterns and random furniture, for example a huge bellows as coffee table. It is set in a beautiful "Parc" (wooded grounds) and is VERY quiet.

The fun part of staying in a gite is that you have a kitchen and thus can buy all the wonderful food available on the Saturday mornig market in Lavaur or Revel. The chatelaine at Les Varennes taught me how to prepare a local dish, the cassoulet, a casserole made with large white beans, confit de canard (duck-preserve), fresh Tolosan sausage (first grilled over an open fire) and tons of duck fat and pork rinds! This lesson took place in her gigantic kitchen located in the caves of the castle with a fireplace large enough to roast a steer.

The people in the Southwest are very friendly. Whenever Richard and I stroll through a village we find someone to chat with, and invariably we get good advice on what to see, where to eat or find the best bread to buy. It is wonderful to be here and we hope to come back rejuvenated and full of fresh ideas.

Best regards to all, Sylvia Bal Somerville

Ellen B. Weller - Recipient of the Frieda Daum Urey Scholarship 2000-2001

Music is magic. There has never been a time in my own memory when I was not somehow involved in music. I played piano at age 3, flute in junior high, took composition and played saxophone in high school. I attended California State University at Northridge, which still offers a fine jazz program, and I was placed in their highest ensembles. I was zipping through the Bachelor's of Music program in Performance. Everything seemed to be falling into place.

My bubble burst, however. I developed acute tendonitis. Hand surgery failed, and I shifted my major to composition. I continued my education at Queens College in New York City, where I graduated Summa Cum Laude in composition, and began the graduate program in composition. However, Mother Nature had planned another job for me, and I found myself alternating copying music parts with nursing my first son, Danny. I cut back to part time school, but after my second boy, Charlie, was born, we decided that it was too much to continue with my Master's program, so I dropped it, finished with everything but the final Thesis composition.

In 1988, faced with huge debt, two kids, no real job, I gave up the dream of "making it" in New York, and we moved back to San Diego, where I worked as office manager and computer specialist. I was swimming in a sea of choices, with no apparent direction other than getting by. But once again, music drew me back into its realm. I eventually finished my Master's work, and I graduated in 1992. Knowing that my two young boys were watching made the experience so much richer.

My husband now tunes pianos for the San Diego School District, enabling me to go back to school. I balanced school with being home at 2:00 for my kids after school, since I had missed their early years while I was working full-time. I developed and presented several creative music and jazz programs to schools all over San Diego. I rediscovered the magical qualities of music through teaching children. My students taught me more than I could ever have learned on my own, and they sparked a curiosity about the role music plays in our lives.

After a hiatus of six years out of college, I entered UCSD's music program in Critical Studies and Experimental Practices, I found to my surprise, people just like myself - musical explorers trying to understand music's role in our lives and in the lives of others. I met my life mentor, the late Dr. Margaret Dilling, who opened the door to a field that was custom made for me: Ethnomusicology, the study of music in culture.

Now, I am working on finishing my dissertation following a project I worked on in conjunction with the City of San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture. We put together a directory of world musicians and dancers of the many traditions practiced by San Diego's rich and diverse population, many of whom are immigrants, others rediscovering and continuing their ethnic heritage. This work continues, and I have given papers detailing this process, which is being admired and copied by other municipalities across the country. The relationship between a large American city such as San Diego, and its immigrant music-makers forms the core of my dissertation, which is currently titled, "Needs, expectations and desires: Government Support for Ethnic Music-making in San Diego."

I work as pianist/musician for the San Diego Society for Humanistic Judaism, I perform Jewish music with the Second Avenue Klezmer Ensemble, and I volunteer at public schools. We have formed the Weller Family Band, a hard-hitting New York style jazz band featuring my husband Bob on piano, 14-year old Charlie on drums and trumpet, 17-year old Danny on double bass and me on sax and flute. We recently played to a large audience in Balboa Park as part of their Jazz in the Park series, and will be cutting a CD this month. My house may look like a disaster, with drumset, piano, bass, amplifiers scattered across the living room floor, but there is a sense of magic, a connection to another world we create together and share with others.

I have learned two things in life: apparent failure almost always leads to opportunity, and what you give to other people always comes back to you ten-fold, maybe not right away, but eventually. Receiving the Frieda Daum Urey Scholarship is a prime example of those principles. Your generosity has contributed significantly to the attainment of a life-long dream of mine, now within reach. Upon completion of my degree in the Fall of 2001, I plan to continue to make music, and to act as facilitator for others to create and perform their own special and unique music, whether children or adults, ethnic or classical music, improvisors or Broadway shows. I have much to give back to the San Diego community, and organizations such as the Oceanids blaze the trail by their example of giving needed support to unlikely candidates such as myself. The real thanks to you will be in whatever small amount I can give to others through music; however, for the short term, I wish to leave you with a tiny bit of magic, created from the bond between you and me. It will say "thank you" in the language I know best - music.

“It Takes a Women’s Club to Make the Academic Village”

Southland Women’s Conference hosted by California Institute of Technology on April 18, 2001.

What a wonderful title for the 2001 Southland Women’s Conference! Oceanids Barbara Starkey and Maxine Bloor attended along with representatives from 10 Southland California Universities and Colleges. Dr. David Baltimore, President of California Institute of Technology welcomed the participants at the opening of the Conference. Valerie Elachi, President of the Cal Tech Women’s Club, presented a panel discussion entitled “It Takes a Women’s Club to Build an Academic Community”. The participants included Dr. Alice S. Huang, the wife of President David Baltimore. She is a senior councilor for External Relations for California Institute of Technology. Dr. Huang’s professional work is in the field of virology. Dr. Huang explained how the Cal Tech Women’s Club provided a basis of friendship and connections with the community when she and her husband first arrived at Cal Tech a few years ago.

The Cal Tech Women’s Club maintains many of the same activities and goals and interest groups as does Oceanids. They have experienced growth and challenges with the continuing evolution of women’s clubs on their campuses. Also they offer friendship and support throughout the academic community and welcome members from faculty, staff and academic programs.

Presently there is no campus volunteering to host the 2002 meeting of the Southland Women’s Conference. Thus Roberta Weaver, University of Southern California, initiated an email communication network comprising a representative from each of the campuses participating in this year’s Conference. A designated representative from each of the 10 participating campuses will receive BEAR FACTS. In return Carole Ziegler, our President, will receive copies of newsletters that are published on the other campuses.

Further announcements about plans for the 2002 meeting of the Southland Women’s Conference will be published in BEAR FACTS as they are received.

This year it is possible to donate either

$250 for a Sustaining Membership or

$500 for a Life-Membership

have the money deposited in the

Oceanids Memorial Fellowship Fund

Tax Deductible.

Please write checks to “UCSD Foundation”
