

Perfect World By Madalyn Rogers

No race, age, or gender, no currency, and no government,
No prejudice, no classifications, no wage-gap, and no corruption,
No divisions, no poverty, no mirrors, no pressures.

Because those words are just

Intangible vocabulary;
Remnants of an archaic world plagued by disabling stigmas
In history books, read in a harmonious and equal classroom.

There is no war, or thoughts of violence

Each governs their own, and loves all around them
No one lies, or cheats, or steals, because there is no need
They live together, as one, with the earth.

But it was not always this way

Trial and error was the world before
Where tiring efforts were made to accommodate
All of the complexities that is a human being.

Little did they know then

Equality does not start with buildings
Or laws being passed. No.
It begins in our minds

The most powerful tool we have.
