Dispute Over Key Issuance Continues

Co-ops Rally to Protest Possible Removal from Student Center

By ANDREA ADLEMAN
Senior Staff Writer

Members and supporters of the UCSD co-ops held a rally on the gym steps Friday to raise student awareness of what they perceive as an administrative threat of eviction due to the co-ops' refusal to sign a contract regarding space usage in the Student Center.

Several months ago, University Center Director Jim Carruthers notified the co-ops in writing that failure to sign would result in allocation of co-op space to other student-run organizations.

The co-ops cite a Dec. 5 letter from Carruthers, which states that the administration will "hold [co-op] space for allocation" and complete a "transition of new student operations...[by] June 30, 1990," as indicating that the co-ops would be removed if they did not sign the space agreement.

According to Assistant Vice Chancellor of Undergraduate Affairs A.W. Russ, the "transition" will not occur immediately, but instead proposals from other student organizations will probably be solicited at an unspecified time in the future.

Four of the five co-ops are unwilling to sign the contract the administration has offered because they feel it is not in their best interest. The Computer Co-op signed in December. The deadline for the other co-ops to sign is Friday.

The primary reason for co-op disapproval of the contract is the key issuance and usage clause, which mandates that the co-ops be

Library Construction Will Begin During Spring Break

By CHRIS STEINS
Staff Writer

Construction of a new underground addition to Central Library, to be completed by September, 1992, is scheduled to begin over Spring Break.

According to project manager John Sturla, the library construction will add over 200,000 square feet to Central through two underground levels. The new space will effectively double the current capacity of the library.

Construction of the new addition will begin during Spring Break, and will consist of two phases, said Boone Hellmann, assistant vice chancellor of Design and Construction.

Phase I is the initial construction of the addition, which is expected to be completed in September, 1991, according to Hellmann.

Phase II is the renovation of the current library to bring it to current safety standards. Improvements will include the installation of a fire sprinkler system and tentative plans to add an additional elevator. Phase II is expected to be completed by September, 1992, Hellmann said.

The expansion and renovation is expected to cost $38 million and will be funded by high-tech state revenue bonds rather than student funds, according to the University Communications office.

Hellmann warned students that the initial visual impact of the construction area will be "shocking."

Representatives at the University Communications office said that "the project will create the biggest hole in the ground this campus has ever seen."

The excavation site will wrap around the library on three sides, and will be 30 to 35 feet deep, he said.

"I want everyone to realize that it will be a major change, but bear with us, and leave final judgement until the project is completed," Hellmann said.

During construction, the entrance to the library will be moved to the north side, making it more difficult for students and campus personnel to enter.

Two concerns raised by the A.S. Council last week about the project were the limitation and disruption of study space and the removal of eucalyptus trees.

Hellmann acknowledged that the construction is going to cause noise, but expressed his desire to work with administration, faculty, and students to minimize the inconvenience.

"[We] are very concerned with addressing the apprehensions of students and faculty... We will do the best we can," he said.

Third College Students Call for More Democratic Naming Process

By ANTON BITTNER
News Editor

The Third College Renaming Committee submitted plans to the Third College Student Council on Friday for a referendum that would ask Third students what they would like their college to be renamed.

The ballot proposed by the committee lists Martin Luther King College, Rosa Parks College, Sequoia College, and "no preference" as choices for the new name.

This ballot proposal was in response to a letter the Third College Student Council sent to the renaming committee on March 5, which recommended that the committee propose a referendum for the April A.S. election to request student opinions on the new college name.

According to Denise Godfrey, a member of both the renaming committee and Third Student Council, the letter was sent in response to outcry from Third College students who are seeking a more democratic renaming process.

Third College Provost Cecil Lytle said he formed the renaming committee — composed of five students, one alumnus, one staff member, and three faculty members — to give the college a "more meaningful" name. The committee will forward their recommendation to Lytle for approval.

However, many Third College students expressed a desire to have a choice in the renaming through a student vote.

Lytle responded that a vote of this kind would be unacceptable, since voter turnout at most elections amounts to a small fraction of the population.

According to Paul Lanning, a member of both the renaming committee and the student council, the referendum submitted by the renaming committee will merely solicit student opinion; the results of the vote will be strictly advisory.

"There was a misconception among the students that [one of their] rights had been taken by the provost" in not letting the students vote for the renaming, Godfrey said, adding that Lytle could name it himself if he wanted.

Godfrey explained that by holding a town meeting and selecting a renaming committee, Third College Provost Cecil Lytle was trying to give students a voice as to the college's new name.

Lanning added that Third College faculty and staff can also vote in the referendum. He expressed hope that Third College alumni could take part in the renaming.

"We would be happy to poll alumni if we knew that they would receive ballots," Lanning said.

Lanning added that giving alumni a vote would depend on whether or not money could be allocated to provide postage to send ballots to alumni.

"We don't have the money [to mail ballots] as a committee, [but] we feel this would be a worthy cost," Lanning said.

The student council will draft the referendum at its tonight and submit it as a ballot item in the April A.S. election.

UCSB Committee Completes Last Revisions to Development Plan

SANTA BARBARA—A university committee made its final revisions last Monday to UCSB's Campus Development Plan (CDP), outlining projected growth on the campus for the next 16 years. Several students, however, are cautious about the changes.

The CDP is the guiding document in UCSB's three-part Long Range Development Plan. The other two parts, the Environmental Impact Report and the Coastal Development Plan, assess the impacts of the growth detailed in the CDP and discuss how the plan relates to California Coastal Commission policies.

It took the CDP Steering Committee four meetings to review comments made during the 52-day public comment period that ended Jan. 19. The meetings decided which comments pertained to developing a campus land-use plan, and came up with final revisions for recommendation to UCSB Chancellor Barbara Uehling, according to CDP Steering Committee Chair Kenneth Miullett.

One student concern raised during the public review period was the future of the Greenhouse and Garden Project on campus. After the alterations, the project's future is still uncertain.

"[The Greenhouse Project] should be incorporated as an amenity [to the student housing] proposed in that location], but the priority is housing," said ASUCSB Internal Vice President James Siojo, a CDP Steering Committee member.

If the project is removed to make way for new housing, he said, there is no stipulation in the plan guaranteeing it a new location on campus.

Some of those who voiced concern about the future of the project in the CDP were "disappointed" by the wording in the document. Library Assistant Peter Shapiro called the wording in regard to saving the Greenhouse project "not very sincere." He is considering making an appeal to both Uehling and the UC Regents to save the project if necessary.

No date has been determined for presentation of the Long Range Development Plan to the regents.

Local Organizations Seek UCSD Volunteers for Community Work

The Volunteer Connection has announced these new volunteer opportunities:

- Centro de Asuntos Migratorios, a non-profit agency which provides legal immigration services, needs people who are fluent in English and Spanish to help translate legal documents. For more information, contact Richard Garcia at 426-6620.

• The Museum of Photographic Arts in Balboa Park needs volunteers throughout the museum. For more information, contact Jean Wilder at 239-5262.

• The "Bury the Habit Foundation" needs volunteers to educate others about drug abuse. For more information, contact Rusty Farrell at 457-2800.

• Volunteers are needed to help run a mini-olympic day at the San Diego Center for Children. The children are five to 12 years old. The event will take place Monday, April 9 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

For more information about these or any other San Diego County volunteer opportunities, contact the Volunteer Connection at 534-1414, or drop by the Volunteer Connection office on the third floor of the Price Center, above Espresso Roma.

Supermarket Receipts Will Help Buy Computers for S.D. Schools

The Vons supermarket chain is sponsoring a program called "Apples for the Students." Under this program, schools collect cash register receipts from Vons and trade them in for Apple computers and software. By saving these receipts, UCSD students will help Sherman Elementary School. The program runs through May 9.

Collection boxes for the receipts have been set up at a number of locations around campus, including the Pepper Canyon Apartments, the Fifth College Residence Halls Office, Middle Of Muir, the Computer Co-op, EDNA, the Revelle College Center, Why Not Here?, the Third College Office of Residential Life, and the Warren College Resident Dean's Office. In addition, receipts can be mailed to Yolanda Garcia at Q-082, or Karen Peters at B-021.

After hearing both the co-ops and the university's views, the board decided to support the co-op's position because "the university showed no compelling reason to support their views," he said.

Several GSA members asked what authority the UCB actually has over Student Center decisions.

Eykamp responded that, in this case, the board is functioning in an advisory role to Vice Chancellor of Undergraduate Affairs Joseph Watson.

"Now the ball is firmly in the court of Joe Watson," he said.

Eykamp said that "everything the board has requested has been granted until now."

Graduate Students Discuss Co-ops, RIMAC, and Lab Policy

By CATHERINE DILLE
News Editor

Graduate Student Association members voted last Wednesday night on several resolutions, concerning issues including co-op space agreements and UC ties with labs, and discussed the recently-passed RIMAC referendum.

Graduate Student Association (GSA) Representative to the University Center Board (UCB) Paul Eykamp informed GSA members of the board's efforts to mediate between the UCSD administration and co-ops in regard to Student Center space agreements.

According to Eykamp, a dispute arose when the co-ops took issue with a section of the Student Center space agreement that required them to be on the university key system. The co-ops cited past security problems associated with the university system as the reason why they would not sign the agreement, Eykamp said.

After hearing both the co-ops and the university's views, the board decided to support the co-op's position because "the university showed no compelling reason to support their views," he said.

Several GSA members asked what authority the UCB actually has over Student Center decisions.

Eykamp responded that, in this case, the board is functioning in an advisory role to Vice Chancellor of Undergraduate Affairs Joseph Watson.

"Now the ball is firmly in the court of Joe Watson," he said.

Eykamp said that "everything the board has requested has been granted until now."

The GSA members then passed a resolution which expressed their support for the UCB's position.

On the subject of RIMAC, several GSA members expressed an interest in installing a system for special referendums where the job of informing students on the positive and negative aspects of proposed projects is not in the hands of those making the proposal—in this case, the RIMAC Committee.

GSA Vice President Randy Giles reported that 440 of 2,300 eligible graduate students had voted in the special referendum.

"Graduate students clearly didn't have an interest in voting," Giles said.

One GSA member suggested that perhaps graduate student voter turnout was low because many graduate students do their work at home and were unaware of the referendum. It was proposed that students be notified by mail during future special referendums.

Graduate students then discussed a resolution proposed by Labwatch, a UC Santa Barbara-based group, which called for the UCB to sever ties with the Lawrence Livermore and Los Alamos laboratories.

In opposition to the proposal, Giles informed the group that he had visited the Lawrence Livermore Lab that Monday and had seen that the labs "are involved in a lot of worthwhile activities."

Giles said that "having seen the kind of thing that goes on there... the university has a more beneficial relationship with the labs than another non-profit or for-profit group could have."

"It basically boils down to a moral issue of 'Do we want the University involved with nuclear weapons research?'" he said.

Eykamp pointed out that the UCSD-based Institute for Global Conflict and Cooperation, which was formed as a counterbalance to the labs to study ways to reduce global conflict, is funded in part by money generated by both of the labs.

Graduate student David Fremont responded by saying that the fact that some groups receive "fallout" money from the labs should not have any bearing on the moral issue of whether or not the UCB should be involved in nuclear weapons development.

Another graduate student said, "it would be nice to send a message to the U.S. government that we don't need these labs anymore... we need disarmament talks."

Graduate student Rod Corriveau advocated UC involvement with the labs because "the academic community has a moral responsibility to the country not to stay high and dry of the issue [of nuclear arms development]."

The GSA eventually voted not to support the Labwatch resolution calling for the end of UC management of the labs.

In other business, the GSA allocated $550 to the Institute for Feminist Thought for an event called the Myth California Pageant, to be held later this year outside the San Diego Civic Center to protest the Miss America Pageant.

on the university's master key system.

Citing autonomy and past security problems while on the university's key system, co-ops feel they must control their own key issuance and usage, co-op members said.

According to Carruthers, keys are a non-negotiable part of the contract because they fall under the realm of facilities management, which he says is the administration's responsibility.

Although it is the basis of the conflict, key issuance was not the main theme of Friday's rally, attended by about 75.

The speakers focused instead on issues of student empowerment and student decision-making when student fees are involved. Noting that the Student Center is funded by student fees, several speakers called for student control of the

Encouraging passers-by to stop and listen, the co-op members emphasized that their struggle affects all students who benefit from the services the co-ops provide, such as low-cost food, school supplies, and alternative literature.

Several students spoke of ending what Food Co-op member Benjamin Reibera termed "a long history of the administrators on this campus assuming the parental

According to Hellmann, 246 trees will be removed during construction, 25 percent of which are diseased. He added that the current policy is to plant one tree for every tree that is removed.

In this project, however, the landscaping around the library will be markedly different from its present appearance, since it will be impossible to replant tall trees on top of the library addition.

Instead, the landscape designers have created a park-like setting with plants, benches, and paths.

The area surrounding the library will contain a major plaza fronting the Central Library entrance and sculptures on the south side. On the north side, native canyon vegetation will be planted to blend with the canyon, Hellman said.

The underground design was created by Gunnar Birkets & Associates Inc., and was chosen so as to not obscure or mar the original building, which has become a campus landmark, according to the University Communications office.

Both floors will be built underground, but will incorporate windows and skylights. Between the existing building and the addition, Birkets designed what he calls a "light canyon," extending the canyon to the north of the library to bring light into the addition. Plans and a model of the completed library and addition are currently on display in the Library Lounge of the Price Center.

Nicaraguan Election

Reform In Jeopardy

The future of Nicaragua appears bleak. The elation over the election of Violeta Chamorro is fading quickly, and the new administration faces many daunting problems. Not the least of these is the reluctance of the Sandinistas to bow to the will of the people and effect a smooth transition.

The Sandinistas spent millions campaigning for Daniel Ortega, the American media was convinced they would sail to victory. But the dissatisfaction with Sandinista mismanagement and repression was strong; the voters could not be bought.

It's easy to forget in an age of predominantly peaceful revolution in Eastern Europe that communist thugs don't like to give up power. Statements from members of the Sandinista regime are laced with subtle and overt threats: mentions of possible violence, distribution of free weapons to civilians, and demands that the "goals of the revolution" not be renounced.

But renouncing those goals is precisely what the people of Nicaragua desire: they certainly don't want a return to the days of Somoza, but they clearly want deliverance from the disaster of Marxist-Leninist economics. The New Republic reports that "The Sandinistas had presided over the economic destruction of Nicaragua: a ruined export economy; a 90 percent drop in living standards; massive unemployment and hunger; the exodus of nearly a fifth of its people, including most of its skilled workers and professionals...."

Sandinista apologists point to U.S. pressure as the cause of these troubles. This is a weak argument, however, since there isn't a successful Marxist economy in the world, and there is hardly reason to believe Nicaragua would have been the exception were it not for the big, bad United States.

The people of Nicaragua weren't fooled by that argument. Unfortunately, it may all be for nothing. Sandinistas have threatened violence if the Contras are not demobilized, and have reportedly been handing out weapons to supporters. The Sandinistas are also frantically attempting to pass laws, including a general amnesty act, which would virtually paralyze the new government.

A paralyzed government would be — if it is possible — worse than the Sandinistas. The Nicaraguan economy is in shambles, and the Ortega regime systematically weakened the society's institutions in an effort to make the state supreme. Rebuilding will be difficult in any circumstances; with resistance — perhaps armed — from the Sandinistas, it may be impossible.

That is precisely what the Sandinistas want. The opposition promised prosperity, and if they fail to deliver, the Sandinistas can step in with a new revolution — perhaps democratic, perhaps not. Either way, Nicaragua will be worse off than before, and will be sliding once again down the failed communist path.

This fate may be avoided with the help of the rest of the free world and the Soviet Union, and a clear-headed U.S. policy directed toward assisting democracy. No matter what the rest of world does, however, the future of Nicaragua — as always — rests with the Nicaraguan people. Hopefully they will beat the odds.

Muir Students Outraged At Stereotypes

Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to the letter regarding Muir freshpersons and Muir College. ("Egotistical Morons at Muir", March 5) I am a Muir College freshperson and took great offense at the blatant generalities and unfounded comments made in this letter.

The argument seems to be that those students attending Warren College are morally superior and humble when compared to those students attending Muir.

I would venture to say that at any given campus here at UCSD, you will be able to find a relatively even number of students who you find offensive or below your own moral standards.

At the same time, there will be a number of students who do meet your moral standards and who you would be able to get along well with.

It sounds as though you take offense at the jokes people make about how far dining facilities are from Warren College. I am sure that if you request that your "friend" from Muir not make these comments, (s)he would cease and possibly apologize. However, these jokes you take such offense in are only humor.

No one is claiming that you will receive a lesser education at Warren College because you live further away from the dining facilities. If you continue through life with such a grim sense of humor and outlook, you are bound to encounter all sorts of people you are not going to get along with.

This brings up my next point. You call all male students at Muir "assholes" and all females "sleazy." You base all of these assumptions on your encounters with maybe five students at Muir. I wish you would point out to me these women strutting about in their underwear. I have been living in the Muir Residence Halls for an entire year and have yet to see half naked women roaming freely about hitting on any person they happen to encounter.

How can you make these generalities based only on your limited experiences at Muir?

Next, your colorful use of adjectives (asshole, sleazy) can only lead one to believe that you have a firm grasp on the English language and are able to maturely convey your ideas.

You act in your letter as if you could actually pick a Muir student out of a line-up. I have friends from several of the UCSD colleges, and we're all different people.

I don't believe that the colleges have altered out individual personalities so much that where one student used to be a great person and fun to be around, now (s)he is morally corrupted and egotistical.

In your future whinnings, try to be more specific about your target. I am sure I speak for many when I say that I, as a Muir College student, take offense in your ramblings.

P.S. Guardian Editors: How could you even consider printing this kind of garbage in your newspaper?

At least try to find literate letters.

Robert Howard

Complaints Must Cease

Editor:

I have noticed, in the last few years and particularly since I transferred to UCSD, that people sure like to do an extraordinary amount of complaining. Here on campus the students like to complain about parking, fees, and the administration. I would like to address those of you who are the most vocal: Shut up.

How can students complain about parking on this campus? If you don't like the cost then don't buy the permit. And what did you expect, your own personalized space right next to all of your classes? Get real, people. If you want parking fees, go downtown and pay eighty bucks a month to park under a bank. Yes, it costs money to park, but relatively the cost is quite low. And as many are quick to point out, the faculty gets the choice spots on campus and there are always spaces in their lots. If I were an instructor here and had to put up with some of the wet-nosed whining brats that pass themselves off as students, I would demand, at the least, decent parking.

As far as the fees go, everyone likes to mention that they pay for this school so they should get what they want. I've got some news for you people, you don't pay diddly. For a major university such as this, our fees are nothing. If you really want to complain about paying fees transfer to Stanford.

Are you still wondering why the administration decided to screw-up Urey lawn? Is another building really necessary? Ask this, people: would you be here today if the university had quit adding to the campus in '72? Enrollment keeps going up, and as long as new suckers keep applying, new buildings will continue to be built. Of course they could put the new building on the other side of I-5, but don't bitch when you have ten minutes to run two miles to get to class.

This seems to cover the majority of the complaints that surface for no apparent reason other than the fact that some people need to bitch all of the time. I will not deny that there are several problems in the above areas that need to be addressed, but writing letters to the editor complaining about the problem does nothing towards solving it. If you people are really interested in keeping control of this school in the hands of the students then do something. You can all start with voting. If you don't vote, that's just as good as telling the Regents that they own us.

The next time you want to complain about something, remember: they could bulldoze your favorite parking lot tomorrow, our fees could reflect the quality of our educational opportunity and be thousands more, and they'll probably raze your dorm next just to shut you up. Instead of complaining about it, think about the problem objectively and write to your elected representative with a viable solution.

'The Hollow Men': The Disillusionment Of A First-Year Student

By BEN BOYCHUK, Associate Opinion Editor

We are the hollow men

We are the stuffed men

Leaning together

My first year at college has been an amazing, enlightening, yet profoundly disturbing experience. My initial months here were a festive time. Parties were easily found, alcohol flowed freely, people were excited. But with the advent of midterms, certain academic realities took hold, and with that, certain social realities became apparent as well.

Shape without form, shade without color

Paralyzed force, gesture without motion.

In high school, I was a bit of an anachronism. I felt like I was 30 in a little nation run by toddlers. I didn't like the high school social life much, and it didn't like me. The ridiculous parties each weekend were one thing. I didn't have to go to those. What disturbed me was the attitude that there are the "cool" and the "uncool," the "accepted" and the "unaccepted." Unfortunately, those terms could mean anything to any particular group. What disturbed me more was to watch good people, with sensible values and creative minds, sell out their consciences for the privilege of acceptability.

I thanked God when I got out.

For some strange reason, I expected college to be totally different. I had visions of an academic and social "Xanadu" where I could partake of honeydew and drink the milk of paradise. I counted down the days, until finally, the great day came, and I moved on campus. My God, I'd never been more excited. My dream had finally come true.

For a time, I thought I was happy. I thought I had found my place in paradise at last. But the honeydew overripened, the milk became sour, and I suddenly realized that I had been terribly, terribly naive.

This is the dead land

This is the cactus land

Here the stone images

Are raised, here they receive

The supplication of a dead man's hand

Under the twinkle of a fading star"

The consequences of my naivety have been devastating. I realize now that I am living in a dorm splintered into several factions. Dislike and disunity run rampant. My suite virtually cut everyone off from the outset. Our fellow residents were judged, found guilty, and convicted very quickly. Nobody ever had a chance. Animosity runs deep to this day.

Bickering, senseless and misinformed gossip, ostracism—all became the norm. Everything I had despised and eluded in high school had finally caught up with me here.

The UCSD
GUARDIAN Close-up

I wasn't drinking the milk of paradise at all... I was drinking from the very cesspool of lies I had fought so hard, and so successfully, to resist a few months before. Luckily, I caught myself. We've made so many mistakes, taken so much for granted, lost so many friendship opportunities, and worst of all, wasted so much time. Now I am trying to repair the damage I helped cause, if only little by little.

It doesn't take a genius to realize that the very same people I deplored in high school would be most of the same people I would encounter in college. These are the same people who dictated what was right and what was wrong to those who felt it imperative to listen, lest they be judged "unacceptable." It's almost as if they've come to get those of us who managed to escape them in high school.

The eyes are not here

There are no eyes here

In this valley of dying stars

In this hollow valley

This broken jaw of our lost kingdoms

College is a place where great freedom can be exercised. For many of us, we've never had access to so much freedom. For some, it is a time to throw caution to the wind. "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we shall die!" For those of us who did not have such freedoms at home, the temptation is amazingly great to literally become drunk on the freedoms offered to us here.

But with freedoms come responsibilities, and those constraints which our consciences place upon us.

It saddens me to see that so many of us have fallen. We were so strong. We never yielded to the pressures of high school. I thought we would rather die than surrender.

But the temptations are so beautiful. To be able to exercise unbridled personal and sexual freedom is a very attractive offer, indeed. To at last assert ourselves, without the burdensome supervision of our damned, meddling parents. To finally break free from home's repressive chains. To at last experience unlimited, unknown pleasures.

But everything has its price. For those of us who fought against conformity, against ostracism, against judgement, that price is our souls.

I cannot and will not judge the lifestyles of others. For some, hedonism is a path they have chosen to travel. For others, a life devoted to God is their chosen way. There are millions of lifestyles to choose from, and it would be wrong to condone or condemn any one in particular, because each person has to seek out his or her own form of happiness. Coercing people into a way of life that goes against everything they believe in is not just wrong, it's destructive.

In this last of meeting places

We grope together

And avoid speech

Gathered on this beach of the tumid river

That, I believe, is just a part of the problem with life here. We, the future of America and the world, have sunk into a collective mediocrity. Motivation is slowly but surely slipping away. We, the "Best America Has", are not the best anymore.

Murder Story Was Dangerous and Distasteful

Editor:

I'm responding to the article "UCSD Woman Found Murdered In Her Clairemont Apartment," splashed over the front page of Feb. 20 issue of The Guardian. I feel the article's content displayed poor taste on the paper's part, and the article for the front cover was an invasion of Janene Weinhold's privacy to announce her personal life as it was.

I picked up an issue late Tuesday afternoon and skimmed the headlines, expecting to see an article about the Regents planning a new building for campus. Instead, the article regarding Weinhold quickly got my attention, and I had to finish reading it once I started. This article was so out of character for The Guardian that it gave me a scare. This is my third year here at UCSD, and dreadful happenings such as assaults and murders are publicized at all times at the Women's Resource Center and at the provost's office. Whereas The Guardian, which has the largest circulation on campus, has publicized neither type of case until this article, which was also done in poor taste. The style of the article wasn't informative by giving the facts and ways to prevent such a tragedy but was written to scare UCSD women.

It was very important to inform us of this malicious fatality, but the paper had no business to bring us into this young woman's world and allow us to know her personal doings. The article made us get to know this girl, which enabled us to relate our lives to hers, which brought the situation too close to home. It made thousands of UCSD girls fear for their lives Tuesday night. Every girl who read the article, including myself, locked all doors and windows and checked them three times to ensure their safety. I couldn't even stay home alone; I had to call a friend over to be with me.

It was very important that this tragedy was brought to everyone's attention and that we're aware of the evils in this world, but the approach to this article was distasteful by splashing it on the front page and announcing the personal life of the late young woman. The Guardian needs to take a stand and inform us of such happenings at all times but yet with a tactful manner. I'm deeply sorry for those of you that did know Weinhold and hope that this distasteful article didn't increase the pain, anger, fear, and all the other ill emotions you're feeling.

Disillusion

We've lost our spirit.

Somewhere along the way, someone forgot to instill us with the values, ethics, and ideals of our forefathers. We, the youth of today, have forgotten honor. We have lost respect for each other and ourselves. We are manipulative. We play with each other's minds like pawns on a chess board. We are an uncaring, unfeeling society. We are a society wracked by violence, fear, and despair.

How can we, the future, expect to deal with such huge problems as drugs, debt, and crime, if we can't relate to each other? We, the future, are encouraging our own destruction, by not allowing ourselves, as individuals, to assert ourselves as individuals. We are so caught up with trying to conform to some social norm, but I'll be damned if I don't know just what that norm is.

Do any of us?

And if we do, why can't we see all of the harm it is causing?

It's as though our souls have been eaten away, from the core out, leaving us shells of what we once could have been.

Now, as we try so hard to be socially conscious, to help those less fortunate than ourselves, we fail to see that those who are truly the victims of misfortune are ourselves. Before we try to heal the wounded around us, perhaps we should take time to heal the wounds amongst ourselves. We've wasted enough time already, and life is much too short to be untrue to ourselves.

"This is the way the world ends

This is the way the world ends

This is the way the world ends

Not with a bang but a whimper"

CO-OPS: UCSD Students Protest Possible Eviction of Organizations

role over the students."

Student Ted Robertson said, "It just seems to me that we should be the reason for this university, and we're not. We're a goddamn excuse."

In addition, many speakers accused the administration of a general disregard for student opinions.

Groundwork Collective member Steve Dubb was critical of "the absolute contempt the administration has shown, not just towards the co-ops, but towards the University Center Board, the Associated Students, and the Graduate Student Association. [The administration is] not respecting anyone. All these bodies have said, 'We support the co-ops.'"

Co-op member Andy Howard outlined the co-ops' current strategy.

"Number one, we have to protect the co-ops until we get a lease signed. Number two, we have to get a lease signed, and number three, we have to build up the co-ops as organizations so that their struggle emerges stronger than when we went into it."

After speaking for one hour, members of the co-ops and supportive students marched to the Price Center and the Chancellor's Complex, chanting, "evict Chancellor Dick" and "save the co-ops."

At the Price Center, the marchers, numbering several dozen, brought their chants to Carruthers' office, where police began to take a large poster out of the protesters' hands.

Informing the police that the students' sign and presence did not bother him, Carruthers said, "I think university centers are the place where debates should happen. I think it's a very emotional, real response, and I respect that."

In terms of student control over student fee-funded facilities, Carruthers feels that students should have "quite a bit [of control], but not beyond the responsibilities that the university has."

"I think the control that the co-ops have over their own destiny here is quite broad. . . . I don't see the keys as affecting that, but they see it differently," he said.

Revelle senior Ed Cuhna believes that there are many students on campus who, like himself, are not members of a co-op but support the co-ops' position.

"I'd like to join them in their struggle to get what they want and to address the source of the problem, which is the administration," he said.

Cuhna said the debate over the co-ops' contract, as well as the construction projects on campus, are "examples of how the administration is just running rampant and just disregarding students."

Co-op members feel that another example of administrative disregard of students involves the lease the co-ops are being offered by the administration.

The University Center Board (UCB), whose voting members are students, and the co-ops recently negotiated a lease. The lease allowed the co-ops to use their own locks and keys, provided that they made copies available to the administration for emergency access purposes.

The board's decisions are advisory to Vice Chancellor for Undergraduate Affairs Joseph Watson.

The UCB presented the lease to Watson in February.

In a letter to Groundwork Books, Watson said that the UCB's lease "does not meet the administrative requirements of the university, and, consequently, is not an option."

The co-ops said the administration's refusal to offer them the UCB's lease is inconsistent with university policy. Article VI, Section 6, Clause 3 of the UCB charter states that, "the University Center Board shall approve and renew annually all co-op contracts, charters, and leases." Clause 5 states that "the University Center Director, at the approval of the UCB, shall enter into leases. . . with student co-ops. . . using the University Center Facilities."

The co-ops are seeking documented justification for the administration's plans to reallocate Student Center space despite the UCB charter and a resolution the UCB recently passed recognizing only its lease as an option.

Many students share UCSD student Richard Fernandez's belief that such administrative actions represent "a blatant usurpation of power."

Although unable to quote a specific policy, Carruthers feels that Watson's action in opposition to the UCB's decision is justified. "If Undergraduate Affairs has the responsibility for the co-ops, which they do, then that's not necessarily a Policies and Procedures Manual item. . . . If [the co-ops] . . . fall under [Watson's] area, then he has the right to make reasonable guidelines," Carruthers said.

"All the actions of the UCB are advisory to the vice chancellor of undergraduate affairs — all actions. Based on that, it's clear to me that he has that right" to act against the UCB, he said.

Echoing the sentiments of many speakers, Ché Café member Martin Rascon said, "It's time that we take control. This is our university. This is our society. How long are you going to put up with this? If we do it together, they can't stop us," Rascon said.

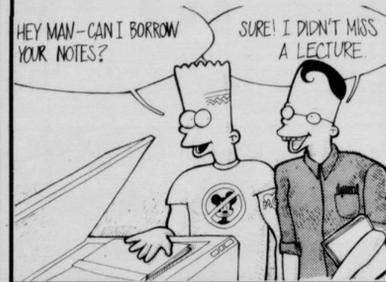

The co-ops and their supporters plan to hold another rally Wednesday at noon on the gym steps.

GO BACK TO THE PAST

Group Attempts to Recreate the Middle Ages

Gail Johnson/Guardian

Robert Melson, a member of the Society for Creative Anachronism, demonstrates the use of his weaponry.

Historical Accuracy Stressed; No 'Trolls and Pixies Among Us'

• Story By Doreen Ereneau, Associate Features Editor

The flaps of the colorful tents were blowing in the wind, and people were in dressed in costumes that should only have existed in history books or paintings — ranging from elaborate and intricate designs to everyday attire. A place that had been a small piece of grass next to some concrete structures was transformed into something out of a storybook...or the Middle Ages.

Walking into UCSD's Stonehenge area on Saturday, one could observe valiant knights fighting in a roped-off area, as spectators dressed in medieval clothing were watching and cheering. Everyone appeared to be in a jovial mood and enjoying the afternoon, despite the cloudy weather.

It was like stepping back in time to a period where people were courteous and well-mannered, addressing each other as "my lady" or "my lord." Conversations flowed like wine into goblets of silver.

The impetus for this trip into the past was a tournament for the San Diego area Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA), organized by the UCSD chapter. The Stonehenge area had been transformed into the Middle Ages — Joe Smith was no longer Joe Smith; he was Sir Joseph Smithington of Canterbury.

SCA members create their own persona or character that could have lived during the Middle Ages. One member explained that their personas are not based on characters from literature or upon historical figures, but instead are original creations.

Club members invent their characters by doing research into the history of the Middle Ages and by trying to understand what it was like to live during that time period.

"[People] have a tendency to look at medieval people as dumb or as savages, but they have accomplished a lot. Being in the SCA makes you stop to appreciate it," said Robert Hand, who goes by the name Robert Carpenturas in the SCA.

Usually, members give themselves new names and create some sort of history for their characters. Everyone at the tournament was called by his SCA name. One member's real name is not even known to others in the SCA, according to another member.

Once members create their identities, they make corresponding costumes to wear to SCA events and meetings. Many of the members explained that their costumes reflect the time period and region their characters are from. They range in styles from the most elaborate to the most common outfits.

"No matter where your interest lies, you'll find something that interests you," said Hand, who was dressed in a middle-class businessman's costume which included a brown cape and a feather-plumed cap.

A woman, who claimed she and her character were Irish, explained that her costume was allowed to be more elaborate than the others because in her character's region people only wore very elaborate and colorful dresses. Her red velvet gown featured black embroidery, over which she wore a thick grey cape with red lining. She explained that the wealth of jewelry she wore was characteristic of her character's time period and region.

Another woman was dressed in a tight-fitting red and white gown with a low-cut bodice.

She explained that her clothing would have been considered undergarments in medieval England. She said that her dress was supposed to be worn only at home, and that if a woman of her time period were to go out, she would put on an outer skirt and wear a higher-cut bodice that didn't reveal as much.

People throughout the area were busily participating in activities characteristic of the medieval time period. Some were weaving, others played folk music on recorders, and some took part in fights.

"This is not a fantasy. You won't find trolls and pixies among us. A lot of what we do is researched, heavily researched," said Penny Melson, who goes by the name Amber Ulfsuottier.

Melson said that the group put an emphasis on the best aspects of the Middle Ages, such as the emphasis on chivalry.

"SCA members have a tendency to be on the rescue. They tend to help out people when they are in need," Melson said.

She told a story of how one SCA member stopped along the side of a road to help a woman change her tire, and then suffered a heart attack. Melson said the group holds a memorial banquet every year for the Samaritan.

"We all try to keep with the premise that we are all gentle born. A lot of it carries over into our daily lives. Manners are very important," Melson said. "You know you're in the SCA when you curtsy to your boss."

Most SCA members belong to groups that take part in specific activities. The majority of the activities fall into one of three categories: fighting, arts, and club organization. Probably one of the most visible activities of the SCA is the fighting.

"We use real armor because we need to protect ourselves," said fighter Andy Deuchars, who goes by the name Talorc.

Deuchars said SCA members use rattan wood to make weapons because "it's flexible, takes impact, and it breaks cleanly." He also emphasized that they try to make the weapons as realistic and as close to medieval standards as possible.

Another fighter, Scott Farrell (Guillaume), explained that there is not a standard of skill that people have to meet to become fighters. But there is an authorization required for fighters, which "goes to show that they're safe on the field, safe to themselves, and safe to everyone else."

SCA members have a tendency to be on the rescue. They tend to help out people when they are in need.

"As long as you have an interest it's all right to participate," Farrell said. He also explained that it costs about $100 to put a basic set of armor together, but sometimes people will spend thousands of dollars for their armor.

All of the members agreed that anyone can fight, and that they are willing to train whoever is interested. Farrell said that even women can fight if they want to.

According to the San Diego chapter of SCA, there are "three important documents that all new fighters should have ready access to."

The first of these is the Marshal's Handbook, which contains rules that must be followed by all kingdoms throughout society. The second is the Marshal's Handbook of the Kingdom of the Caid. This book covers the rules for the specific Kingdom of Caid (Southern California).

"All fighters and marshals need to be familiar with these rules and refer to [the rules] when getting their equipment ready," according to the SCA.

Finally, there is a pamphlet written by Guillaume De La Belgique called "Dumb Answers to the Dumb Questions Most New Fighters Ask." This is a practical guide to advice on armor, weapons, field etiquette, and other subjects.

The battles begin in a designated area of a field. The announcer loudly addresses the audience and tells them which fighters are to do battle. The fighters get into their armor and choose their weapons. They then prepare to fight.

However, they must first salute the throne, the person whose favor they bear, and the person whom they are fighting. The fighters usually fight for a person in friendship or for a girlfriend or boyfriend.

"Talorc is fighting for my honor in the field. I watch him while he is fighting," explained Laurie Flieder, a member of the UCSD SCA chapter.

"Bearing a favor is usually done in friendship, and ladies are placed on pedestals, so it's a honor," she said.

Present in the area are marshals, who are there to "make sure that the fighters don't go out of the specified area, protect the observers, and [make judgment calls] if the fighters ask them to," said Flieder.

But the fighters themselves make the final judgment as to the winner of the battle. According to Flieder, if a fighter is hit on the arm, he must act as if the weapon really injured his arm. If the sword hits a fighter hard enough, he is considered dead. SCA members also take part in a variety of art forms, including costuming, calligraphy, brewing, dancing, music, cooking, and singing.

"We try to make each piece of art as authentic as possible, right down to the pigment in the paints and in the costumes," Farrell said.

The SCA also takes part in organizational activities by scheduling banquets, tournaments, and meetings.

The SCA tries to recreate the Middle Ages not as they were, but as they should have been. They are "devoted to learning about the period of history called the Medieval Era," according to information provided by the SCA.

The organization is worldwide, and has charter branches in Germany, Sweden, and New Zealand. According to Baroness Elinore Windimere (June Ashworth), head of the San Diego area SCA, there are nearly 100,000 SCA members worldwide. The organization is entering its 25th year of existence.

Within the United States, the organization is divided into hierarchical sections, the largest being kingdoms. Kingdoms are usually states, unless the state is large, like California. California is divided into two kingdoms — the Kingdom of Caid (Southern California) and the Kingdom of the West (Northern California).

Within the kingdoms are baronies. There are about a half-dozen baronies in Southern California alone. The San Diego barony has been in existence for 20 years.

In addition, there are smaller groups within the baronies called cantons. The cantons are usually sections of the baronies divided up by physical location. The UCSD campus canton is called the College of St. Ardamis.

"We're about two years old. There had been a group at UCSD about 15 years ago, but everyone in the group graduated, and there just wasn't anyone left to continue the tradition," said Shannon Torrey, a UCSD alumni who helped re-form the College of St. Ardamis.

How to Get Involved

The group meets the second Sunday of every month at the Muir Apartment Lounge. Phone: 698-7242.

National Championship veterans who could pick up the points necessary to push UCSD over the top.

The Triton stars include Rich Daniels (ranked first in the 200 freestyle), Greg Goodrich (ranked first in the 100 backstroke), and Brad Thomas, who sits atop the 500 and 1650 freestyle rankings.

The Tritons' 400 medley relay team, which finished first in last year's event, returns intact. They lead a strong group of relay teams that is expected to earn points for the challengers.

According to Morgan, Kenyon is 150-150 points better than UCSD on paper. However, the Tritons have swum well in big meets this year and, with their experience, 150 points is not an unrealistic number to overcome.

Morgan believes that Kenyon's lack of depth has left the door slightly ajar, and that the Tritons could sneak through. Thus, the Triton challenge could make for the most competitive National Championship meet in years.

"Kenyon will be a big hurdle for us to overcome," Morgan said. "But, we have been preparing all season for this meet.

"If we are at all capable of beating Kenyon, we will because this is what we have been training for," Morgan concluded.

BASEBALL
Head Coach Lyle Yates said that this was Rupkey's "best showing" this year. Rupkey was a second-team All-American last season, but started slowly in his senior campaign.
Tomolonis relieved and closed out the second game as well, earning his second save of the afternoon.
Yates was obviously pleased with Saturday's results, and said that the team is "right where they want to be."
As Whittier is not seen as a contender in Division III, Yates believes it was necessary for the Tritons to show domination over the weaker Poets.
According to Yates, Whittier can be viewed "a measuring stick" team. Yates, looking toward post-season possibilities, thinks that UCSD, as an independent, has to convincingly beat pushover teams like Whittier to put itself into good position for post-season consideration.

Yates also felt that the team accomplished everything it set out to do. Every player on the club participated in Saturday's games, either at the plate or on the field.
Starting third baseman Dave Ligerman, UCSD's leading hitter last year, showed signs of shaking off his early season slump, going 2 for 2 in the second game.
Other standouts were seniors Eric Judson and J.J. Fisher, who went 4 for 6 and 3 for 4, respectively, in the sweep for the Tritons.
UCSD is now 8-7 overall and 5-1 versus Division III opponents, and is ranked 10th nationally.
The Tritons play against a Division II team, Wayne State from Nebraska, on Monday.
After finals week, they face Montclair St. and Occidental of California, both tough Division III schools.

M. V-BALL

just got the ball to bounce our way," UCSD Head Coach Oscar "Digger" Graybill said.
A surprised SDSU team regrouped behind the serving of John Ross to open the second game with a quick 6-0 lead.
UCSD staged a late game rally and narrowed the score to 8-7 behind Ken Blackman's serving.
The game went back and forth until Ross served and closed out the game for SDSU, 15-10.
The third game was played much like the other two, as SDSU team set up its shots well taking a 13-7 lead over UCSD.
Once again, however, UCSD was able to answer the Aztecs' bid for a lead with a strong rally, as the Tritons were able to tie the game at 14-14 behind Matt Brega's serving and Lamson Lam's kills.
However, as in the previous game, the Aztecs were able to serve out the match 16-14.
"I feel that we got behind early in those games and just did not have enough in the end to win," Graybill said.

In contrast to the first three games, UCSD opened the fourth game with a strong offensive show that led to an early 4-0 lead.
SDSU tied it up at 6-6, but then UCSD broke the game open with an 8-2 run.
Yet, reminiscent of a match against UC Irvine a few weeks ago, the Tritons could not convert six-game point opportunities, as the Aztecs slowly rallied to win the last game, and the match, 17-16.
Despite the loss, Graybill was pleased with his squad's performance. "I feel proud that we gave a good Division I team all it can handle," Graybill said.
The Tritons play Navy on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Main Gym before breaking for finals and spring vacation. They will then start play in the Pacific Coast Volleyball Conference where they are considered the ones to beat.
According to Graybill, the main opposition in the conference, which consists of Division III teams, will come from La Verne and UCSC.

Tritons Break in New Track With Wins in 5-Way Meet

By LINDA SPHARLER
Staff Writer

UCSD's track and field teams tracked down and conquered all their competition in Saturday's five-way meet with Redlands, Cal State Fullerton, Pomona-Pitzer, and Claremont at the first meet at the new North Campus track.

The 140 team points accumulated by Triton women were followed by a modest showing from Redlands, which posted a mere 32 1/2 points. CSU Fullerton was third with 26 points, followed by Pomona-Pitzer with 13 1/2, and Claremont with 13 to round out the field.

In the men's overall scoring, UCSD emerged victorious over Cal State Fullerton with an 88-62 win. Pomona-Pitzer's 58 points were good for third place, while Redlands had 51 points, and Claremont earned 35.

In addition to the overall victories, five Tritons posted national qualifying marks, and four school records were broken.

Shannon Quigley, Rachel Beerman, and Shelly Squibb each threw the discus to national qualifying distances of 158'7", 156', and 141'10", respectively, and claimed the top three spots in the event.

Quigley also went on to win the shot put with a 43' 1 3/4" heave.

In the men's field events, Paul Cogbill shattered his old school record of 144' in the discus with a 163' mark, making him eligible to compete at the Nationals.

Teammate Scott Sargeant followed suit, hurling the discus to a 145' national qualifying distance.

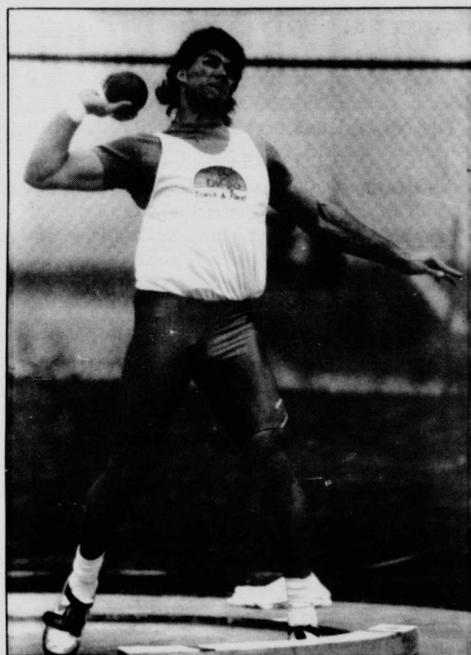

Sargeant had a busy day all-around, lengthening his own hammer throw record of 183' 2" to 183' 9", and finishing first in the shot put (45' 8 1/2").

On the brand-new track, Vicki Dunkley hurdled her way to a new school record in the 400m with a time of 67.86.

The men's 4x400 m relay team also shaved some time off a UCSD record, clocking in at 3:21.79.

Triton Head Coach Mark Stanforth was pleased with the teams' performances.

"For this time in the season, we really posted some good marks," Stanforth commented.

Brian Morris/Guardian

Scott Sargeant won the shot put, discus, and hammer events in Saturday's meet. Sargeant qualified for the Nationals with a discus throw of 145'. Paul Cogbill also qualified in the discus.

Men's Lacrosse Recovers from Losing Streak; Beats Up On Manhattanville

By MATT RASBAND
Guardian Reporter

With an easy 15-7 victory over Manhattanville on Thursday, the UCSD men's lacrosse team ended a three-game losing streak and upped its record to 7-2.

UCSD had dropped its last two games by a total of three goals to two of the West's top teams, Arizona and Whittier, before winning what UCSD Co-Head Coach Bob MacLeod termed "a really sloppy game."

"We were coming off a couple of tough, emotional games," MacLeod said. "I wasn't expecting us to play really well. It's good to get back in a winning frame of mind."

Although MacLeod was not particularly impressed with the Tritons' performance, his team did jump in front early and cruise to the easy victory.

Sven Haynie, a junior attackman who had four goals and an assist, opened the scoring just 23 seconds into the game for the Tritons.

By the end of the first quarter, UCSD had built a 5-3 lead, en route to an 8-4 halftime edge.

The second quarter was the Juan Millan Show, as he scored three of his four goals in the final five minutes of the quarter. All were shot from over 10 yards out, sneaking by three defenders and the goalie.

The only difference in the second half was which Triton produced his own highlight film. This time it was senior midfielder Chris Hodje, who added three goals.

MacLeod was impressed with the play of goalie Tony Prestigiacomo, who kept Manhattanville out of the game with key saves.

According to MacLeod, the victory was especially sweet because Manhattanville is on the East Coast, where lacrosse is more popular and better established at the college level than in the West.

"It feels good to play an Eastern team and beat them up. It shows that we can hold our own," MacLeod said.

Men's Tennis Edged by Emory, 5-4, After Two-week Layoff

By DAVID LINDSTROM
Staff Writer

Although the overcast weather may not have been the best, the Emory Eagles of Georgia are having a good Spring Break in California.

Yesterday afternoon, the Eagles defeated the UCSD men's tennis team, 5-4.

For the fifth-ranked Tritons, it was their first dual meet since they finished their match against Air Force on February 21.

Sunday, UCSD ran into trouble in the singles matches, but Tim Ditzler won his match 6-3, 6-0.

The other Triton winner in the singles was Chris Belloli, who lost the first set 6-2, and was losing the second 2-5 when he won the next five games to take the set 7-5. He won the last set 6-2.

The rest of the Tritons, however, lost their singles matches.

Francois Monnar lost 7-6, 6-4. Jeff Beathard went down 4-6, 7-6, 6-4. Sig Huber fell 6-4, 6-4, and Steve Stukovsky lost 6-0, 6-4.

UCSD did manage to take two of three doubles matches.

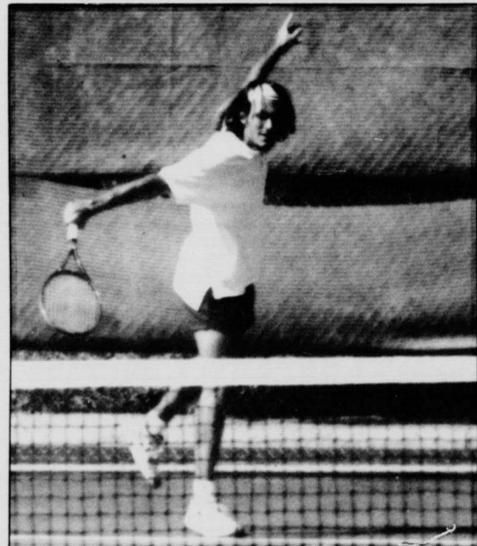

Huber and Belloli teamed up to win 6-2, 6-4, and the team of Stukovsky and Beathard won 6-4, 6-4. Monnar and Ditzler lost 7-5, 6-1.

For UCSD, this match was the first of several in a row against teams from the East and the South.

According to Monnar, these teams present a different style of play than the Tritons are used to.

"They use a lot of top spin and big ground strokes. They like to play the baseline a lot more. In the West, the players usually move up on the net more," Monnar said.

The Tritons will play host to Eastern squads four days in a row, starting today with the University of Rochester (NY) at 3 p.m.

Rimas Uzgriris/Guardian

Chris Belloli won his singles match 2-6, 7-5, 6-2, but that was one of only two singles wins for UCSD, which fell to Emory 5-4.

Women's Lacrosse Ends Three-game Losing Streak UCSD Riddles Poets 8-3, Falls to UCSB

By MATT RASBAND
Guardian Reporter

Hampered by a goalie who had never played the position in her life, the UCSD women's lacrosse team managed to break even in two games on Saturday.

The Tritons (3-8) won the early game against Whittier 8-3 to break a three-game losing streak.

Later that afternoon, UCSD was knocked around by UC Santa Barbara, losing 9-1.

UCSD Head Coach Matt Holman encountered problems before the games when his regular goalie had to go home because of a family emergency.

"I just asked the girls who wanted to play goalie, and Loc [Nguyen] volunteered. She did really well for having never played goalie before," Holman said.

Against Whittier, UCSD broke out to a 4-2 halftime lead and never looked back. Sharon Leibowitz and Kim Pogorelsky both had two goals for the Tritons, while Monique Mikrut had a goal and an assist.

Rimas Uzgriris/Guardian

Deekla Marshall (r) and the Tritons split games on Saturday.

"We put it all together in the first game," Holman said. "It was a complete game. All aspects of our play were good."

The UCSB contest was a complete reversal from the first game. The Gauchos scored early, while UCSD struggled.

Gretchen Rubel recorded the lone goal for the Tritons on a pass

"It was a tough game, but I'm proud of the team. They didn't give up. Santa Barbara is a good team. We'll see them again," Holman said.

The Tritons will break for finals and Spring Break before resuming play March 24 at Claremont.

Intercollegiate and Xtramural Update

Women's Water Polo Remains Undefeated

The UCSD women's water polo team remained undefeated on the season, at 7-0-1, maintaining its number one ranking with three victories and a tie at the UC Davis Tournament this weekend.

The Tritons tied UC Berkeley, 3-3, and then ran off three wins in a row, beating Stanford 15-2, UCD 4-2, and defending national champion UC Santa Barbara 9-7.

Jamie Dailey led the team with nine goals in the tournament.

Dailey, Christy Parker, Brenda Reiton, Toya Ellis, and goalkeeper Jeff Paulsen were named to the all-tournament team.

SOFTBALL

The UCSD softball team hit the .500 mark Friday with a double-header sweep at LaVerne, but fell to 6-8 after losing two games at CSU San Bernardino Saturday.

In Friday's opener, the Tritons blasted LaVerne 10-2, getting seven runs with two out in the fifth inning. Pitcher Kathy Fogg picked up her second victory in a row.

In the second game, the Tritons behind the pitching of Kim Stutzman (4-0) and Dianna Moreno, eeked out a 5-2 victory.

On Saturday, UCSD shortstop Dana Chaiken led off the first game with a home run, but the Tritons later left several runners stranded and fell to CSUSB 3-1.

Chaiken who posted four of the team's six hits on the day, added a triple in the second game. Fogg (2-4) took the loss, although she shut out the Coyotes after a three-run homer in the first.

In the nightcap, UCSD was held to just four hits, as CSUSB tallied two in the sixth for a 2-0 win. Dianna Moreno (0-1) took the complete game loss in her first start.

CREW

The UCSD men's and women's varsity crew teams swept both races against the University of Southern California yesterday at USC.

In the junior varsity division, the women's novice won by a length and a half over the USC JV boat. The Triton JV finished third.

The UCSD men's JV took first in the JV race, with a time of 7:11.8, as the UCSD novice finished second, followed by the USC JV.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

In only its second loss of the year, the UCSD women's tennis team fell 7-2 to Division I Western Michigan on Friday.

The Tritons' only victories came from Pam Haas at number five singles 6-0, 6-2, and the number two doubles team of Robyn Inaba and Janet Whalen, 6-1, 2-6, 6-1.

RUGBY

The men's rugby team (3-6) was shut out 32-0 by Cal State Long Beach Saturday afternoon at Pryateil Field.

CYCLING

In Saturday's Criterium, hosted by UCSD, Triton Mark Wineman took third in the Men's 'A.' Teammate David Deyhmi was fourth and Joel Washburn was seventh.

In Men's 'B,' Pete Fish finished sixth.

WHAT'S ADEMA? - Men's A Hockey

From those crazies who brought you the Physician's Desk Reference comes What's Adema?, a witty exposé on men with undiagnosable ailments and the women who loved them for it.

But rather than a traditional book-signing tour, the authors have turned to the sporting world to plug their latest work. They've joined community softball leagues, picked up several bowling nights, and are now doing intramural stints at colleges across the country to get the name out.

They may be in San Diego a little longer than expected however, as their last victory earned them the last spot in the A Hockey playoffs. Their 4-2 win over playoff-hopeful Men On Top boosted What's Adema? to 3-2 in the Nordiques League, pushing them over the crucial .500 mark.

After falling behind 1-0, left wing Dan Simons got Adema on the board with one second remaining in the first period. In the second period, another Simons goal and two tap-ins from center James Samford put the game well in hand for Adema.

The team is hoping an A hockey championship will bring them good PR. Remember the name—What's Adema? Meanwhile, guys—this ... sub's for you.

Dann Eaton picked up his third win Saturday vs. Whittier, but left in the middle of the fifth inning with a sore arm.

Baseball Clobbers Whittier 10-1 and 21-4

By MATTHEW ROCHIOS
Staff Writer

Saturday afternoon the UCSD men's baseball team utilized every opportunity given to it in crushing the Whittier College Poets 10-1 and 21-4.

In the first game of the doubleheader, the Tritons jumped on the Poets for eight runs in the first two innings.

They literally knocked out the Whittier starter after two batters in the first.

On a come-backer, Poet Brett Somers took a ball off the knee and was unable to continue, yet pitched long enough to get tagged with the loss.

UCSD's Dann Eaton (3-1) threw four full innings, striking out five and yielding only two hits. Eaton was in full control of the game when he departed, but was apparently bothered by a sore arm.

Senior Rich Tomolonis came on in the fifth and pitched the remainder of the game for the Tritons, sealing the win and picking up his first save of the season.

Whittier batters could only come up with four hits in the first game, compared to the 10 UCSD managed to accumulate.

The second half of the doubleheader featured a punishing hitting display by the Tritons.

UCSD pounded Poet pitching for 22 hits through just eight times at bat, scoring in every inning except the sixth.

Several players stroked for multiple-hit games, including Ernie Isola (5 for 8 on the day) in the blowout.

UCSD's Rick Rupkey went six innings to improve his record to 4-2.

Women's Swimming Nationals

Kenyon Wins Sixth Consecutive Title; UCSD Places 2nd

By BRIAN ITOW
Senior Staff Writer

The Triton women's swimming team made a splash in snowy Williamstown, Massachusetts but, for the sixth straight year, it could not break Kenyon College's ice.

The Tritons finished second with 443 points, 63 points behind the Division III swimming power from Ohio, in this weekend's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Junior transfer Catherine Capriles led the Triton challenge, setting NCAA Division III records in the 100 and 200 backstroke and the 200 individual medley.

She set the 100 backstroke record in leading the Tritons to a second-place finish in the 400 medley relay. Alice Kirby, Sabrina Lum, and Katy Arnold swam the breaststroke, butterfly, and freestyle legs, respectively, for the relay team that swam the course in a school record 3:58.07.

Capriles set new national records in winning the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:03.78, and in the 200 IM in 2:05.74. She also placed first in the 100 backstroke event.

Lum backed Capriles' performance by flying to a 2:06.51 second-place finish in the 200 butterfly. She also placed third in the 100 butterfly and fifth in the 200 i.m.

Erin Bakey contributed a strong second-place finish in the 200 breaststroke with a time of 2:27.77.

Jamee Couch set a new UCSD record in the 50 freestyle, swimming the course in 24:85 and finishing 12th to lead UCSD's second group of performers.

Jenna Banaszek, Nicole Ressler, Cindy Miller, Audrey Rossie, and Kirby also contributed to the Triton point total, as all scored in at least one event.

The Triton relay teams provided solid support. The 400 freestyle relay team of Couch, Arnold, Lum, and Capriles finished second with a time of 3:33. The 200 medley and 800 free relay teams each raced to second-place finishes.

In addition, the team's two divers posted strong performances, as Ruth Prange finished second in the one meter and sixth in the three-meter events. Kathy Wood followed up with ninth and eighth place finishes in the two events.

Following the competition, UCSD diving coach Tom Scotty was named Division III Diving Coach of the Year.

San Diego State Squeaks by UCSD Men's Volleyball

By SRINATH SANDA
Staff Writer

The UCSD men's volleyball squad ended its 15-game run against top 20 teams Friday night in exciting fashion, but the result was the same as the previous 14 games. The Tritons fell to San Diego State University 16-17, 15-10, 16-14, and 17-16.

UCSD (0-15) opened up Saturday night's match against the Aztecs by falling behind early, 7-2. The Aztecs took the lead by setting up their shots well and regrouping after blocks.

SDSU also benefitted from the strong play of Sean Clark and Mike Mattarocci who, for the game, combined for 43 kills.

The Tritons, however, pulled their act together and went on a 9-0 run to take an 11-7 lead.

The Aztecs eventually tied up the game at 16-16, but with UCSD's John Lim serving, fellow Triton Nate Brown, who led UCSD with 18 kills and six digs, got the kill to take the first game for UCSD.

"I think we came out with a little more fire than SDSU. We dug their shots well and

Men's Swimming Aims To Break Kenyon's 10-year Reign

Tritons Shooting for First National Crown

No team in NCAA history — not even John Wooden's UCLA Bruin basketball dynasty — has dominated its sport the way the Division III Kenyon College of Ohio men's swimming team has.

Kenyon dominated the 1980s as no other team could. For the entire decade, Kenyon swimmers gave a new meaning to the word dynasty. They captured 10 straight national championships, setting a new NCAA record. And in that span, they were rarely challenged, except by UCSD, which finished second five of the last six years.

But this is a new decade, and the Triton men believe it could be theirs.

UCSD boasts its best team ever. They have several swimmers who have national experience on their side. They want the crown that has now eluded them for three years.

For the 11 seniors who comprise a majority of the 17-man Triton squad that leaves today for the National Championships at Milwaukee, WI, this will be their last opportunity to catch Kenyon.

"Our guys believe they have a legitimate chance to win," UCSD Head Coach Bill Morgan said. "Kenyon is the only team that can beat us."

As usual, Kenyon is loaded with superstars. Yet, for the first time in a number of years, it does not have the depth that has been characteristic of its other dynasty era teams.

The Tritons do. They have a number of big scorers with the potential to pick up a lot of points. They also have a number of
