UCSD Hosts Comedy Competition

By JULIE MUNRO
Features Editor

Eleven aspiring stand-up comedians were given their moments in the limelight last week at the Triton Pub when a nationwide collegiate competition touched down at UCSD.

The third annual U.S. College Comedy Competition is composed of similar events at 125 universities nationwide, including 27 from the West Coast. UCSD has participated in the competition all three years.

The comedians were limited to four minute acts and were told they would be disqualified if they used profanity.

Each comedian's performance is videotaped and sent to New York for judging. According to tour producer Dave Wechsler, the finalists will be chosen by comedian Jerry Seinfeld based upon "content and stage performance."

Four national finalists will receive a trip for two to Los Angeles to see the filming of "Comic Relief III." They will also win an all-expense paid four-day trip to Daytona Beach, Florida, where the national champion will be selected.

At the Daytona Beach finals, "The Funniest College Comedian" will be chosen based on the audience's response and Seinfeld's opinion. The winner will have the opportunity to perform at the Comic Strip, a well known comedy club in New York City.

Last year's winner was a UC Irvine student.

Legislator Who Helped Create UCSD Dies

By CATHERINE DILLE

Sheridan Norris Hegland, a former state legislator and educator instrumental in establishing the site of UCSD, died last Monday of emphysema at his Chula Vista home. He was 78.

Hegland represented the 77th District, which includes North San Diego County, La Mesa, Fallbrook, Vista, Escondido and National City, in the state Assembly from 1954-1960.

As assemblyperson, Hegland co-authored a legislative resolution that led to the founding of a UC campus in San Diego in 1960. Hegland cited expected population growth and insufficient col-

Let Me Entertain You — Comic Daryl Peek performed at last Wednesday's U.S. College Comedy Competition at the Triton Pub.

The boisterous crowd that filled the Triton Pub last Wednesday to watch the UCSD competition was treated to a wide range of comic styles and performance.

Darin Barber, one of the competitors, explained that he is so "very white" that his "sun block has three digits." He also criticized his latest girlfriend for using too many four-letter words, like "don't" and "stop."

Barber later recalled seeing a sign in a fast-food restaurant offering "Braille menus upon request" and said, "I bet they get a lot of requests for that, especially at the drive-thru window."

Barber also explained that he once decided to steal the new R.E.M. record and he hid it down the front of his jeans. When the clerk asked, "Excuse me, is that a record?" he replied, "I don't think so, but I'm pretty proud of it."

One act, performed as a team under the name "Dante and the Wolfe," began their act with UCSD student Gerald Wolfe playing a stereotypical detective in a trenchcoat and hat with a cigarette dangling from his lower lip. His damsel in distress was a

UCSD To Establish Science Research Park

By SCOTT LANTERMAN
Guardian Intern

In an effort to speed the transfer of technological discoveries to the marketplace and increase its number of research facilities, UCSD has decided to lease 30 acres on the east side of campus to private industry for the creation of a science research park.

According to UCSD School of Medicine Dean Gerald N. Burrow, the park is needed to help fund the extremely costly process of getting potential bio-technical products off the laboratory bench and to the bedside.

According to UCSD Real Estate Development Director Mark Nelson, a committee has been appointed to determine, by the end of the year, which kinds of businesses will be compatible with research currently being conducted by campus faculty.

The land, Nelson said, will be leased only to companies the committee deems compatible with UCSD research. Although no decisions have been made regarding the nature of this compatibility, Nelson said that the land "is not [going to become] a business park, but a science park."

The park, according to Nelson, will have about 750,000 square feet of lab space.

Nelson said that it has not yet been determined whether real estate developers or private companies will develop the land.

The cost of the park will not be known until after a summer review by a financial consultant, Nelson said. He hopes an estimate will be ready by next fall.

The labs will be completely autonomous entities, according to Dean of Graduate Studies Richard Attiye, who explained that an agreement would be made to ensure that only scientific research similar to research at UCSD be performed. It has yet to be determined whether the emphasis on the park will be bio-technical or electronic, Attiye said.

According to Attiye, many firms have expressed interest in developing laboratories at UCSD because of the opportunities that will be afforded them through contact with University faculty.

Attiye does not feel that contact with private industry will jeopardize academic freedom.

"Academic freedom for researchers will not be compromised," he said. "Our objective is to provide more opportunities for graduates and undergraduates to work in industrial labs."

Although Burrow said researchers from UCSD have been successful in bringing biotechnology to the open market in the past, he noted that the financing of capital projects for the medical school is tied to a state-determined enrollment formula.

This formula, he said, has limited student enrollment to 120

Los Alamos Develops Instrument

By REBEKAH DENN
Guardian Intern

Researchers at Los Alamos National Laboratory recently developed a portable instrument to save time and money in analyzing the composition of toxic waste samples.

The laboratory, which is operated by the University of California for the Department of Energy, developed the mass spectrometer to determine which organic (or carbon based) compounds are in a given sample of soil, water, or air.

Most machines of this type are huge and complex, but the unique Los Alamos package can fit inside a two drawer file cabinet, and travel with the researchers, according to information provided by the Los Alamos Public Relations Office.

Typically, scientists visit a waste site, take samples, then wait several days for a laboratory analysis. The sample, however, can deteriorate during that delay, usually through evaporation, according to Phil Hemberger of the lab's analytical chemistry group.

The new machine, developed through a two-year, $500,000 program, can be taken to the waste site to deliver results much more quickly than previously possible.

"Not only do we find out what chemicals are in the sample and what their concentrations are, but our instrument is hooked up to a computer and printer and a report on the compounds is automatically produced in a matter of minutes," Hemberger said.

Female UCSB Student Abducted, Assaulted and Robbed While Walking

SANTA BARBARA — A 19-year-old female UCSB student was assaulted, robbed and briefly abducted by two unknown males Feb. 7, according to Detective Jeff Meyer of the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department.

The victim was walking at approximately 11:15 p.m. when she was approached by two men in a van who allegedly asked her for money. The victim reported that one of the suspects grabbed her and forced her into the van when she said she had no money.

The suspects allegedly took the victim to Goleta Beach. When she struggled to get away, one of the suspects struck her in the head with a wrench, inflicting minor injuries. They then reportedly removed $20 from her wallet and began pushing her toward the ocean.

At that time, a car pulled into the Goleta Beach area and frightened the suspects, who fled in the van.

Police are searching for the two suspects who are both described as slender Latino males in their late 20s with short black hair.

Water Rationing Possible Within the Next Two Months in Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA — With local water resources at an all-time low, and poor run-off prospects projected due to this year's dry winter season, the Goleta Water Board (serving UCSB) has proposed water rationing as a possible conservatory measure.

The "mandatory water conservation" proposal calls for Goleta Valley customers to cut their water use by approximately 20 percent overall, beginning somewhere between April 1 and May 1, with fines to be issued to those who do not comply with the cutbacks.

Although the recent two-day storm dumped more than four inches of rain in some parts of the county, "the [local] reservoirs received relatively minor amounts of run-off," said Phil Halland, hydrologist for the Santa Barbara County Flood Control.

According to Rodger McLean, general manager of Lake Cachuma Operations and Maintenance, the level in the lake, which serves as the district's principal water source, is "lower than it's ever been since it was filled in 1957."

With a capacity of 205,000 acre-feet (an acre-foot equaling 325,900 gallons), Cachuma lake is at an all-time low of 90,000 acre-feet.

"It'll help the short-term picture in that the rainfall will decrease the demand for outdoor [and agricultural water] use," Holland commented.

And without a significant amount of rainfall in the next few months, the lake is expected to drop to 80,000 acre-feet by May 14. Half of that will be below the entrance to the tunnel and thus unretrievable for usage.

The area needs rainfall 150 to 200 percent above normal to fill the lake, because normal rainfall doesn't create much run-off.

Davis to Hold Affirmative Action Research Program During Summer

DAVIS — The eighth Summer Undergraduate Affirmative Action Research Program (SUAARP) will be held at UC Davis from June 19 to Aug. 11, 1989. This program provides students with research opportunities in the biological, agricultural, and resource sciences. While SUAARP is open to all qualified students, it is primarily intended for students from underrepresented groups, women and other disadvantaged students who have completed their junior year in college.

Students spend eight weeks on the UC Davis campus working under the supervision of a faculty mentor on a research project of mutual interest. Each student will be treated as an integral member of the research team, participating in all lab-related activities. Faculty mentors have been chosen who are sensitive to the academic and social needs of the visiting student, and who share a common interest in increasing the number of underrepresented students in all areas of the biological, agricultural and resource sciences.

In addition to receiving five quarter units of independent research credit, and a $2,000 stipend, each student will receive a scholarship to cover all travel expenses and room and board. Applicants are limited to U.S. citizens and permanent immigrants. Students will be selected on the basis of their academic record, letters of recommendation and statement of interest.

The application deadline for the program is April 1, 1989. For additional information and application materials contact: Dr. Robert G. Flochini, or Nadine Bent-Russell at LAWR, 223 Hoagland Hall, University of California, Davis, CA 95616, or phone (916) 752-7097/1406.

UCSD Professor Carlos Blanco Publishes Best-Seller Novel in Spain

Carlos Blanco, professor of literature at UCSD, has published a novel which has become a best-seller in Spain.

The novel, Blanco's second, is titled Un Tiempo Tuvo, which, he said, translates roughly into "Your Own Time."

The subject matter is the Spanish Civil War and its effect on those who were forced to flee the country. Blanco was just such a refugee, who left Spain with his family at the age of 11 and fled to Mexico where he grew up.

Blanco's novel has no story line in the traditional sense.

"It's about memory," he said. "It's one voice speaking through the memory of a mother, and childhood scenes, and the beginning of the Spanish Civil War in 1936, and travellings — comings and goings, and having no center, and returns and absences. That first voice ends on a rather negative note. It's a pretty neurotic voice."

Other voices — a woman, a German who fought in the Spanish Civil War, and American who also fought in the war, and a famed Argentinian tango singer named Gardel — then enter the story, each character describing himself or herself and how he or she relates to the first voice.

Blanco said it is doubtful that the novel will be translated into English.

"I confess that I would love it if I could go to the UCSD bookstore and see my novel on sale there. That would give me great pleasure."

Royal Lichtenstein Sidewalk Circus To Appear on Revelle Plaza Feb. 27

The Office of Religious Affairs at the UCSD is sponsoring an appearance by the Royal Lichtenstein Sidewalk Circus on Revelle Plaza at noon on Monday, Feb. 27.

The free show, which is based in San Jose, CA, and calls itself "The World's Smallest Complete Circus," features tightrope acts, precision juggling, unicycles, a menagerie of trained exotic animals, including a miniature stallion, clowns and mime fables with a moral.

The circus, under the direction of ringmaster Nick Weber, a Jesuit priest, has performed all over the country and received rave reviews.

per year and left no funds for expansion.

According to Nelson, other universities that are endowed with ample land have developed science parks as well. Stanford and Princeton in particular have been successful in attracting private industry, he said, citing the "high quality of those firms" now associated with Stanford. He also pointed to the link between researchers and private companies and the increased generation of funds for that campus as signs of Stanford's success with its science park.

The 30 acres are located east of Interstate 5, between Genesee Avenue to the north and Regents Road to the south.

The park is to be situated next to a proposed 120-bed clinical hospital. Construction of the new hospital is to begin this spring. The hospital will eventually be surrounded by several peripheral medical facilities.

LAB: Instrument Made

The machine is still being lab tested, and will begin a year of field testing this May. Hemberger said early results are promising.

"In one test, we prepared a sample of Los Alamos dirt that contained 23 different compounds," Hemberger said. "Our instrument found 19 of them in 10 minutes."

The group hopes to have their product commercially produced after the field tests. Private firms are already making transportable analyzers, but according to Mike Cannon of the lab's instrumentation group, the Los Alamos device is smaller and easier to operate.

"The need for on-site monitoring," Hemberger said, "is expanding."

The machine could monitor industrial smokestacks, check the air in areas where workers handle dangerous chemicals, or track down the site of a contaminated water supply. Mostly, though, it will be used for testing soil at waste dumps, Hemberger said.

"If a company's been using a dump for a number of years," Hemberger said, "they want to know just what's out there."

The machine saves money in several ways, according to Hemberger.

It can be transported to the testing area, eliminating the need for expensive laboratory time. Also, the device is "user-friendly" and a trained scientist is not needed to operate it. The operator can put a sample in the spectrometer and the computer handles the rest.

"The heaters, valves and plumb-ing are all computer controlled," Cannon said. "There is almost no room for operator error."

According to Hemberger, the computer does several self-checks before each analysis, and will not test the sample if it finds an error.

The two-foot high spectrometer box, with a computer and printer on the side, provides the base for a four-inch high, 16-inch wide sampling module. An attached 30-meter high chromatography column winds into a four-inch circle for travelling.

The machine works by taking in a sample and boiling it into a chromatography column, which separates out different compounds.

Before entering politics, Hegland published several local newspapers including The La Mesa News, The Suburbanite and The Pictorial.

Edwina Hegland, his wife, recalled how Hegland ran the names of local high school honor roll students in his paper and, later on, the names of those students who were to attend college.

"The second list was always much shorter because of [students'] financial need," she said.

Hegland was also instrumental in the state closure of "diploma mills," schools that sold doctorate degrees, said former State Representative Wanda Sankory, who

By taking in the separate compounds, and accelerating them with electronic fields, each compound travels at a characteristic speed and angle. The compound can be identified by analyzing when and where it leaves the accelerator.

Hegland attracted a significant amount of media attention as a result of his extensive interviews and research on the problem of diploma mills, which he presented before the State Legislature in 1958.

In his opening statement before the Legislature, Hegland cited his high regard for the "integrity of degrees" as his reason for leading the battle against diploma mills.

Those who worked with Hegland during and after his term in office remember him as a sincere and dedicated legislator.

Nonsexist Language Policy

The English language doesn't have very good neuter nouns. This is the chief problem with nonsexist writing, and it leads to awkward words like "freshperson," "defenseperson," and "first baseperson." It was these last two words which annoyed Phil Gruen, the Guardian sports editor, and which led to a re-examination of the Guardian's policy on nonsexist writing.

Gruen objected to being forced to change the names of player positions to conform with the policy. He argued that his writers didn't like it — he had a signed petition from many of them to back that up — and that the athletes didn't like it.

He further argued that words like "defenseperson" and "first baseperson" looked ridiculous, and broke the flow of the writing. He felt the "official" names of the positions should be used. Moreover, he asked, where do we draw the line? Should we alter every word that has a masculine root or connotation?

It is true that titles such as "first baseman" are ingrained in our society. It is also true that athletics is, for the most part, segregated. Referring to a major league baseball player as a "first baseperson" seems very silly, since there is no possibility that the player would be a woman. How can we at the Guardian presume to change these terms, when the sports world is so set in its own ways? Should we even try?

All of these issues were raised at the editors' meeting last week. It was the consensus that the policy had to be consistent throughout the paper in order to carry any weight. While the editors were sympathetic to Gruen's problem, the final vote was overwhelmingly against him: among 11 editors present, the final vote was 8-2, with one abstention.

A variety of arguments were offered to respond to Gruen's points. One of his strongest arguments was that his writers and the athletes didn't like it. However, writers often dislike what editors do to their writing, and athletes aren't always pleased by what the Guardian prints, but sometimes other considerations take precedence. Avoiding sexism is such a case.

The Guardian is committed to nonsexist writing. Language does influence the way people think. "Chairperson," which once generated the same anger as "defenseperson," is now widely accepted, and doesn't even sound strange anymore. Without people being aware of it, they've redefined the image they have of a person who would chair a committee.

If the athletes object strongly to the use of nonsexist terminology, that may indicate that it is even more important that they become aware of the problem of sexism. The sports world is hardly a bastion of feminism, and is unlikely to become one, but a little dose of nonsexism shouldn't hurt too much.

The editors proposed several compromises, but no totally satisfactory one could be found. Replacing "man" with "woman" if the player was female would be a step backwards, and "first basewoman" sounds just as awkward as "first baseperson." Using "player" instead of "person" is at least nonsexist, but it too sounds awkward. The only compromise which had any merit was to use different phrasing, such as "John Smith, who plays first base." Again, this is awkward, but it was the best of the bad alternatives.

The editors realized that it would be the sports editor who would take much of the heat for this decision. It is he who will have to defend the policy to athletes and his writers, even though he did not support the policy's implementation. Anger and ridicule are likely responses, but, hopefully, readers upset by the decision will take out their frustrations in letters to the editor rather than on Phil Gruen.

We recognize the danger of pretentiousness. By using nonsexist language, we seem to be preaching, glorifying our high-mindedness. After all, there is very little chance that we will change the world by our usage of this language. But this is not the point; we are doing it because we can. We have the freedom to use nonsexist writing, and thus we feel we have an ethical responsibility to do so, even if it sometimes results in awkward or inefficient writing.

Our commitment to avoiding gender-discriminating words has to be complete. We can't do it sometimes and not others. It may be impossible to define the exact limits of what is "sexist," but this doesn't mean we shouldn't try. The oft-quoted view of the Supreme Court on obscenity is applicable here: we can't tell you exactly what sexism is, but we know it when we see it. And where we see it, we have to try to eliminate it.

Night Permit Proposal Bad

Editor:

The Parking Advisory Committee has just transformed the parking situation on this campus into a total nightmare. They (eight of the 13 members present) endorsed an open resolution sponsored by the UCSD Chief of Police, John Anderson, titled "Expanded Hours Enforcement."

Currently what is known is that enforcement will be extended into the evening hours and weekends beginning July 1, 1989. There will be kiosks located at the entrances to the University which will sell "nightly permits." It is not known how much such a permit will cost. It is also not known whether the police department will expand its evening security force or just the parking patrol.

Several of the staff and faculty committee members expressed their desire to "get the vote over with" because they were "tired of talking about the same things." Most of the students, in addition to the dean of Revelle College, opposed the resolution. Had the graduate student representative and the one "misguided" college representative changed their vote to "no," the resolution vote would have been six in favor, seven against.

Additionally, there were student committee members absent.

Think about this: there are currently 7,460 "S" permits, 2,646

"B" permits and 1,498 "A" permits. The student population on this campus (undergrad and grad) is over 16,500, the staff on this campus (not including Scripps, SOM and VA) is over 7,000 and the faculty number really doesn't matter because they're never here anyways (I'm sorry, I just had to include that). Ah, but there's more. On this campus, to date, there are 6,176 "S" spaces, 2,091 "B" spaces and 1,136 "A" spaces. Those numbers will change next year as two parking lots will be removed for construction.

Knowing how sharp Guardian readers are, you've probably detected that there are more permits than spaces. "That's okay because not everyone has classes every day," or so they say. It just seems as though I see my friends here every day — but the Parking people tell me they aren't/shouldn't be.

Ya know, I can live with all of that. What gets me is the fact that more students, staff and faculty will be purchasing parking permits because of the assured (by Chief Anderson) red-lining of the adjoining neighborhoods, regulation of commercial parking (UTC, La Jolla Village Square, etc.) and need to have a permit to park on campus in the evenings and weekends.

You can bet (your parking space) that if someone has to buy a permit to park at night on campus that they're also going to park on campus in the day. After all, it's the same permit. For those of you that think justice has been served by requiring all users to pay — the equity argument — then let me know how you feel

Students Must Take Action

Editor:

We cannot allow the administration to get away with its new plan to impose nighttime parking permits. It is time for the students to put our collective foot down and, in effect, just say no!

For years the administration has been flouting its complete disregard for the best interests of the students, most noticeably (perhaps) in regard to parking policy. The administration has done this in the name of its precious "Master Plan" for UCSD, the document which has guided its ambitious — to put it mildly — construction projects of the past few years. It is under the provisions of this plan that the administration has overseen the doubling of the physical plant on campus in about five years.

This growth, in and of itself, is not necessarily a bad thing or harmful to student interests. But the question is, how much real student input has there been into these plans, to assure that the wishes of the students are being respected? After all, shouldn't the students have a very meaningful say in determining not only what kinds of buildings are constructed on campus, but, in a more general sense, the overall role that the University plays in society?

It is within this context that we should examine the current situation regarding parking at UCSD — it is a question of student rights and student power. It is also a question of equity, since fee increases of any kind make a uni-next year when you buy a permit and can't find a parking space!

The latest administration assault on our rights was the straw vote by the Parking Advisory Committee, (Guardian, Feb. 9) to charge people to park on campus between the hours of 5 p.m. and 11 p.m. The Guardian reported that this vote was "the result of a direct order from Steven Relyea, vice chancellor of business affairs." We must take a stand against this.

The timing is all wrong. We should increase enforcement/fees for parking but only when adequate parking is available. Structures and facilities can be built and then paid for. The University does it all the time. That's what bonds are all about. There's no reason why parking needs to have the money up front. This is a mistake.

Quite frankly, the Parking Advisory Committee was only playing a "role" in this matter anyway. Our office, as well as one other that I know of, received notice a week prior to the committee's meeting that the enforcement policy would be in effect at the starting of the fiscal year. I think that's probably what is meant by "advisory." So we shouldn't blame them. What we should do, and this is what the A.S. is doing, is continue our campaign against the "proposal" to Vice Chancellor of Business Affairs, Steve Relyea, and, if need be, to the Chancellor.

As it looks now however, our parking situation next year could appropriately be titled, "SDSU — La Jolla."

versity education that much more difficult for lower income people — a disproportionate number of whom are people of color — to afford.

To the administration, the fact that the price of a parking permit rises exorbitantly every year is simply unavoidable, as are the outrageous cost of parking tickets and the fact that parking meter prices have doubled in the past couple years. It was also unavoidable, from the administration point of view, that the curb of Torrey Pines Rd. (from its intersection with Genesee to the Mandell Weiss Theatre) was painted red during the summer of 1987, wiping out an area that served as free parking for hundreds of students.

It is just too bad, from the administration viewpoint, that the new lots it has built are extremely far away from classes, that a shortage of spaces forces many students to desperately search the lots for hours, and that theft in these lots is rampant. It is an "unfortunate development," as far as the administration is concerned, that women students run the risk of being attacked when they park in some of these distant lots at night.

The students will not become a significant factor in this equation unless we assert ourselves in an organized way and demand to be heard. It is our opinion that the Associated Student government of UCSD, the body recognized by the administration as our representatives and which collects nearly $600,000 annually from us in fees, is uniquely suited to lead the struggle to assert our rights.

The A.S. took a step in the right direction by passing a resolution opposing the implementation of nighttime parking permits and circulating a petition to this effect. But the A.S. must take a bolder stance on this issue and tell the administration that we will not allow our rights to once again be trampled on. After all, there are more than 15,000 of us and only about 100 of them.

some of the answers that are printed. And I have a thing or two I'd like to respond to.

Contrary to what some of you believe, "Q and A" is a random sampling of students' opinions. I admit that once in a while I see a friend and ask him/her if he/she wants to be in the paper. But 98 or 99 percent of the time, I have no idea who the people I interview are or what their opinions will be. Each week, about 15 people are interviewed. Of those who are willing to go on camera, five are chosen in a way that represents a variety of opinions on whatever the question might be. Therefore, I have no way of swaying the popular opinion in one way or another. If by chance everyone has the same opinion on the question, then so be it. I can't do anything about it.

You know better than to not expect an anecdote....

Last quarter we did a question on what people thought of Reagan. As it turned out, all the answers were, well...not supportive of the Gipper. I remember that particular "Q and A," because the UCSD College Republicans wrote the Guardian a nasty letter badmouthing both the Guardian and me. The letter claimed that from among thousands of college students, most of whom were Republicans, I couldn't find a single person who liked Reagan. Well, the fact of the matter is that I simply couldn't. And that's that.

I don't mean to be pointing fingers, but that is the type of reaction that many people have about "Q and A." You don't know how many times I've been asked, "Where did you find those people?" Or how many times I've been told, "I really don't think that that's the way most of the students feel around here." Well, here's what I say to all of you people who sit back and watch as I hustle around Revelle Plaza or wherever and then complain about the answers later: get off your lazy butts. Come to me and let me know what your opinion is.

After all, that's what "Q and A" is all about — your opinions. Don't be shy when it matters and bold when it doesn't. If you have something to say, then say it. If there's a question that you want asked of the students then tell me and I'll ask it. Every week I talk to over 15 people, and can only get nine or 10 of them to go on camera.

That reminds me: I do not think of all the questions that are asked — just some of them. We are always open to suggestions.

So the next time you see me running around Revelle Plaza, or the next time you pick up an issue of the Guardian and happen to glance over "Q and A," even if it is just to laugh at the pictures of the people, think of all the hard work that goes into it. Have some sympathy. And for God's sake, tell me what your opinions are so I can print them in the Guardian.

We're looking for all types of student leaders for...

EDITOR IN A BOX

By ALI SADIGHIAN

Editor in a Box appears every Monday, written by a different Guardian editor.

Did you read last week's "Q and A?" Well, in case you missed last week's exciting installment of "Q and A," the question was: "Do you think UCSD has a problem with racism?" There were five people with their answers there as always. But those were five of the only seven people that would allow me to put them in the paper.

Quite honestly, last week's "Q and A" was a bear to do. I spoke to over 35 people last Monday, Feb. 13, on the subject of racism. Like I said, only seven were willing to go on camera. In fact, if you were out walking about between 11:30 and 4:30 last Monday, you probably saw me walking around. I may have even approached you and asked you if "you want to be in the Guardian." But like most of the other people, you too either refused to answer the question or didn't want your answer to be printed in the Guardian, where, God forbid, other students might read your answer. I want to make it clear that I'm not going to write about racism at UCSD here. Instead, unlike some of the other editors, I'm qualified to write about — doing "Q and A."

If you haven't figured it out yet, I'm the little guy who's usually running around all over campus with a camera and a clipboard. I'm also the one who gets all the heat when some of you write in criticizing or questioning the objectivity of woman who had lost her virginity, Virginia Nomora. The team has performed at the Improvisation and The Comedy Store and carries its own business cards.

Contestant Dean Steinberger frantically ran around the stage imitating a dog sniffing out his territory, before asking the audience, "Have you ever seen them stub their nose?"

Comedian Daryl Peek built some of his material around what it is like to be a black student at UCSD. He asked white females in the audience to raise their hands, and then asked this target group, "How come, when I get in an elevator, you all grab your purses like you have a million dollars in it?"

The first comedian to perform was freshperson Pete Crooks. The slim Crooks stepped on stage and began by saying that the first reaction of many is, "This guy is huge!" He later went on to explain that when "fat people say stupid things" such as "you're so skinny you're gonna disappear," he simply retorts with "not unless I'm behind someone like you."

Crooks later moved on to attack television's Mr. and Mrs. Cleaver, who he described as "two responsible, upper middle class white parents," for nicknaming their son "Beaver."

"Why don't we name him after a slang word for the female anatomy?" Crooks asked rhetorically.

Holocaust Survivor Lives With Memories

By ELEONOR CASTILLO
Staff Writer

We have so much to learn from simple things, "such as the importance of words," Elie Wiesel said. "If the world had taken Hitler's words as seriously as he did, I think that would have prevented [the Holocaust]."

Wiesel, as a teenager, was an inmate of the Auschwitz and Buchenwald concentration camps. In his memoir, Night, he powerfully describes the horrors of being surrounded by piles of corpses and the lingering odor of the mass cremations of Jews by Nazi soldiers.

"Those who went through the Holocaust ... are the strongest Jews on Earth ... nothing can crush them," Wiesel said.

To have experienced the Holocaust was to have witnessed complete madness. "I believe that anyone who was in the camps came out deranged," Wiesel said. "When you have seen what they have seen, how can you not keep some madness?"

Living the nightmare of the Nazi death camps, Wiesel found himself constantly questioning his faith in God. This theme — searching for faith in a world that makes faith difficult — is found in his books following the completion of Night. His works number more than 30; four of them have been performed as plays.

In his writings, Wiesel focuses on characters who are almost always Holocaust survivors. The geographic and personal settings are greatly influenced by his own experiences after the war. As a survivor, he felt an obligation to educate the world on the truth behind this human tragedy.

"I don't believe the aim of literature is to entertain ... it used to be. I don't believe it anymore," Wiesel said.

Described as "something of an American Jewish folk hero," Wiesel enjoys a popularity which has been compared to that of Reverend Billy Graham with fundamentalist Protestants. There is a constant demand for his presence at Jewish communal meetings, and letterheads and masterheads are adorned with his name.

Although not belonging to any synagogue nor attending religious services regularly, Wiesel has won the admiration of a huge spectrum of religious opinion.

Driven by the philosophy that despair can be transmuted into a positive force, and can be overcome through compassion and communal solidarity, [this] pragmatic political activist has fought for civil rights for Jews in the Soviet Union and Arab countries. The state of Israel is another of his strong political concerns.

Wiesel's wife, Marion Erster, escaped the Holocaust when her family fled from Vienna to France after the Nazi occupation of Austria. When France was later occupied by Germany, she and her family were placed in a detention camp but later escaped to Switzerland. It was in this country that she received the majority of her schooling. The two met in the mid-'60s and were married in 1969.

Mrs. Wiesel serves as her husband's English translator, because French is his written language. The language became a "refuge, a home" for the author.

Wiesel is also active on the lecture circuit, delivering 20 to 30 lectures each year. But he insists he "does not write or speak directly about the Holocaust." He speaks around it, not about it. According to Wiesel, "it cannot be described ... it is unexplainable."

He believes that it has been overexposed to "superficial study." It is a sacred topic to the survivor. He focuses on the mystery of the Holocaust, "for only those who were there will ever know what really happened."

Are there any effects from the Holocaust that are still visible today? According to Wiesel, there are. "If it hadn't been for the Holocaust there would have been no Israel," he said.

The catastrophe also strengthened Jewish solidarity, as seen in the Soviet Union with the rise of Jewish nationalism during the 1970s.

Wiesel has earned many honors for his work. In 1986 he received the Nobel Peace Prize and the Medal of Liberty Award. Since 1976 he has been a faculty member at Boston University.

Elie Wiesel will be speaking on campus Tuesday, Feb. 21 at 8 p.m. in the Main Gym. Tickets for the lecture are $5 for students, $8 for senior citizens and $9 for general admission. They can be purchased either at the UCSD Box Office (534-4559) or from Ticket Master outlets.

land as a conscientious legislator whose primary interest was education.

Former State Senator Mills stated his belief that Hegland did not receive enough credit for the legislative work he did on behalf of higher learning, especially from the faculty and administration at UCSD.

"[Hegland] was a very conscientious person," Mills said. "People at UCSD were quite ungrateful."

Hegland retired from politics after running unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination for the 37th Congressional District seat. After his retirement from the Assembly, Hegland continued his involvement in education by teaching at local community colleges.

Hegland, along with his wife, was also involved in an educational television program sponsored in part by Time magazine. He also wrote several textbooks.

Galloway Dismissed For Remainder of Season

By P. MESSROBIAN
Contributing Writer

Junior Hunter Galloway has played his final match for the UCSD men's tennis team.

Galloway was dismissed from the team early last week, but coach Jon Hammermeister would not comment on the reasons for the action.

"I'd really rather not go into it," Hammermeister said. "It's really not that big a deal...we're still one of the best Division III teams in the country."

Galloway, ranked No. 10 in the nation in a preseason poll, had already been suspended for several weeks early in the season, and had been suspended for parts of the first two years he was on the team.

He was dismissed from the team his first year for the remainder of the season, but while he was allowed to rejoin the team the following year, last week's dismissal was permanent.

"Nothing has changed. Our goals remain exactly the same," Hammermeister said. "The guys we've got in there now are playing some good tennis... Francois Monnar is playing the best [tennis] of his life."

Sig Huber, previously Galloway's doubles partner, is now the No. 1 player, and Monnar is No. 2. Huber was ranked 25th in the nation in the pre-season poll.

Who Do You Call When You Want To Identify A Soccer Ball At 22,300 Miles In Space?

A company called "TRW". Here's the story.

The U.S. Air Force asked us to build a ground-based electro-optical deep space surveillance system that could identify an object the size of a soccer ball at 22,300 miles in space. We did it, utilizing 3 telescopes and a large 4 computer system. Then they asked us to build four more system sites. Quite an achievement, but it's just one example of TRW's impact on the future.

TRW offers you the freedom to move among a wide variety of opportunities in microelectronics, high energy lasers, large software systems, communications, and scientific spacecraft. If you're majoring in engineering, computer science, math, or physics, and want to be with a company that's driving technology into the next century, it's not too soon to talk. Tomorrow is taking shape at a company called TRW.

If you are unable to see us on campus, please send your resume to: TRW, College Relations, E2/4000, Dept. AD88, One Space Park, Redondo Beach, CA 90278.

Baseball

The brawl was an ugly sight with everyone on top of each other and throwing fists. In one case, an unidentified bat wielding UCSD player chased a S.F. State opponent near his dugout. Luckily, no one was seriously hurt, but Murphy was pulled from the game after the situation calmed down.

San Francisco State emerged from the brawl with a pumped up attitude and overpowered the Tritons for the rest of the game. UCSD mustered up their few runs on a home run from Gary Fessia and two tallies in the ninth.

"This will probably be our worst game all year. We didn't hit, we didn't pitch, and we didn't field well at all. We simply played terrible ball," Murphy said.

Statistically, the Tritons only managed five hits while allowing two errors, compared to 10 hits and no errors for S.F. State. In addition, UCSD gave up 13 walks and went through a total of five pitchers, all of whom pitched for the first time this season. Yates also explained that he intentionally saved his best pitchers for yesterday's crucial doubleheader against Cal State San Bernardino.

With a current record of 3-2, Murphy commented that the team must get its hitting into gear and rely on solid pitching through the course of the season in order to make the playoffs.

Lacrosse

port goalie Joe Brown needed to stop the USD "attack." Brown currently has the best save percentage on the West Coast and has come into his own in "the cage."

With only two games left, the Tritons have virtually clinched the division. Tomorrow night, UCSD will battle SDSU on Muir Field at 7 p.m.

Swimming

odds are great that more than the allowed 18 to qualify. Therefore, the coaches will be forced to decide who they will bring to Nationals.

"We'll look and see which ones will be able to score the most points for the team," commented assistant coach Eric Vitenda. "We'll also take into consideration how long and under what circumstances it took for them to qualify."

As the Tritons head to Las Vegas to test their luck and ability at the Pacific Collegiate Conference Meet next weekend, expectations are high. Morgan is putting his cards down on "about a dozen" swimmers, hoping for another big payoff.

In Las Vegas, the women's team will encounter stiff competition from Pepperdine and Northern Arizona. For the men's team, some competition will come from Alaska. However, the stronger threat from both teams comes from their teammates vying for their own tickets to Orlando.

Update

(No. 4) but still lost to the visiting Rainbows, 6-3.

Yesterday's action did not get much better for the Tritons, who are now 3-5. In an early morning 5-1 loss against Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, UCSD mustered only one match victory from Jeff French. Cal Poly, however, is currently ranked second in the nation in Division II.

"Considering they're No. 2 in the nation, I think we played pretty well," Monnar pointed out. The Tritons, however, needed more than a great effort against the powerhouses they faced this weekend.

In the Cal Poly contest, French (back) and Belloli (elbow) both suffered injuries. To add insult to injury, UCSD had to return to the court at 1 p.m. yesterday to face Air Force, who beat the Tritons soundly, 5-1. Interestingly enough, Belloli was the only Triton who managed to win a match against Air Force, defeating his opponent 6-3, 7-5.

The Tritons do not have another home match until March 6.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Credit for Your Old Tests! We pick up Hyper-learning, an innovative tutorial program in La Jolla Village (just south of UCSD), is paying $1/class (up to $10/student) for old tests, syllabi, and course/section handouts for all Math, Physics, Chem, and Bio classes. We believe a Public Test Bank/Handouts File is the only fair way to eliminate the selective advantage of the old test underground, and improve the general quality of supplements available in these classes. If you need to keep your originals, we will accept photocopies. All student writing will be eliminated from our file copies. Tests and handouts from the last four years are particularly desired. Just call 546-8273 and leave a message. We'll get back to you and arrange a convenient pick up time. Thanks! (3/6)

Bench-Clearing Brawl in 16-3 Loss

S.F. State Fights Off Tritons

By A.C. LEE
Staff Writer

"They played like Bush Leaguers!" said part-time boxer and UCSD pitcher Chris Murphy after the Division II San Francisco State baseball team gave the Tritons their first taste of total defeat and blood with a 16-3 thrashing Saturday at home. The game featured a bench-clearing brawl in the second inning.

"Bush Leaguer," according to UCSD Head Coach Lyle Yates, is a derogatory statement in baseball that refers to a player or team that shows no professional courtesy or coaching ethics. It is a sort of unwritten rule in baseball that when a team is up by a considerable amount of runs, and almost assured of a victory, it should ease up a bit and lessen the embarrassment for the losing team.

Obviously, the S.F. State team never heard of this rule, playing an overly aggressive style of baseball towards the late innings with the game well in hand. Even though San Francisco held a lead of no less than eight runs throughout the majority of the game, its members continued to steal unneeded bases, executed the hit and run, and the coach left his starting lineup in until the ninth inning, after state had accumulated a 14 run lead.

Not only did San Francisco State play without ethics, but it also played in a cheap and dirty manner which at one point culminated in an all-out brawl.

The melee started during the top of the second inning when San Francisco State loaded the bases with one out. S.F. State catcher Peter Nurre then hit a single that drove in two runs. As both runners came home, each attempted to elbow UCSD catcher Jim Martinez. According to Murphy, who was pitching at the time, Martinez did not provoke the San Francisco runners and was very surprised when the second runner succeeded at hitting him in the ribs.

In addition, both Martinez and Murphy began to exchange heated words with the runners and finally Murphy threw the first punch which instigated the bench-clear-

Swimmers Qualify Seven to Nationals

By CARIN RESNICK
Staff Writer

If gambling was legal in San Diego, UCSD swim coach Bill Morgan could have made a killing on Saturday. Against the University of Southern California, the No. 3 team in the nation, Tritons hit the jackpot — qualifying seven swimmers for the Nationals.

Morgan put his chips on seven swimmers, having them shave and taper specifically for the USC meet. Even by Las Vegas standards, Morgan bet well. Six of the seven targeted swimmers won big, adding themselves to the growing list of qualifiers. Jon Pennington, Luke Salerno, Chris Carillo, Randy Franke, Richard Daniels and Jeff Vance combined somewhat rested bodies and freshly shaved skin to score Division III National Championship berths.

The surprise of the day came when Triton Pete Smith cashed in on the 1,650 freestyle with a time of 16:31.11. Smith had not tapered off his workouts the past week and his unexpected qualification sparked an already excited Triton team.

Although the Trojans held on to a consistent lead throughout the meet and defeated the Tritons 149-128, Triton Head Coach Bill Morgan stressed UCSD's accomplishments. "USC had Olympians and world record holders swimming today. The key for us was to qualify as many as we could against them."

Adding seven new names to the list, the Triton men's team now has 17 swimmers and a diver eligible for the trip to Orlando, Florida, where the Nationals will be held in mid-March. With two meets remaining in the season,

Quigley, Sargeant Qualify

School Records Fall For Track & Field This Weekend

By PHIL GRUEN
Sports Editor

It is still early in the season, but Shannon Quigley and Scott Sargeant began making plans this weekend for the end of the season, when they will be shuffling off to Illinois to compete in the Division III National Track & Field Championships.

In addition to their qualifying achievements, Triton athletes broke five school records and racked up eight first place finishes both Friday and Saturday.

Quigley broke her own school records in both the discus and the shotput on Friday at the Mesa Invitational with distances of 140'11" and 43'5", respectively. These marks also qualified her for Nationals in both events.

Sargeant, who had set a new school record in the hammer throw last week at 156'5", broke his own record and qualified for Nationals on Saturday at the Pomona-Pitzer All-Comers Meet when he thrusted the hammer 166'5".

Also at the Pomona-Pitzer meet, the women's 4x100 relay team (Robin Bellamy, Yvette Marzullo, Christy Cheney, and Andrea Kouremetis) broke a school record when it placed first with a time of 51.90. Kouremetis broke a school record of her own by winning the 200-meters in 26.38.

In addition to Kouremetis' feat, the Triton women cleaned up in other individual events. Although they were not National qualifying times or distances, Gisele English's 2:28.04 in the 800-meters and 4:51.6 in the 1,500-meters, Vicki Dunkley's 71.5 in the 400-meters hurdles, and Rachel Beerman's 88'4.5" in the shot put and 118'11.5" in the discus were all first place finishes at the Pomona meet.

The men's 4x400-meter relay team of Tim Kyser, Stylianos Stylianou, Matt Pizza, and Kevin Archer also finished first on Saturday with a time of 3:24.6.

Along with its eight first place finishes on Saturday, the UCSD track & field team boasted 11 second place finishes.

The track team competes on Saturday at the Cal Tech Invitational, and then in the Long Beach Relays on Sunday.

Triton Sports Update...

Women's Tennis

It was a breeze this weekend for the women's tennis team, who beat both Point Loma Nazarene and Occidental by 9-0 scores out on the Muir Courts. Not only that but the 2-2 Tritons did not lose a single set the entire weekend in either game.

After a tough loss last week to Pomona-Pitzer, Head Coach Liz LaPlante noted that her players were "much more mentally ready this weekend." UCSD hosts Westmont College today at 3 p.m. on the Muir Courts.

Men's Tennis

The UCSD men's tennis team suffered three weekend losses against three extremely tough schools; Hawaii, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, and Air Force.

Against Division I Hawaii, UCSD got singles victories from Sig Huber (No. 1), Francois Monnar (No. 2), and Chris Belloli

Lacrosse Wipes Out USD

By SCOTT PREGERSON
Contributing Writer

In the midst of the many successful teams at UCSD, the early markings of a dynasty is beginning to surface with the men's lacrosse team. After an undefeated debut season in 1981, the team struggled for seven years to win consistently. However, Saturday's crushing 18-6 victory over league rival USD demonstrates that the Tritons are fierce competitors in this predominantly East Coast sport.

With this win, UCSD has attained the No. 1 ranking in Division II by means of an unstoppable offense and a tough, hard hitting defense. In addition, the team consists primarily of juniors and sophomores who can enhance the quality of the team for years to come.

The onslaught of points scored by the Tritons was accomplished by eight different players, seven of whom pumped in two or more goals. Attacker John Rentzipas collected two goals and three assists while Juan Millan, Ed Cheng, and Doug Shaddle each provided hat tricks in the scoring frenzy.

There were some questions heading into the game as to whether the defense would hold tough due to an injury to starter Orion Alcalay. However, intense hustle by Drew Reynolds and another outstanding performance by Sven Haynie was all the sup-
