

I find that people care, in every way they could
Since they came from different places
And respect all those from elsewhere, in much the way they should.

And if we have some racists, as any campus would Then we say they're wrong to their faces
I find that people care, in every way they could.

And with our many cultured class, as most would say is good
We can find more that care from all creeds and races
And respect all those from elsewhere, in much the way they should.

When some did seek to down us, I know that many stood
Against the ones who brought such hate, in far too many cases
I find that people care, in every way they could.

Even with our differences, we can united in brotherhood
When all must learn from their different bases
And respect all those from elsewhere, in much the way they should.

It may still be called a win, if the racists never take off their hood
Whilst the majority of us can laugh and count their graces
I find that people care, in every way they could
And respect all those from elsewhere, in much the way they should.
