

"Artists for Hire", students available for jobs

June 22, 1982

They'll paint your fence, paint your house or paint your portrait. They'll cook for you, clean for you, build for you or take your kids to the zoo. They'll move you into (or out of) your house, plan your housewarming party and even tend the bar.

Who are they?

They're the graduate students in the visual arts department at the University of California, San Diego, and once again they're looking for summer work.

Their names and telephone numbers are listed in their handbook "Artists for Hire," available by contacting Mary Anne Moore, graduate coordinator in visual arts, at 452-2862.

While many of the jobs listed make use of the students' artistic skills--framing, interior design, and photography--some would be just as willing to clean your attic, tutor you in Spanish or do your gardening.

According to the booklet, the students will provide references upon request and the fee for service is negotiable with each individual student.
