

Perhaps the biggest reason why this message written by a caring stranger struck a chord with me was due to the reason that often times, unvoiced opinions are viewed as unimportant or irrelevant. However, this message is not singling out a certain group. It speaks to all individuals. Perhaps the issues of unfairness should not be dealt as injustices placed upon certain ethnicities, but groups of individuals with different ideologies and different backgrounds making an effort to accept one another and understand each other's shortcomings.
