A Revelle College Publication - University of California, San Diego

In Brief Open House 1989: Look at Us Now!

Revelle College Provost Dr. Tom Bond would like to remind graduating seniors that they are once again being asked to nominate two faculty and one staff member for recognition at graduation. The awards consist of a plaque and small honorarium in recognition of outstanding teaching and service to Revelle Students. Seniors have received a list of faculty which unfortunately did not contain the names of three dedicated instructors in the Humanities program, Drs. Chris Norris, Errol Scaton, and Betsy Jordan. Seniors who have not received their notice should drop by the Provost's Office to pick one up.

Interested in being a model? NPB is having a spring fashion show on Friday, May 19th and wants student models to participate! Show off to your friends, be the first to try on the newest summer fashions, and have a lot of fun!! If you are interested, or just want more information, contact Diana at 558-2485 or Julia at 558-8911.

On Thursday, April 27, the Brothers of Sigma Chi Alpha will sponsor a study break for the hard-working students of Revelle. The event will be held in the Commuter Lounge between 8:00-10:00pm and feature free pizza and soft drinks. Furthermore, to ease the stress of midterms, broadcasts of NBC's Cosby Show and Cheers will be shown. Sigma Chi Alpha invites all UCSD students to attend the study break.

Sigma Chi Alpha is a colony of the international fraternity, Sigma Chi. Founded at UCSD over a year ago, its founding fathers consist primarily of Revelle students. In the future, the fraternity hopes to sponsor more events at Revelle College.

Meet the Prof

With the opening of the Price Center, the Council of Provosts will soon begin hosting a weekly social gathering for undergraduates and faculty. Each Friday from 1 to 3 p.m., the entire faculty of one department will be invited to the Price Center for light refreshments and informal meeting with undergraduate students. Students will be given a schedule of departments and dates so that they can participate in whichever events they choose.

The purpose of these meetings is to establish initial contact so that both the student and the faculty will feel more comfortable arranging other meetings or, subsequently, participating in other faculty-student events.

The current schedule for Spring quarter is listed below. All meeting times are from 1 to 3 p.m.

Renaissance Faire Relocates

By Aimee Nielsen

Sunday, April 30, will see the return of the Revelle Renaissance Faire, held in conjunction with the UCSD Open House. Every year the Faire is brought together by a committee consisting of members of the Dean's and Resident Dean's staff and a large group of dedicated students. Traditionally held on the South Lawn of the Humanities Library (now Galbraith Hall), this year the Faire will be held on the lawn in the Warren Quad, located behind the Political Science Building (MAAC 412). According to Assistant College Dean Yolanda Garcia, who is head of the committee, "the new location is a big plus because it puts the Faire close to the Price Center, which is the main focus of the Open House."

This year's Open House 1989: Look at Us Now will highlight the opening of the Price Center, and Yolanda predicts that the Faire will benefit from the large number of people who will pass through to see the new center.

A variety of exciting entertainment is planned for the crowds including Elizabethan and Shakespearean improvisation, magic shows, bands, renaissance singers, mime and puppetry, which will be held on two stages and among the visitors. Also returning to the Faire will be the student organized Troupe of Spontaneity with its comical renaissance improvisations, and the rousing Society for Creative Anachronism, which will present re-enactments of renaissance jousting. Visitors to the Faire can have their fortunes told, faces painted and experience other renaissance activities including the popular dunk booth. Student organizations will have booths selling food from around the world, but for a good taste of this century there will be "ye olde In 'N' Out burgers" sponsored by the Graduate committee. If you wish to purchase a keepsake of the Faire there will be 40 artisans and craftsmen selling renaissance articles and Renaissance Faire T-shirts.

The new location has created some new logistical hurdles that the committee has had to work hard to overcome. Due to the smaller size of the Warren Quad, last year's exhibition by the Archery Club and the Petting Zoo will not be able to be accommodated. One operations committee member added, "For the past eight years the Faire has been held on the lawn of the Humanities Library, and every year we have been able to simply build upon the previous year's Faire. It's tough to try to squeeze a growing Faire into the Warren Quad. But the committee has put in lots of extra time and effort to do the job right." Yolanda agrees, and feels that the Faire will be better than ever because a major drawback of the old location is solved at the Warren Quad. "It was always hard to give the Faire definable boundaries, to give it a coherent look. The new area is enclosed, making it easier to develop the renaissance atmosphere."

RCC Solicits Student Suggestions

During the ninth week of Winter Quarter, the Revelle College Council located itself on the Plaza to solicit suggestions regarding Revelle College and UCSD. Students received a free cupcake for submitting a suggestion. The event proved itself successful and worthwhile; Not only were students able to voice opinions on improvements, but RCC members were there to answer questions regarding the Revelle Government system and A.S. representatives were also able to answer campus-wide questions and concerns. One of the main goals of the event was to promote Revelle Government and the spring appointment process which appoints sixty students to various Revelle and campus-wide committees. The suggestions received were later examined in RCC meetings and councilmembers are currently going through each one in an effort to better Revelle. If you missed the opportunity last quarter, you may attend any of the open meetings of the council this quarter, held Thursdays at noon in the Revelle Provost Office Conference Room.

Events to Showcase University this Sunday

By Aimee Nielsen

It's that time of year again, when UCSD holds its annual Open House and opens its doors to the community to show everyone what we're all about. On April 30th, Open House 1989: Look at Us Now has a lot to celebrate, foremost being the opening of the new Price Center. The Price Center will be the highlight of the day, and visitors will be able to tour the building and see a film in the new theater. Also, the many booths of all the UCSD Organizations set up for Open House will be located at the Price Center. Speeches by some of UCSD's faculty will be held at the Price Center as well.

While the main focus of the Open House will be the Price Center, many of the Colleges will be sponsoring events that should not be overlooked. Foremost, of course, is Revelle's own Renaissance Faire. But each of the other colleges is also taking this opportunity to tell the world just what they are about.

Muir College is presenting its first annual "Wild World," held in the tradition of their namesake, naturalist, conservationist, and writer John Muir. There will be a presentation by the San Diego Zoo, the Scottish Dance Company, and free cake for everyone at the celebration of John Muir's birthday. Also many UCSD organizations will be represented at Muir's presentation. And don't miss "Wild World" activities which include bracelet making, candle making, and miniature Stuart Collection Croquet.

The fifth annual Third College Cultural Celebration will be held at a new location this year, between the new Price Center and Third's La Casa. It promises to be an exciting event featuring many different types of cultural attractions. There will be Eritrean Dancers, Mexican Folk Dancing, and Taiko Drummers. There will also be an exhibit in La Casa of photographs by Life Magazine photographer Bradley Smith, and many artifacts from different cultures will be on display. Visitors will also be able to try cultural foods from many different lands.

Fifth College is getting into the spirit of Open House with its first annual Festival of Languages, featuring crafts and food from around the world. Students will greet visitors in native costumes, and story tellers will be on hand to tell favorite tales from their native lands. All of the excitement will be held at the International Center.

Of course, many other organizations will be holding events, so be sure to leave enough time for them all. This year's Open House promises to be one of the busiest and best ever for UCSD.

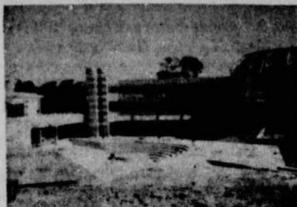

Price Center, Pub Produce Protests

By Kevin T. Kelly

The closing of the Triton Pub and the opening of the Price Center and Round Table Pizza have created the majority of controversy on campus this year. The culmination was last week, when demonstrations argued both against the closing of the Pub and against the building of a "shopping mall" at the expense of academic concerns. Editorials in The Guardian complain that the one academic feature of the Price Center, the movie theater-turned-lecture hall, should not be located next to a beer-serving establishment.

Each of these arguments is largely unfounded. What is "lost" in the closing of the Pub is nothing that the students cannot re-create with the new Round Table. What made the Triton Pub a fun place was not the building, or the food, or the stage. It was the students who visited it, who made it a party place on Friday Afternoons, a place to sit and relax, to enjoy a drink with friends at the end of a busy week. All of this will occur in the new Round Table Pub, once the current patrons convince the whiners of its benefits.

As for the construction of what The Koala terms "Maynard's Mall," the Price Center contributes a much-needed feeling of vitality to the otherwise cold, concrete wasteland of the Muir and Warren campuses. Obviously, there is no pleasing some people. The Price Center is alive, a warm and inviting haven put in the center of the academic reservedness of the rest of campus. The Price Center needed to be built, and the allocation of money by Chancellor Atkinson (under the provision that the theater be used as a much-needed lecture hall during the day) was a significant financial contribution to its construction. Academic needs are thus filled directly in this way, and indirectly via the wealth of services offered to students.

The location of the new Pub, close to the Price Center Auditorium and to Central Library, will not have the disastrous effect that some predict. Noise from bands on the Pub's patio will not be heard in the well-soundproofed library. If the roar of F-14 jets cannot be heard, no band will be able to distract any dedicated students. As for serving alcohol adjacent to a lecture hall, proximity does not create problems. No connection or association exists to damage the image of UCSD or its students. We are all able to differentiate between our academic and social lives, and the two need not overlap into conflict.

The Price Center is a meeting place for the entire university, a place where students can sit and eat with their professors in a comfortable and relaxed atmosphere. I spend much of my time there, and my only regret concerning the Price Center is that I will be graduating in June and must therefore enjoy it as much as possible for the next two months. Fortunately, there is much to enjoy.

As we all know, the end of a relationship is not one of the most pleasant experiences of our lives. Relationships end in many ways; people grow apart, one cheats on another, or any number of other things that makes the relationship deteriorate. But probably the most difficult break-up is when there is a foreseeable end.

A foreseeable end is where the couple knows of an impending end, either due to one's physical relocation, graduation, or the twice-annual separation on either side of summer vacation. It then becomes the decision of the couple as to what to do with the relationship. Lets look at a number of scenarios and the particular problems they create.

Education Abroad / Taking a Year Off From School

The difficult decision to be made depends largely on the stage in which the relationship currently is. A longer, more developed relationship may be harder to suddenly end than one which is still in its beginning stages. Also, it depends on how strong the feelings between the couple are. If the length of time of the separation is known and defined, as in the case of a semester or academic year abroad, both the time apart and the reunion can be factored into the decision. Is the relationship strong enough to survive a year's temptations on both sides? Are you both willing to remain faithful during the separation, or is one of you in favor of an "open relationship," with the agreement to try it again once reunited? Or is it better to end the relationship now? All of these questions need to be asked, and the best way to survive this decision is to keep open the lines of communication and be honest with your feelings. Only this way will you mutually arrive at a satisfactory answer. Whatever the answer, some ground rules may be needed in the beginning of the separation in order to protect the interests at hand. It cannot be stressed too much that what is most important is to communicate your true feelings and arrive at a mutually satisfactory arrangement, especially if there is the intent to resume a relationship at a later time.

Graduation is Coming; What Now?

Graduation is difficult because it represents a more permanent end, unless the next stage in education or career is locally maintained. If the person is relocating to Graduate schools back east or the job market of Silicon Valley, it is not likely that you will be seeing much of each other, except on rare occasions. Again, you must mutually decide on what would be right for the two of you.

Faculty-Student Interactive Programs

Top 10 reasons why the New Round Table Pub is better than the Old Triton Pub --Editor

1. Better Pizza, at reasonable prices
2. Cheaper beer, good variety
3. Design creates variety of separate eating areas
4. It's clean and new
5. Food workers at old Pub were wierd
6. Food line does not block entry into restaurant
7. Bar stools and tall tables
8. Efficient use of glass creates bright, airy, cheerful atmosphere
9. Faster service
10. I've paid $200 ($25 per quarter) for the University Center, so I'm certainly going to use the heck out of it until I graduate in June!

Relationships The Forseeable End

Is the relationship desirable enough to have it shape one or both of your future plans? Should you try an open relationship to test your true feelings toward one another? Or do you wait until the end comes, either to end abruptly and unceremoniously or attempt to remain together across the miles? Long distance relationships have their problems, too. Resentment grows if it is felt that one person alone is making the effort to keep communication and the relationship alive. Two contradictory cliches immediately come to mind: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" and "While the cat's away, the mice will play." Some long distance relationships work well, others decay in just one week. The key to success is the constant communication before and during the separation.

Summertime: Before and After

In this case, it is not uncommon for the couple to be able to arrange visits, either during the summer for the classroom romances, or during Christmas or Spring Breaks for the summer romances. This is perhaps the easiest, most painless ways of testing out your own general feelings about commitment and relationships. The time frames are usually shorter than three months, and additional visits are often possible. You can learn a lot about yourself in examining how you deal with separation in a relationship, that may help you as you enter and leave other relationships throughout your life. Many relationships successfully weather the separation of summer, provided the couple thoroughly examines and discussed their feelings.

Pitfalls to Be Wary Of

One person's feelings can change as the other's remain completely the same. No relationship will last if one person is completely committed, heart and soul, while the other wants to spread the wings of freedom. Once their is no longer a mutual goal and the mutual decision is supported on only one side, the relationship quickly decays. One response is to hold to the theory of "Don't deny your emotions, feel hurt if you are hurt, but don't hold on to something that isn't there." If the relationship is right, it will work out in the end.

Temptation rightfully strikes fear into the hearts of any relationship. Everyone is tempted at some time in life. If temptation strikes hard, it is a warning to you that your feelings may not be as strong as you thought.

Obviously, the answer to the foreseeable end is not an easy one. Always be true to yourself first. And always communicate! It will help you to avoid the pitfalls and prepare you for a change in your current relationship, wherever it stands.

"We Care": Family Business Moves into Price Center

By Kevin T. Kelly and Michael Kwok
Mike appears courtesy of East/West Horizons.

One of the first and finest features of the new Price Center is the culinary charm of Chung King Loh restaurant. But this is no ordinary Chinese restaurant; Chung King Loh of Solana Beach has won critical acclaim from just about every critic in town. The L.A. Times, The San Diego Union and Tribune, San Diego Magazine and California Magazine have all repeatedly written of the delicacies available. San Diego Magazine even rates it as San Diego's finest Chinese restaurant. Dating back to its opening in 1976, Chung King Loh has basked in this success that no other Chinese Restaurant in San Diego has found. What is it that makes Chung King Loh so special?

To hear co-owner Molly Lee tell the story, it's easy to understand how she earned her nickname, "Auntie Molly." The restaurant grew out of cooking for her extended family and two other families. The group was cooking so much already that the extra step of opening a restaurant seemed easy. And back in 1976, says Molly, "There were not many Chinese restaurants in San Diego, and only one or two good ones. So once we opened, business was just great." Coincident with the success, however, was the realization of just how much effort it takes to maintain the quality necessary for genuine success. The fact that Molly's family is large certainly helped in having a number of dedicated workers for the restaurant. A true family operation from the very beginning, Chung King Loh continues to be run the same as when they were cooking just for the family. "It's a real family-oriented environment," explains Molly. Auntie Molly extends her motherly feelings toward her customers, and so the portions served may not always be of pre-measured amounts. "It depends on how hungry they look; Sometimes experience says 'more' for this person or 'less' for this one. We don't want to see food wasted and thrown away. If you are really hungry, ask for a little more."

This concept of family under which Molly runs Chung King Loh extends to the workers as well. The rules under which the students (many of whom really are family) work are laid down like rules your own mother makes. Unlike some of the other Price Center restaurants who spend up to $14,000 on one-week training courses for new employees, almost all of the training at Chung King Loh is "on-the-job" under Molly's motherly supervision. "you should excuse us while we do this," asks Molly, "but we don't want to waste money [on a training program]."

Molly gives much of the credit for Chung King Loh's place in the Price Center to her daughter, Third College Junior Tina Lee. Molly recalls how it was that she first heard about the Price Center: "We would always receive junk mail from malls looking for restaurants, but I was always afraid to open a new one." When she received a request from UCSD, however, she knew that it would be different. She knew many faculty, staff, and students from the university,

By far the best Chinese food you can have. Auntie Molly sees to it that service with a smile makes you feel at home.

Molly's nephew, Revelle Junior Charles Chiang ("For me, she really is 'Auntie' Molly."); Molly's sister, Miss Kao; Mrs. Sophie Fong; Auntie Molly. Says Molly, "We couldn't do it without the families."

Says Molly, "We use Uncle Fong's old station wagon to bring the food here, but soon you will see a new delivery van with the Chung King Loh logo on its side." No matter how it gets here, you can be certain that the food is always fresh, with no MSG of other artificial ingredients. The current menu features a wide variety of the more popular items off of the Solana Beach restaurant's more extensive menu, and even more offerings are forthcoming.

If you haven't visited Chung King Loh yet, you don't know what you're missing. The food is excellent, the service is personal, and you can be sure that Auntie Molly, Uncle and Mrs. Fong, and the rest of the staff of Chung King Loh have done everything possible to treat you like family.

Co-owner Uncle Fong and staff and staff and patients from the V.A. Hospital as customers in the Solana Beach restaurant. "It was the summer after Tina graduated from high school. I gave her all the information to write the contractual proposal [for the restaurant]." The two of them, mother and daughter, walked into the bidder's conference. "All of the other Chinese restaurants brought secretaries, lawyers, graphic designers... I was discouraged about our chances. But I knew that, even if we did not get it, Tina would still get the experience of writing the proposal and bidding." But the university did choose Chung King Loh. Once again, the family style of doing business at Chung King Loh paid off.

While much of the Price Center is still in construction, Chung King Loh is already in full swing. "We've been ready for a month," says Molly. The restaurant was unable to open as planned on Monday, April 17, through no fault of Chung King Loh. "We had all the food ready, but the Fire Marshall closed the kitchens because the alarm system was not complete." Once that problem was solved, and the restaurant was able to open on Wednesday, the response was

Commuter Update

Interested in being a model? NPB is having a spring fashion show on Friday, May 19th and wants student models to participate! Show off to your friends, be the first to try on the newest summer fashions, and have a lot of fun!! If you are interested, or just want more information, contact Diana at 558-2485 or Julia at 558-8911.

Today (Wed. April 26) we're presenting a band on the plaza--Merv Spiegel and the Penguins! This band is coming all the way from Palo Alto (members attend Stanford University) so please join us on the plaza from 12-1 to welcome them.

Friday, April 28 is the Revelle Renaissance Faire publicity day--find out more about what will be at the Renaissance Faire and catch a sneak preview of costumes and activities.

On Monday, May 1, the UCSD Pep Band will be performing on the plaza--this is a repeat performance... they were so good last time we had to invite them back again. Also, watch for other "surprises" that day. (As always, the event will be from 12-1.)

Friday, May 5, is Cinco de Mayo--there is a full day of events planned, so don't miss the festivities.

See you on the plaza!!

Renaissance Faire: Stop by our booth at the Ren. Faire and get your hair braided in Renaissance style for free. The faire is held in conjunction with Open House this Sunday in the Warren Quad, located behind the Political Science Building.

Commuter Breakfasts: Our 50 cent all-you-can-eat breakfasts this quarter are scheduled for the following Wednesdays, from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m.: 4/26, 5/10, 5/24, and 6/7.

Commuter Study Breaks and Movie Nights: Held on alternate Wednesdays, 5/3 and 5/17. Watch out for posters and Guardian ads for times, places, and the night's menu. Dinners are always a bargain and the movies are the latest hot titles.

All-Campus Commuters vs. Faculty Softball Game and BBQ: This event will take place on Saturday, May 6, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Come play against your most or least favorite faculty and staff from all colleges. Also, enjoy free burgers and drinks. Stop by the Revelle Commuter Lounge for more info and sign-ups.

Let's Tour San Diego: The Revelle Commuter Advisory Board will be sponsoring a day in and around San Diego on Saturday, May 17. We will caravan throughout America's Finest City, from Del Mar to the Mexican Border. Also, we will be stopping by Dean Ernie Mort's house in Del Mar and Assistant Dean Yolanda Garcia's home in Bonita for desserts and chats. It is an excellent chance for residents and commuters alike to see the town as you've never seen it before. We still need a few more commuters to act as tourguides, so stop by the Commuter Lounge to sign up.

Padre Games and Tailgate Parties: Yes folks, we are actually going to see this mighty team that every sportsman is talking about. Our first trip is this Monday, May 1, and the next is on Saturday, May 27 (Cap Night). Come see the games, meet new friends, and enjoy the party. Tickets are cheap, food is free, and rides are shared. Sign up in the Commuter Lounge ASAP.

If you would like to attend a meeting of the Commuter Advisory Board and let us hear your comments and suggestions, they are held every Monday at noon in the Commuter Lounge Intern Office. Or, call the Commuter Intern, Armin Afsahi, at 534-2519 or 534-3492.
