Greenpeace

GREENPEACE is a global campaigning organisation that acts to change attitudes and behaviour, to protect and conserve the environment and to promote peace. Greenpeace exists because this fragile earth deserves a voice. It needs solutions. It needs change. It needs actions, not empty words. Greenpeace has a presence in more than 40 countries and a long and proud history in the Pacific that stretches back to the 1970s.

Greenpeace's core values

Non-violent direct action: Greenpeace takes non-violent direct action at the point of an environmental crime to expose it and apply pressure for change. The principle of peaceful action is core to our roots. We strongly believe that violence in any form is morally wrong and accomplishes nothing.

Independence: Greenpeace is supported by individuals. By not accepting funding from any government, political party or corporation, we maintain our independence. Our political and economic independence allow us to take risks, confront others and speak our mind. Power of acting together: Together with people around the world, Greenpeace challenges those with political and economic power to effect positive change. We drive environmentally friendly and socially just solutions and inspire people to take responsibility for the planet. By connecting the millions of people who are willing to act, the power to tackle environmental

Greenpeace's history in the Pacific

Greenpeace's long history in the Pacific began in the early 1970s. Our co-founder, David McTaggart, sailed his yacht to Moruroa in 1972 to protest against nuclear testing in Polynesia. In the 1980s and 1990s, Greenpeace took part in peace flotillas to Moruroa. We also helped relocate the people of Rongelap Island (located within the Republic of the Marshall Islands) who were suffering health effects from nuclear fallout. On July 10 1985, Greenpeace's flagship, the Rainbow Warrior, was bombed. It was berthed in New Zealand in preparation for a trip to the French nuclear testing site at Moruroa. Tragically, photographer Fernando Pereira was killed in the bombing. It was later discovered that French government agents, under orders to divert Greenpeace from its campaign, had planted the bombs that sank the Rainbow Warrior and killed Pereira. The French nuclear tests in the Pacific eventually stopped but Greenpeace remained an active member of the Nuclear Free and Independent Pacific movement. We continued to protest against nuclear waste transports through the region. Greenpeace has also campaigned extensively on other issues in the region. In 1994 an office was established in Fiji and today we have offices in Papua New Guinea and the Solomon Islands.

Pacific campaigns today

Oceans: Greenpeace is challenging destructive fishing and campaigning for a global network of marine reserves. In the Pacific, we are working with governments and communities to stop over fishing. We are also promoting the closure of four pockets of international waters to fishing. These pockets lie between the waters of a dozen Pacific Island countries, including Papua New Guinea.

Climate Change: Pacific communities are already feeling the impacts of climate change. These include rising sea levels, increasing temperatures, the salination of ground water and more frequent and intense extreme weather events. Greenpeace is working to make sure world leaders agree to take strong action on climate change when they meet in Copenhagen in December. We will become a platform for Pacific climate activists - to tell their stories and help make their voices heard by regional and international leaders in the lead up to the Copenhagen meeting.

Forests for Climate: In the Solomons and Papua New Guinea, Greenpeace is working with local communities to oppose illegal and destructive logging and develop eco-forestry projects. We are also working to end deforestation to save the climate. Deforestation causes one fifth of global greenhouse pollution.

In Papua New Guinea Greenpeace works with the members of the PNG Eco Forestry Forum (EFF), landowners and civil society organisations to push for protection of forests for climate and to create greater awareness among forest dependent people and forest resource owners.

PNG ECO-Forestry Forum 10th Anniversary - Supplement

Corruption, Civil Society and Good Governance

THANK you Ken, Board Members, Thomas, Efrey and members of the Eco-Forestry Forum for inviting me to speak at your 10th anniversary dinner. It is an honour and a privilege.

I am disappointed that my co-guest speaker, Tos Barnett could not be here. Apart from my missing out on catching up with an old friend, reminiscing about the satisfaction and fun we had working to put in place good systems and structures of government in the early days of Independence, we will all miss the story Tos might have told us tonight. The Forestry Inquiry that he chaired uncovered the first big cases of corruption in PNG.

The Inquiry report documented what Tos described as "widespread malfeasance" - pervasive bribery and corruption; large-scale transfer pricing resulting in the loss of millions of dollars of export income, government revenue and royalties; non-compliance with regulations; extensive violation of landholders' rights; and serious environmental destruction. The industry was, in Barnett's words, "out of control".

Let's for a moment reflect on the pre-Barnett Inquiry era of the 1970s and 80s, and then what followed.

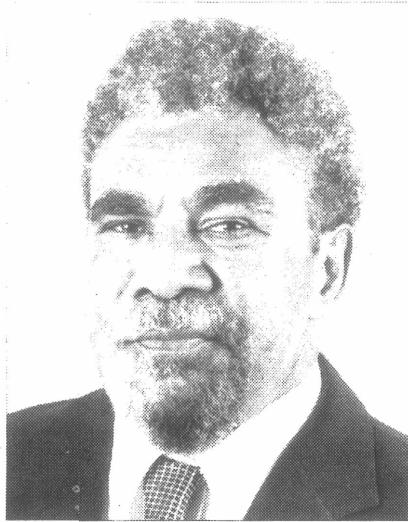

Before the exposures of the Barnett Inquiry, we had seen some questionable land deals, some petty embezzlement, the famous public service Diary affair, and misuse by some ministers of sectoral funds, soon known by all as "slush funds".

But in those days, the total amount in a slush fund was at most one hundred thousand kina, for the whole country. Now, each Member of Parliament is in control of millions of kina every year. In those days, we did not have procurement and payment officers of government departments and companies fixing their own deals on each item procured or paid for. We did not have political parties controlling Supply and Tender Boards. We had proper contractual processes and checks and balances that largely worked, and protected the integrity and transparency of the system.

We did not have trust accounts with billions of kina stashed away, and Ministers roaming the countryside manually writing cheques and dishing them out as if the funds were their private savings. We did not have government agencies like IPBC hoarding and spending revenue that belongs to the state, to the people of Papua New Guinea. We had an Ombudsman Commission that took action; and Police Commissioners and Public Prosecutors who did their work without fear or favour.

The Barnett Forestry Inquiry reported 20 years ago. To me it is a landmark, a dividing point in the history of our country. Because while at the time it had major repercussions, we did not seem to learn from, or implement, its excellent recommendations. It resulted in the dismissal of one MP, and the resignation of the Deputy Prime Minister, which itself led to the dismissal of the Governor General. Some administrative reforms were put in place, but the very clear and detailed evidence set out in the Report was not taken up by prosecuting authorities, nor did the structure of the industry change. Those described by Tos as "robber barons" were soon at work again.

How PNG has changed in the 20 years since the Barnett Report. What was then a total scandal seems monkey compared with what is going on today. Corruption now pervades all sectors of government. In turn it has spread to the private sector; it affects every one of us in our daily lives. A friend, a very big businessman who grew up here and knows the country inside out, recently made the comment to me that it is very difficult to do honest business in PNG these days. And sadly, he is right.

In 1999, when my government came to power, there was so much to do. The country was virtually bankrupt and the kina on the verge of inconvertibility. Decision-making had been high-jacked by people outside Government. My focus of attention had to be on re-establishing an orderly process of decision-making based on process and professional advice, on stabilising the economy and government finances, on reforming the financial sector, and laying the foundation for both sustainable economic growth and for major reform of the public sector. In short, it was a period of reconstruction and rehabilitation for development.

In the three short years I had, there simply was not enough time to undertake all the reform necessary in different sectoral areas. For forestry, all I could do was to impose a moratorium on all new licences, increase taxes on timber exports (especially on logs), extend the SGS monitoring and checking of exports - and appoint the Eco-Forestry Forum to the National Forestry Authority Board. Discussions were advanced with the World Bank to fund a comprehensive review of the structure of the industry, an audit of all existing licences, a review of the fiscal regime for forestry and, most importantly, a stock-take of the remaining forest resource so that a Plan for a sustainable industry could be laid. Interim studies were completed, but not finalised or translated into law.

One of my greatest regrets in not being returned to power in 2002 was that I did not have the opportunity to undertake these more complex reviews and reforms.

Instead, the first thing the Somare Government did was to ingratiate itself to the forestry companies by reducing export tax. The moratorium on new licences was lifted. Section 59 of the Forestry Act, which provided for consultation with landowners on matters relating to timber permits was repealed in 2005, and the Eco-Forestry Forum was removed from the Board to make way for a ministerial appointee. The Somare Government has conducted no audit of existing leases, to determine whether licence holders have fulfilled conditions of licences or not. There has been no analysis of ownership of forestry leases, to determine the real structure and ownership of the industry. No plan for sustainable exploitation has been developed. No action has been taken against lack of compliance with lease conditions, against violation of labour and immigration laws, abuse of human rights, or environmental damage. No monitoring of reforestation is taking place; indeed hardly any reforestation is taking place at all.

What Barnett detailed 20 years ago is not only relevant today - the situation is a hundred times worse. The control of the industry by one company is even more concentrated; the connections between timber companies and those in power have intensified; transfer pricing is still rampant; the majority of timber resource owners do not benefit from the industry; the environmental damage from uncontrolled logging has magnified.

Tos Barnett described the political accomplices of the timber barons 20 years ago as "corrupt, gullible and unthinking politicians". I am not sure that today they could still be described as such. Corrupt yes, but not so gullible, and not so unthinking. Corruption has become, as I predicted in 1994, systemic and systematic. It is deliberate.

Removing export tax on logs is a deliberate act by the Government. Syphoning off timber revenue to Singapore bank accounts is a deliberate act. Corruption in forestry and throughout Government is systemic and systematic.

Every day we see it: politicians walking around with bagfuls of cash; their conspicuous spending on cars, houses, travel, gambling, women and drinking. We have a Prime Minister buying a private jet to spin around the world to sell more carbon credits; a Prime Minister negotiating to buy a satellite from India costing billions of kina; Ministers selling state assets cheaply, like the state's shares in Oil Search; while children are not at school, aid posts are closed, health centres have no medicine, and roads have potholes like craters. It is all before our eyes. Who is taking action?

One shining light in this sad story of neglect and corruption is you, the Eco-Forestry Forum. You have shown through word and deed the importance of civil society in the quest for good governance. You actively engage in policy discussion, on forestry, environmental issues, on emissions reduction, carbon trading and on human rights. You campaign against illegal logging, and campaign for sustainable eco-forestry development. You involve landowners and rural communities in your work. You have taken the Government and companies to court, culminating in the landmark victories over Kamula Doso and East Awin. You have filed a constitutional reference challenging the validity of the Timber Permits Validation Act 2007 - another deliberate act by the Somare Government in support of questionable forestry activities.

You have a major role to play right now to protect forest resource owners from being seduced by the carbon credit cowboys who are carrying around their permits signed by the Prime Minister and his colleagues in the Kitchen Cabinet. What a paradox. On the one hand the Prime Minister, outraged by his American and Italian logs, champions the REDD cause, while allowing uncontrolled exploitation of our forests by timber companies. On the one hand, we champion REDD and wish to trade our carbon credits, but we have no legislation or policy in place. In the face of chaos, we are vulnerable to sharks as well as cowboys.

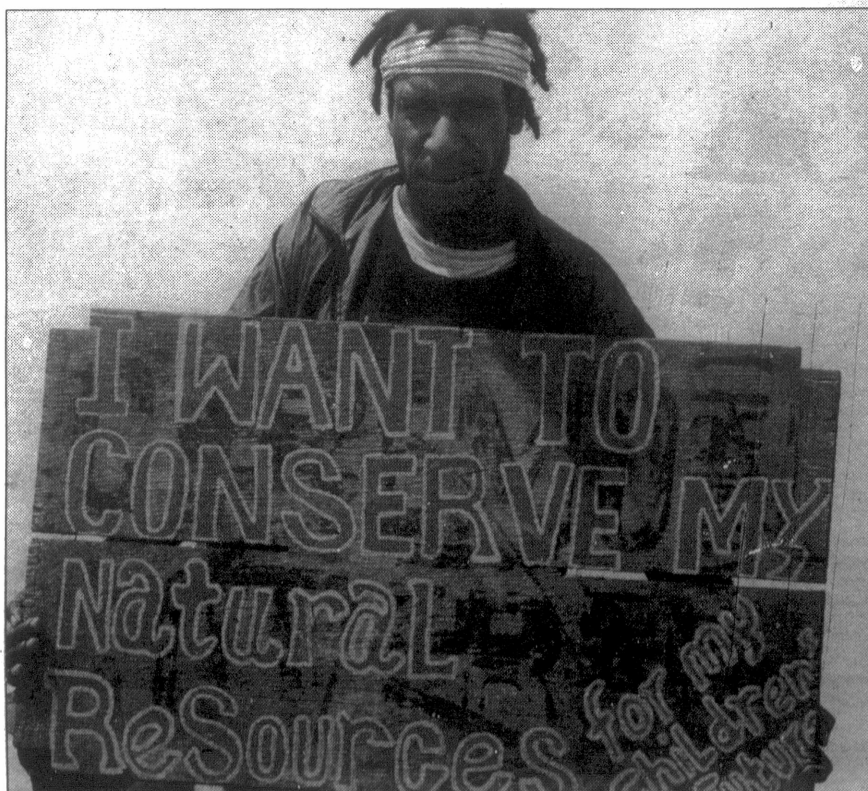

To counter this and other misdeeds we need many more organisations to join you and speak out, engage in debate, draw out alternatives and options, protest about what we know to be wrong, and demand appropriate action by Government. Business people, workers, church representatives, media representatives, academics, students, professionals, community leaders all need to stop taking a passive role and play their part as responsible citizens. It is only when the people hold a government accountable, that it will be accountable.

Accountability requires commitment from the top, the leaders, and pressure from the people. NGOs, working together, drawing strength from each other, can make a difference for the silent majority to be heard.

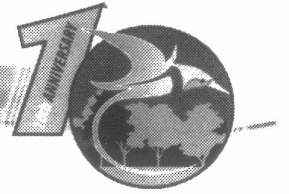

I congratulate you on all that the Eco-Forestry Forum has achieved in its first ten years, and encourage you to keep up your fight. I assure you of my support.

Thank you.

Foundation for People and Community Development (FPCD)

History

FPCD Ecoforestry has been working with the forest resource owners in Madang Province since 1997 when they approached FPCD to assist, manage and develop their forest resources.

FPCD assisted the local resource owners to form their own association the Madang Forest Resource Owners Association (MFROA). In 2001 this association was registered under the Investment Promotion Authority with the membership capacity of over 120 members.

In building the capacity of the resource owners, FPCD has assisted them to export their timbers to buyers in New Zealand under the Eco-timber label which requires timber to be from forest managed under the international FSC standard.

ICF is currently working with four MFROA members Uya, Aronis, Malas and Jobtor to get their forest certified. These four areas are located in the Districts of Madang Province.

Services Provided

ICF provides a whole range of training and capacity building of forest resource owners wanting to develop their forest resources themselves. Upon joining the group schedule, the following services are offered:

- Forest land and resources surveys,
- Write up of forest management and timber harvesting plans,
- stock replenishment,
- Business management skills training,
- Small sawmills operations and maintenance training,
- Good governance trainings,
- Basic First Aid and Safety Training,
- Establish markets for forest products.

Membership

Membership is open primarily to customary forest resource owners or indigenous groups in PNG who want to develop their forest resources themselves based on proper use of portable sawmills and want it certified by PNG Forest Stewardship Council (FSC). Any interested person or group deciding to join the ICF can contact, FPCD Ecoforestry Program Coordinator, who is the group manager and ask for a copy of the summary document and an application and membership form.

Forms will be filled and returned to the contact person and if the applicant meets the basic requirements of the group then a pre-entry meeting process will be initiated.

Applicants who are successful will be contacted through the FPCD Project officer and a pre-entry inspection will be carried out.

Group requirements

ICF certification scheme has guidelines on the type of forest management that it requires. They are outlined in the FPCD's Community Forestry Operation guidelines:

1. Plan your Forest
2. Land use demarcation and mapping
3. Be skilled and learned in sustainable forest development

What is Indigenous Community Forestry?

The Indigenous Community Forestry (ICF) System is a group certification system managed by the Foundation for People and Community Development of the ICF Scheme. It works with the forest resource owners in Madang Province of Papua New Guinea known as the Madang Forest Resource Owners Association (MFROA).

What is a group Certification scheme?

A group certification scheme brings together forest resource owners under a single group manager to be more convenient for smaller forest enterprises.

Key Functions of the Group Certification Scheme is:

- Provides members with information, training and support to ensure that the required level of management for certification is being maintained
- Group manager takes the responsibility for monitoring group members compliance with the standard of the certification
- Group manager applies for and holds the certificate on behalf of the group for application and assessment.

Achievement and Challenges

The biggest achievement for the organization is attaining the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) certificate which means the organization is recognized internationally. That is the biggest milestone of achievement. Under this certificate FPCD has assisted resource owner groups to register as groups. Under this FSC certificate resource owners were able to export FSC certified timber internationally and locally. At the moment through this process the resources owners own five sawmills in Madang and one in Lake Murray and complying to FSC criteria are cutting and selling timber and the organization hope to assist the resources owners to get another five more by end of this year or early next year.

In June to August 2008 resources from Banga owners with the assistance from FPCD were able to export 18 cubic metres of Kwila hardwood (K46,000), FPCD hopes to make another export shipment end of this year.

The benefit of timber having the logo of FSC is that it increases the value of the timber because it compensates for the resource owner to follow the FSC criteria which basically is for the forest to be under a form of Sustainable Forest Management (SFM) or promoting SFM. FSC labeled timbers are sell 20-30 percent more than the normal prices. Currently

The biggest challenge is organizational capacity to support the vast number of resource owners to are interest and want to participate in FSC. The organization has and is receiving request from many resources owners all over the country. The resources owners have recognized conservation at the same time FSC maximizes the resources owners benefits from their resources. FPCD only facilitates the whole process but otherwise it is straight from the forest to the buyer and the people are receiving the benefits. The only money paid to FPCD is the loan repayment which is as assistance from the organization to purchase sawmills.

PNG Eco-forestry Forum and all its members work towards doing away with large scale commercial logging, FPCD believes that one way to achieve that is through FSC. Since 2007 FPCD has assisted in 3 exports but prior to that since 1998 FPCD has done numerous exports under the Eco-timber label. The main buyer is Woodage Australia.

(K36,000) and early this year two land owners from Brahman and Raicoast in Madang exported 20 cubic metres

The Nature Conservancy

COMMUNITY Forest Conservation in the Madang Province, Papua New Guinea – An Insight Into The Nature Conservancy's Adelberts Forest Project.

The Adelbert mountain range is located in Madang Province on the northern coast of Papua New Guinea. It spans an area of approximately 400,000 hectares and ranges in altitude from sea level along the coast to 1600 metres above sea level further inland.

The Adelberts Range includes some of PNG's most biologically rich forests, but the area now faces a range of threats from unsustainable commercial timber harvesting, forest clearance for agriculture, forest fires, and shifting cultivation including establishments of hamlets in no orderly fashion resulting in forest degradation.

Since 1997, The Nature Conservancy has facilitated a conservation development and agreement process working with both government and communities to protect the biodiversity of the area. Local communities have clearly identified the need to improve their lives and achieve a higher standard of living while sustainably managing their natural resources.

Conservation Agreements and Land -Use Planning through a 11-step process

The Nature Conservancy pioneered conservation agreements and community land use planning, new tools to allow local landowners to legally protect and manage their land. Many clans have already signed and formulated land-use plans, solutions that satisfy their strong cultural ties to the tropical forests that surround them. The Nature Conservancy applied these new approaches in the Adelbert mountains of Madang province, where there has been a significant pressure to log virtually pristine forests. Nestled in the lower montane forests, the Adelbert Mountains provide a habitat for the country's rarest bird species, the endemic firemaned bowerbird. The Nature Conservancy first started working in the Adelberts area in 1997 when they aided local communities in annulling a large scale logging scheme and have since built on this strong partnership to help communities take steps to legally protect their forests. The project uses a 11-step community engagement process which guides the communities to the development of the Land Use management plans. The process is a participatory process which empowers villagers to decide on various sustainable land use options of which conservation is part of this total land use and management plan.

Legal protection for the Adelbert forests

In 2002, The Nature Conservancy engaged environmental lawyer and Dean of the UPNG Law school Dr Eric Kwa to work with the communities to develop a legislation that would allow communities to enter into legal agreements to conserve their forests. This legislation was enacted in 2003 and it stipulates functions of the Almami local level government through a conservation advisory committee to work with the forest resource owners to develop land use and management plans and sign conservation agreements to ensure their forest resource is sustainably managed and rich biodiversity is protected. The conservation agreements enforce traditional ownership rights and allow communities to designate biologically rich land for conservation management and protection. The legislation – the first of its kind at that time in the country was approved by the Almami Local Level Government became the first LLG in the country to have a law in place. Since then nine communities have already signed agreements while another eleven communities are in various stages of the conservation development and agreement process.

To support the conservation agreements, The Nature Conservancy worked closely with local communities and the government to:

Help our partner communities establish new conservation areas and develop detailed natural resource management plans,

Raised community awareness of the dangers of short –term, "get rich quick" development schemes such as logging deals,

Integrated community conservation plans in come a powerful tool that will revolutionize environment protection in Papua New Guinea and other Pacific island nations where land is owned by local people.

Key strategies to take conservation to scale in the Adelberts forest project

Project staffs continue to work strategically with government and others partners to ensure lasting conservation takes place in the Adelberts forest project.

At the national level the project has a sound relationship with the PNG National Forest Authority (PNGNFA) the Department of Environment and Conservation and the National Planning Office. All three government agencies are represented on the project's steering committee commonly referred to as the Adelbert Multi Technical Team.

At the provincial level the project staff are who have developed land use and management plans and at the same time market will recognize the product as having a conservation story that is differs from any other conservation cocoa. It is envisioned that if this conservation market linkage is established, promoted and encourage and supported by buyers, conservation in PNG could succeed.

In addition, the fair trade market will also ensure that producers of fair-trade cocoa are complying to their land use and management plans in order for them to access market premium for their products. The premium funds will support livelihood projects, while actual price for the cocoa will go directly to the growers.

to local government development plans. Strengthen partnerships with other organizations to help provide services such as health, education and compatible development to communities

Develop sustained funding for conservation agreements ; and,

Monitor the project's success and share lessons learned with others working in the region.

The project is now working to expand its innovative approach beyond the Adelberts to additional communities in others parts of the Madang province and throughout Papua New Guinea. The Nature Conservancy believes that developing land use and management plans and conservation agreements at local level integrated in to government five year sustainable development plans have the potential to be-currently working with the Madang provincial government to ensure the passing of a Provincial Forest Protection Bill. This Bill will empower provinces to better engage in forest conservation efforts and will allow them to take advantage of opportunities created by REDD (Reduced Emissions from Deforestation and Degradation) initiative.

The project will also continue to work strategically with landowners to find environmentally sustainable income generating solutions such as Forest Stewardship, Eco-Forestry group certification, Green Trade Cocoa & Vanilla, Eco-tourism Conservation Trail and REDD pilot projects and fees for access by researchers.

Project staff are currently working to link the communities to fair trade market through a co-operative. This conservation product linkage will empower the conservation communities ment Organizations working in the Madang province. With assistance and facilitation by The Nature Conservancy, this forum which was facing challenges of networking with other NGOs has been able to move forward with renewed strength and energy.

Between 2005 - 2008, a number of workshops and meetings have been held to share lessons learned, and challenges faced by the different partner organizations in their programs and projects. The Adelbert Partnerships Coordinator facilitator in these workshops has been very instrumental in getting the forum up and running. Today the forum has a representative who sits on the Madang Provincial Assembly. This has been seen as a great achievement for NGOs, as Civil Society groups now have a voice in the decisions of the Provincial Government.
