Soviet Scientist Talks on History, Future of Soviet Union in Space

By CATHERINE DILLE
Staff Writer

Soviet Scientist Konstatin Gringauz spoke to UCSD students and faculty about the history and future of the Soviet space program last Thursday.

Chief of the Soviet Laboratory of Planetary and Interplanetary Plasma Studies at the Space Research Institute, USSR Academy of Science, Gringauz has been involved with the Soviet space program since the early days of Sputnik I. He was the recipient of the Lenin Prize in 1961 and last year he received the Cospar Award, for scientific achievement.

Gringauz began his presentation of "The Soviet Space Program: Past, Present and Future" with a brief history of the space program in the USSR.

Gringauz said 1903 marked the real beginning of the space program when Konstantin Tsiolkovsky developed an early plan for a rocket spacecraft. For political reasons it wasn't until the late '30s that Tsiolkovsky's plans were realized when Sergei Korolyov developed the prototype that led to the launching of Sputnik I.

"In the years after [World War II], our country was very poor. It was not easy to find money ... but it was necessary to have a defense weapon, and so this poor country began to build rockets," Gringauz said, speaking on the political circumstances which lead to the development of the rocket.

As the head of a radio communication laboratory in the 1950s, Gringauz developed a theory concerning the frequency from which to broadcast the Sputnik's signal. He was called upon to make the final connections on the transmitter of that satellite as it waited on the launchpad. This gave Gringauz the distinction of being the last person to touch Sputnik I before it was launched in 1957.

"You can imagine our feelings when, according to schedule, we heard the 'beep beep' of Sputnik's signal," he said.

"Everywhere we went, we heard about the enormous success of Sputnik. It was the golden youth of our space program."

Sputnik was followed by a succession of Soviet space-flight successes including the Lunik program, which landed a spacecraft on the moon; Venera 60, the first deep interplanetary probe; and Vostok, the first manned space-flight.

Gringauz outlined the future of the Soviet space program, including several launches planned for the early 1990s. The Interball program, planned for 1990, will combine the efforts of 12 countries, including France, Austria and Canada.

Gringauz also spoke of a spacecraft intended to study Mars, to be launched in 1994. It is hoped that this mission will provide information which could lead to a possible manned flight to Mars around 2015, Gringauz said.

He spoke briefly about the Phobos space missions, the first of which was lost due to an error in command, and the second, launched in July, 1988, now considered lost because its signal is no longer being received.

The Phobos mission was not a complete failure, according to UCSD Professor of Electronic and Computer Engineering Asoka Mendis. "[Gringauz] showed us a lot of data from the Phobos. It was not a failure from the point of view of science. We learned a lot about space plasma, more than we ever knew before."

Mendis, Gringauz's faculty host at UCSD, says Gringauz's visit is due to a "longstanding collaboration" between Mendis, Gringauz and several other Soviet scientists involved in Cometer Physics.

Gringauz hosted Mendis in the USSR when Hally's Comet passed over the Soviet Union.

Shortly before departing from the Soviet Union, Gringauz published a critical article concerning the Soviet space program. Gringauz said that "the main [space program] funding is going to manned flights. They are very popular, but they have limited scientific purposes. It is the same in your country."

Gringauz is scheduled to return to the Soviet Union later this spring.

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★ SPECIAL ELECTION COVERAGE ★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★

The Guardian has interviewed virtually all the candidates for next year's A.S. offices; some candidates, however, declined to be interviewed. Excerpts from the candidate interviews can be found below (for president) and on pages 3-31 for other offices. The candidate interviews are presented in the order they appear on the ballot.

Also in today's paper are Guardian endorsements of specific candidates and referenda (page 4). The A.S. Bulletin (pages 16-20) is a paid advertisement in which photos and short unedited candidates' statements appear. Polls will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday, and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Thursday.

J. ANTHONY WALDICHUK President

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position for which you are now running?

Waldichuk: I attend as many TGs as possible and I try to live in the Pub so that qualifies me as a connoisseur of fine beers as well as gives me the ability to be able to buy as many cheap kegs and mix them in with as many expensive kegs as possible, to kind of get an optimality ... so that everyone's utility is raised.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what problems do you anticipate arising next year?

W: No doubt the beer Nazis and everyone who wants to

ROY "TURTLE" HOBBS President

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position for which you are now running?

Hobbs: I've been a house advisor at Muir and in that role I'm always working with students and so I believe I can see what the residents, and students in general, are interested in doing. And through the resident deans, we get policies and get informed about what is going on with the college, like campus buildings and long-term things. So, I've been pretty well informed through that.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what problems do you anticipate arising next year?

JOHN ROBISON President

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position for which you are now running?

Robison: I was Muir freshman senator and Muir sophomore senator. I am now the current vice president of administration which means I chair all of the meetings. I see and interact with all the legislation that goes through.

I also have a pretty good knowledge of the resident system. I was on campus for a year. I participated in the [house advisor] selection and the Muir Judicial Board.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what problems do you anticipate arising next year?

JOHN RAMIREZ President

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of president.

Ramirez: I have broad-based experience and I think that is crucial in the job of presidency because of the fact that you are representing a broad-based constituency. I am currently A.S. junior senator from Muir College, I sit on the Finance Committee for the A.S., this past summer I was an orientation leader for my college, I was a peer counselor for Summer Bridge, and last year I was a research assistant for SAAC (Student Affirmative Action Committee).

G: What would you identify as two major problems that have faced UCSD this year

PAUL ZIMMER President

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of A.S. president?

Zimmer: I haven't been too involved with campus activities, in terms of political activities. [I have been involved in] more extracurricular activities, like music, sports, sort of independent stuff like that. I can't really boast a whole lot of previous experiences in the political field. I was in (I hate to admit it) student council in high school. That's about it.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what problems do you anticipate arising next year?

Z: I hate to jump on the bandwagon, but it does seem have been taken away and along with that, there being absolutely no fun at this school — completely dead as far as social life goes — the only thing we have going for this school is fraternities.

For those people who don't want to join, well there should be another outlet such as TGs, which we have right now. As far as problems in the future, if I get elected I can see everyone trying to impeach me as quickly as possible, but I'd hang out and serve my term and try to get things done.

G: What would you try to get done?

W: Try to allocate the entire A.S. budget for beer ... also be active in trying to annex Baja California so we can open up a new UC campus down in Cabo San Lucas.

G: How are you going to achieve these goals?

W: Civil disobedience, loud-mouth obnoxiousness, anarchy if need be.

G: Are you expecting to be elected and actually do the job?

W: To be honest, last year I ran completely as a joke, but after seeing the results I received better than 10 percent of the vote.

I figured, I inspired 10 percent of apathetic people to actually show up and vote. I feel I represent the majority of students on campus. I feel I represent them — the silent majority drunks on campus I guess you could call them.

J. Anthony Waldichuk is a Warren College senior majoring in economics.

Hobbs

H: One of the most important problems is really the growth of the campus and that's really a multi-faceted issue, because you really have to think when you're electing candidates what direction you want the campus to go in. I think it's important that the small college feeling is maintained as we grow. I think if it's not, people will become numbers and not people anymore.

G: How do you plan to combat the potential impersonality of the campus?

H: The whole basis for my campaign lies in keeping in close contact with the students. One way to do that is office hours which I intend to have, but one step further is really going out and soliciting student opinion.

G: How will you lead campus development to maintain a "small college feeling?"

H: Continuing to add colleges as the University grows academically is important. ... They need to build more classrooms to accommodate more people and they need to keep small classes as well.

G: How do you balance increased classroom construction with maintaining the environment?

H: It's a matter of the kind of building you are doing and where you are doing it. They have been building a lot of hard-core research facilities which is great in that it attracts the top people. But, when a university takes a trend toward such hard-core academics, it needs to keep in mind that the reason it is here is for education and for the students. It is not here purely as a research institution.

So, we need to balance the amount of research facilities we are building with the amount of classroom facilities. [We need to] make better use of current areas like parking. We are spreading all of the flat parking lots all over. I'm personally in favor of parking structures. I realize we are looking at a little more cost, but eventually I think in overall campus development, eventually it's going to get [to the point where] we are going to need them. So why not start looking at them now before we destroy what we already have?

G: Some of the other candidates running for the position have had actual A.S. experience. You haven't. How are you a better candidate or what qualities do you have that make up for your lack of Council experience?

H: I see myself as a better candidate for not being involved. When you're in the system you start to think the way the system thinks. I believe you start to settle for the status quo. I think that is dangerous.

You need to have new ideas and you need to have the drive to get things done. As an outsider, I have those fresh ideas and the drive to get that done.

G: What are some specific issues A.S. President Maynard Dimmesdale has failed to address this year that will be on your agenda for next year?

H: I guess I differ with Dimmesdale more on an ideological level than on a specific level. That's why I keep going back to the issue of students.

Hobbs is a Muir College junior double majoring in political science and history.

Robison

R: Something that I've heard about more and more as a real problem is the underrepresented students. I think that is a key problem ... What I'd like to see is TGs that are culturally aware, not just booking a bunch of reggae bands like was done this year, but actually coinciding things with MEChA celebrations, with Asian Awareness Week and things like that ...

Another problem is the student rights thing. [A.S. Student Advocate] Bard-Alan [Finlan] has done a lot of work as far as just making people aware of what is going on. I hear a lot, being in the office, about the administration not following any of their own regulations and their not planning on following them until they are called on it ... it is going to take a legal counselor or lawyer to prepare the legal documentation to call them on it.

G: How do you plan to improve or solve these problems?

R: [As for] underrepresentation, by financially supporting programming and trips like the [Asian Pacific Student Union] conference that is happening this week.

As far as student rights go, it means setting aside a portion of the budget for a lawyer or taking a chunk out for some kind of legal counsel. If that's what it takes, then that's what it takes. I know the A.S. has been shot down for trying to do that before by the administration, but I think it's a chance we have to take.

G: Are you willing to go to local, state, and federal government officials to help put pressure on the administration?

R: The vice president-external and UCSA lobby — I feel their position is to handle the legislative aspect of it. I feel my position is to handle the publicity aspect of it, in coordination with the public relations commissioner. I feel that the local newspapers and TV stations are much more effective.

Once things become high profile, things get changed. The Guardian has even helped that in certain instances.

G: What is your stand on the amphitheater referendum question?

R: Personally, I think if the students can afford it, it's a good idea. I think they'll more than get their money back. The only problem is that students this year and next may not see it.

G: Is it a good idea for students to accept the administration's ultimatum that if we want an amphitheater, we alone have to pay for it?

R: Well, [the administration] doesn't want it. I feel very confident in saying that if we put it to the administration, it will never happen ... They were very, very reluctant even to help out with the intramural facility, which, to me, is their total responsibility.

G: Are you saying that if the administration takes a firm stand on an issue, there is no way students can alter that position?

R: The amphitheater is a fairly exceptional case, because if you think about the attitude of this University and the research orientation, "what do we want an amphitheater for" is their attitude. There are a lot of other things that are much more flexible.

G: What do you think of the Price Center?

R: It's the administration's wet dream. It's the biggest, it's the best, it's far more than we could ever need. It's far less student-oriented and far more administration-oriented. We didn't get our money's worth.

G: Do you think the A.S. dropped the ball in making sure students got what they wanted?

R: I think the funds are there. As president, my responsibility is to go to the chancellor and vice chancellor and make them change their priorities.

G: What is your stand on the amphitheater referendum question?

R: If it passes we will have the money to say we want an amphitheater on campus. It gives the Council the opportunity to go up to the Regents and bypass the administration if they don't want it ... then the students will be creating the future of UCSD.

G: Is it the sole responsibility of students to fund an amphitheater?

R: Students should be able to create the future of their community. I think the chancellor and the administration should listen to what we have to say. The first step is going to the administration and hope they are going to take it ... but it sounds like they are not for it. If we want to get it implemented, we can't give it to the administration because they will drag it on. I do feel that students have been taking the burden financially and they haven't been listened to because we are not a strong student voice.

Mandeville Gallery Features Six Artists in Seventh Annual Show

Six artists will exhibit recent multi-media works in UCSD's Mandeville Gallery, from April 15 through May 14, in a show entitled "Annual VII: Wall-mounted Works."

The artists taking part in "Annual VII" are: William Beckley, Madeleine Carolan, Michael Cuddington, Susan Leopold, Lori Precious and Chris Wilder. Four of the artists will attend the public reception, to be held from 6 to 8 p.m. on April 14 at the gallery.

The Mandeville Gallery is open from Tuesday through Sunday, from noon to 5 p.m.

UCSD Health Fair 'Bite into Health' on Revelle Plaza Wednesday

A UCSD Health and Fitness Fair will take place April 12 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The fair, to be held on the Revelle Plaza, will focus on the theme "Bite into Health," and health fitness regarding many areas of the body will be stressed. Various tests will be available to students, including body composition, stress checks, blood pressure checks and nutrition assessment. Information about sports injury prevention and preventative eating habits will also be available.

Demonstrations of karate, aerobics, kung fu and juggling will take place as examples of fun ways to exercise.

Various campus organizations, including the ASUCSD, are sponsoring the event. For more information, call 534-2419.

R: We need to have a safer campus. We need more lighting when you go from one college to another.

The call boxes are not being used effectively. Not too many people know, besides the student leaders, that you can pick it up and call a CSO. It's really simple to fix ... and they will be used more effectively. Expansion of the shuttle system — they are not going to a lot of the parking lots. They plan to expand the shuttle systems in the future, but we need to [expand] it now. I think the money is there and we have to push it. In order to get these student rights, you have to have a strong students voice.

G: How do you propose to fund additional campus lighting?

G: What is your stand on the amphitheater referendum question?

VICE PRESIDENT administrative

ALEX WONG
Vice President Administrative

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past, and how have these activities qualified you for the position (campus activities)?

Wong: I think, most importantly, I've spent a year as Third College Senior Senator. I think one of the most important things for VP administration, since you're running Council meetings, is having experience in A.S. Council.

I've been on Third College Council for a number of years; I've been involved with SAAC [Student Affirmative Action Committee] ...

I've been active at UCSA, the UC student association — I've spent two times lobbying for student rights at the California state legislature.

Very importantly, I was a finalist for Student Regent, and I think that reflects, to some degree, my knowledge and understanding of issues pertaining to UCSD and the UC system, my leadership and administrative abilities.

I've also been on the Media Board; I was founder and editor of the UCSD Triton Yearbook.

I've also been on the registrawrong?" and "How can we help you?" That thing is a good idea. Do you know if there is an A.S. suggestion box? That would be a good idea. And advertising. I'm all in favor of TGs.

G: What is your stand on the amphitheater referendum question?

Z: I'm a little undecided on [that question]. I haven't weighed the pros and cons and I haven't really seen the pros and cons pointed out to me. But, it's a lot of extra money to be paying. On the other hand it makes a lot of sense because it would be a nice thing to have.

G: What are some specific issues you feel A.S. President Maynard Dimmesdale has failed to address this year that will be on your agenda next year?

Z: To be truthful, I missed the first quarter. I don't know that he's been getting along all that well with the A.S. ... that could lead to a bit of friction.

G: How would you work more closely with the Council to avoid friction?

Z: You try harder.

G: In what ways?

Z: Well, how would you do it?

G: I'm not running for the position.

Z: Well, you just talk to them more and make sure there is more understanding between your goals and theirs.

Zimmer is a Revelle College senior majoring in physics.

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past, and how have these activities qualified you for the position (campus activities)?

Wong: I think, most importantly, I've spent a year as Third College Senior Senator. I think one of the most important things for VP administration, since you're running Council meetings, is having experience in A.S. Council.

I've been on Third College Council for a number of years; I've been involved with SAAC [Student Affirmative Action Committee] ...

I've been active at UCSA, the UC student association — I've spent two times lobbying for student rights at the California state legislature.

Very importantly, I was a finalist for Student Regent, and I think that reflects, to some degree, my knowledge and understanding of issues pertaining to UCSD and the UC system, my leadership and administrative abilities.

I've also been on the Media Board; I was founder and editor of the UCSD Triton Yearbook.

I've also been on the registration fees committee, which determines, basically, how your registration fees are used.

G: What would you identify as the two major problems which faced UCSD (and specifically the A.S.) this year, what problems do you anticipate arising next year, and how do you plan to solve those problems?

W: Let me start off with one issue ... that I don't think a lot of students are familiar with, and that's La Casa. There is a dire need ... for space for students, for programming, for all kinds of events; and here was a facility that was designed to meet the needs of students, that had been paid for by student fees, and that was being taken away without any student input. I have worked on a committee to save La Casa, and I believe we have now done that.

[Also] something which will continue to affect students ... is the proposed referenda for a new rec facility complex. That is, in some ways, reflective of a growing problem on all the UC campuses, which is campus-based fees.

Future issues include commuter students — the A.S. is supposed to represent all student from UCSD, and unfortunately a lot of commuter students aren't being catered to; needs aren't being met.

G: What would you do to get quality people appointed to all of the various campus committee vacancies which the vice president — administrative is responsible for filling?

W: I think step one in getting a diverse group of people who are also qualified is to do a lot of recruitment, is to put a lot more emphasis on getting the word out on what the jobs are, to get it out in plenty of time in advance, to get job descriptions out; and to make sure that these things go to the college councils, to the student organization boxes and to various groups on campus.

At Third College ... a lot of times you have 30 people apply for one position. Twenty-nine of those people don't get a position, [so] there are 29 people there who want to get involved ... those are people that you need to tap into ...

G: How do you feel about how Council meetings have been run in the past, and what, if anything, would you do differently?

W: The problems I've seen in the past are ... just a lot of political bickering and infighting, which is unfortunately sort of traditional with Council ... as opposed to really remembering what they're there for, which is to represent the students and to vote in the students' interests on an issue.

How I'd like to see that different, to begin with, I would like to spend a lot of time outside of Council meetings just getting Council together, getting people to work together ... so we can hopefully cut out some of the infighting that goes on.

Secondly, I'd like to run it very, very professionally, in the [same] sense that the "real" Congress is run; to let the meeting progress, but to really clamp down on people who are speaking out-of-line. [Wong is a senior, majoring in political science at Third College.]

CURTIS BOWDEN Vice President Administrative

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these activities qualified you for the position (specifically campus activities)?

Bowden: I was the programmer for the A.S. film series, and had a lot of access to the A.S. offices. Also, I have been the co-chairman of the La Jolla Marathon relay race for two years now ...

I'm in the fraternity system; I was president of my fraternity a year ago, for one year; and also the president of the Interfraternity Council ...

In the course of those two jobs, especially, I have honed the practical, mechanical, administrative skills that I think are absolutely vital and essential to this particular job ... I can deal with all the different personalities that need to be catered to; solicit compromise and cooperation ... not alienate people ...

G: What would you identify as two major problems which have faced UCSD (specifically the AS) this year, and what problems do you anticipate arising next year?

B: An issue I don't feel has been addressed ... is the issue of student fees. I'd like to see the administration funding more of the cost for student-related buildings. For example, for a proposed IM rec facility or a proposed amphitheater, it's ridiculous to ask students to spend money on a quarterly basis for a specific building, when indeed the administration has access to outside sources of funding ...

I think that an embarrassment is the level of underrepresentation at this school; I think that the high fees are one contributor to that ... I'm talking about the failure of the administration, and in some sense the A.S. to make affirmative action work at UCSD.

G: How do you plan to improve or solve these problems?

B: I would like to see the A.S. Council go out into the student population more — it's such a closed system. The appointments [to campus-wide committees] are mostly coming from a few student organizations, the college councils, and people already on the A.S.

I think that the greatest untapped resource on this campus is the student organizations.

G: What would you do to get quality people appointed to all of the various campus committee vacancies which the vice president — administrative is responsible for filling?

B: My solution is going out to the student organizations. Everything that is being done now is fine; but it's not enough. All of the student organizations have mailboxes ... and leaders with phone numbers. There's no problem with calling up, and saying "when are your

ASUCSD Office Endorsements

The Associated Students can make a real difference in improving students' lives. An active, organized A.S. is possible, just not easy to achieve.

Fortunately, while this year's crop of candidates is most striking in its mediocrity, there are a few good candidates, and there is hope.

President

John Robison is an experienced, capable candidate. Unlike current President Maynard Dimmesdale, Robison is an insider. He knows the A.S., and will be able to transform his ideas into action. He was a Muir senator for two years, and performed ably as vice president administrative. He wants to work on the problems of underrepresented minority groups, and will work to protect student rights. His firm grasp of the issues, and his ability to articulate his goals, make him the clear choice.

Robison understands that the administration's first priority is not students. His ability to unify the A.S. and force the administration to serve student needs will be crucial next year. We strongly endorse his candidacy.

Vice President Administrative

Alex Wong also has important experience in the A.S. As vice president administrative he would chair the weekly meetings and manage the agenda. A thorough understanding of A.S. rules is necessary, as well as an ability to calmly deal with conflict. Wong has these skills.

Vice President External

Mishka Migacz has the lobbying experience to tap the resources outside of UCSD. She has effectively lobbied state senators before, and her experience at Mira Costa College as the vice president of policy and procedure could be useful. She was the only one of the candidates for this position to offer solid ideas and options for bypassing the administration by going directly to local and state government. The VP external has an opportunity to change UCSD's low position in the UC pecking order, and Migacz possesses the ability to tackle this difficult change.

Vice President Finance

We found it impossible to make an endorsement here. None of these candidates have the experience and skills necessary for this complex and powerful position. They spoke in generalities, and demonstrated that they didn't have a thorough understanding of the issues. Luis Ramirez seemed to have the best grasp of the position, but appears to not understand its inherent power. An endorsement means that we feel a candidate will do well in a position, and not be merely adequate. None of these candidates inspire that confidence.

Academic Affairs Commissioner

Aline C. Zirino is the sort of over-achiever that thrives in the A.S. Her list of past activities and accomplishments fills up a considerable amount of space in her interview, so there's no point in repeating them here. She was described by the editor who interviewed her as a "powerhouse." We're confident that someone with even a fraction of her energy would do an excellent job in this post, so we endorse her wholeheartedly.

Communications

This is a tricky position. The New Indicator has a lawsuit pending against the A.S., and conflict with other alternative media are almost inevitable. (Incidentally, the Guardian is not funded by the A.S. — we are self-sufficient — so we don't have a conflict of interest in picking this post.)

Michael Holmes, who is running unopposed in this race, seems capable, but he lacks a clear vision of what constitutes censorship. He makes vague references to cutting off funding to a publication if students oppose it, without clearly defining how he'll measure student opinion. We cannot endorse him.

Public Relations

Benny Singer has the energy and ideas this post demands. He'll be effective in attacking the perennial problem of student apathy. Moreover, he has the skills to reach out to the surrounding communities, which largely view UCSD as a nuisance.

His opponents simply don't measure up. Allyson Gold has more experience, but we have doubts about her judgement (see the commentary elsewhere on this page). Lisa Collins is motivated, but lacks experience and a real understanding of the scope of the position. Benny Singer is the best candidate.

Programming

We aren't endorsing a candidate for this office, but we feel a little nervous about this. Matthew T. Schnurer doesn't really have the experience or knowledge necessary for this job, but his opponent is so bad that we almost went ahead and endorsed Schnurer anyway. His opponent, Jim Valladao, is running as a joke. He's funny (in an unoriginal sort of way), but the thought of him actually winning is frightening since this post has such a direct effect on the quality of student life on campus. His apathy and goofiness, which may inspire a grin as a candidate, would bring only frustration and stagnation if he actually won. A vote for a joke candidate, ultimately, would be a joke on us.

Operations, Services and Enterprises

Jim Edwards was the best candidate. Not just in this position, but out of all the candidates for the posts. It's a pity he didn't aim his sights higher, but it is another example of his competence that he decided to pick a more limited position than president, one where he could really have an effect and do the job right. His grasp of a wide variety of issues — especially the way he understands all sides, and isn't dogmatic — makes him the clear choice for this office.

University Center Board

Jason Carbone isn't an Evan Weisenfeld clone. He's sympathetic to co-ops, aware of the complex issues the board will face, and his experience as the Muir representative to the board this year will serve him well. His opponent seems content with the status quo, while Carbone is willing to tackle the conflicts which face the board as the Price Center finally nears completion.

Poor Judgement Harms Campaign

Being a candidate isn't easy, and candidates have to search for any edge they can. Unfortunately, this presents a strong temptation to find loopholes that are, while legal, beyond the bounds of ethical conduct. The information uncovered by the Guardian suggests that Allyson Gold, a candidate for public relations commissioner, and her running mate Matt Lehrer, a candidate for academic affairs commissioner, succumbed to this temptation.

The ASUCSD election bylaws allow single candidates to spend up to $125 on their campaigns. If two can-

ASUCSD Senate Endorsements

The specific endorsements appear elsewhere on this page. Being a senator isn't really much fun on the surface. They all share one office, don't have many resources available to them, and have limited powers. But this only makes it imperative to find able senators; an ambitious, devoted senator can overcome the limitations of the post. But it isn't easy, and it requires real political skill.

The main thing we looked at in selecting a candidate for senator was a firm grasp of issues — specifics, not general goals such as "we need to get rid of student apathy." Some senators were almost comical in their answers to our questions, such as Nic Speiss's offhand comment that "parking sucks." Even some of those who weren't running unopposed offered superficial answers that made us suspect they were merely looking to pad their resumes.

There were a few standouts, however. David Wesley Bonds, who is running for Third College Senior Senator, has an understanding of the turbulent history of Third College, and will communicate well with his constituents. Jeffrey Shear, despite running unopposed for Warren junior senator, went to the trouble of getting out and talking to students. Micki Winsett, a candidate for Muir College sophomore senator, stressed a grass roots, personal approach and didn't just bring up the same old issues. Many of the other candidates we endorse demonstrated the ambition to overcome the limitations of the office and tackle some tough problems.

Referenda Question Endorsements

The nine referenda on the 1989 ASUCSD election ballot are indicative of the increasing number of important issues facing UCSD as its growth continues to accelerate.

Student Advocate

This is an advisory vote on changing the student advocate post from an appointed to an elected position. The need for this change is demonstrated by the poor performance of some of the student advocates appointed by A.S. presidents in the past. This change will make the advocate more responsive to students. We support a YES vote.

TGs

TGs are a great idea. They're fun, and provide one of the few organized, student body-wide social activities. But there is no reason why free beer is necessary. It costs a great deal of money ($14,000 this year), and the 21-year-old drinking age excludes a large portion of fee-paying students from obtaining beer they helped pay for. The money used to provide free beer could be spent on improved bands or used to expand underfunded services like A.S. Lecture Notes. Vote NO.

Chancellor's Vote of Confidence

Sure, it doesn't mean much. Atkinson isn't going to resign in disgrace if he loses this. Nevertheless, a "no" vote sends a signal that students are not happy with his priorities. Atkinson has shown that he is an effective administrator. But he's also shown that undergraduates aren't very high on his list of concerns. On issues ranging from the amphitheater to parking to the Price Center, he has demonstrated his lack of responsiveness to undergraduate student concerns. Vote NO.

Constitutional Amendment

Changing the constitution to allow three campus activity fee or constitutional amendment referenda to be placed on the ballot per year (instead of one per quarter) is a minor change, but one which increases flexibility. It's clear the current constitution isn't adjusting well to UCSD's rapid growth, and this amendment offers a solution much less drastic (and risky) than calling a constitutional convention. Vote YES.

Amphitheater/Events Center Fee

We strongly believe that UCSD should have an amphitheater. But this poorly written referendum isn't the answer. It contains no guarantee that an amphitheater will ever be built, and there is a very real chance that students will pay $20 per quarter forever and never see a large programming venue materialize. Moreover, this sends a dangerous message to the University. By voting for the referendum, students will be telling the administration that they are willing to solely fund facilities and programs that the University should have the responsibility to pay for.

The University had planned to construct an amphitheater, but several years ago it was quietly dropped from the campus' Master Plan. Several years ago, the private company that built the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles offered to construct a smaller facility at UCSD free of charge. The administration rejected the offer because they did not want to allow the company to manage the facility. This is a bogus argument. The Regents approved last month a 40-year lease agreement with a private medical firm to build and manage an 80-bed neuropsychiatric hospital on campus. This is evidence of yet another case of administration double talk and inflexibility. Unfortunately, this referendum will do nothing to change the administration's ways. Organize a sit-in at the chancellor's office or a letter-writing campaign to the Regents and your state assembly representatives, but vote NO on this referendum.

Nighttime Parking	NO
Committee for Lawyer	YES
Student Cooperative Center	YES

Constitutional Convention

As we said before, the constitution needs work. But this is a dangerous approach to repairing it. It isn't likely to produce a much better constitution, and has a large downside risk of producing a very bad one. The amendment allowing a greater number of referenda makes the convention unnecessary. Vote NO.

Nighttime Parking

This referendum is probably doomed; it is difficult to find anyone who likes the idea of requiring permits for nighttime parking. The additional costs of enforcement, as well as the impact on campus events and safety of students who would have to park off-campus and walk through the dark far outweigh the small increase in revenues. It's just a bad idea, and we endorse a vote of NO.

Committee for Lawyer

Hiring a lawyer may not be great idea. But forming a committee to study options is. Students feel intimidated by the power of the University in legal conflicts, and making it easier to obtain lawyer is important. It may be possible for the A.S. to make a deal with a lawyer or firm to be available for such conflicts, and the options should be explored thoroughly. Vote YES.

Student Cooperative Center

This is a tremendously ambitious referendum, and the University has already indicated that it will ignore the outcome of this vote. Not everything in the referendum is a good idea — some of the specifics are poorly structured — but the spirit of the referendum is what's important. The co-ops are an important part of this University, and the administration has been at war with them for years. This referendum sends a strong signal that students support the cooperatives' attempt to ensure self-determination, and that we don't wish to see them debilitated by Price Center commercialism. The actual outcome of this conflict will probably be something less than what this referendum demands, but if it loses, we run the risk of allowing the co-ops to disappear as a progressive student force on this campus. That would be tragic for both the patrons and the members of the student cooperatives. Vote YES.

meetings? May I come to them and speak about an issue that directly affects [me]?"

One day of giving out cupcakes isn't enough [with Joe Watson and Maynard Dimmesdale].
G: How do you feel about how Council meetings have been run in the past, and what, if anything, would you do differently?
B: I would like to see, at the outset of every A.S. term, a retreat, right off the bat. You have diverse interests on the A.S. Council, different constituencies, different personal agendas. The meetings don't just happen... half the success or efficiency of the meeting comes from what happens outside the meeting, ahead of time; in the committees, in the appointments, in communicating with each other.

VICE PRESIDENT external

MISHKA MIGACZ
Vice President External

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of vice president external? Specifically, what campus activities?

Migacz: First of all, I am a transfer student from Mira Costa College. In my freshman year, I founded a law society. That was actually my invitation into A.S. I learned about A.S. by being a founder of this law society. In my sophomore year at Mira Costa College, I ran for the position of VP of policy and procedures. I won that election. I learned quite a bit from that. That experience has...taught me how to lobby. Actually, I passed two bills through [Mira Costa's] congress...and I've been very much in the political arena.

Presently, I'm a chief justice on the Muir Judicial Review Board. I enjoy this position simply because I believe in order. I believe that all students must work together and work in harmony...and I feel that my position allows me to work with students and to achieve that goal.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which have faced UCSD this year and what problems do you foresee arising next year?

M: I think the big problem that a lot of students are aware of is the parking issue. Also, fees are going up and a lot of students can't afford that. Some people believe that it has to be done. I think there are other ways.

G: And what will you do to help remedy those problems?

M: There are plenty of budgets on this campus. There is plenty of money and I think everybody needs to start contributing more, financially, out of other budgets. I don't think it should be left on the burden of the students.

I think we need to start with the Regents. They hold the money. They pull the strings. I think that we need to start making them aware of what they're doing. I think we need to let them know that it's hurting us. I think we need to get people like Ron Packard and Senator [Bill] Craven involved. I think that if they see that we're reaching out to other people, they're going to have to be forced to change.

G: And how would you deal with the parking issue?

M: I think we need to start getting some petitions around. You get those petitions together and you send them to your local congressmen. If the administration isn't willing to help us, then we have to go beyond the administration. The way to go beyond is to go to government.

G: In January, the UC Regents voted to increase student fees by 10 to 17 percent for the 1989-90 school year. As VP external, will you support or oppose future efforts to increase student fees and what avenues will you pursue to meet your goals?

M: I believe the students need to take a hand on the student fees. There is an organization [the University of California Students Association] that all the UCs belong to and people are advocating that we be able to have control over these fees, if I'm correct. And I believe that's the way to go.

G: What do you feel should be the role of a VP external in interacting with private commercial enterprises effecting UCSD students and how will you pursue that role with regard to Ogdin Environmental Services and their efforts to burn toxic waste in close proximity to the campus?

M: No, I don't want Ogdin to burn and that's an issue on my flyer. I believe that we need to continue [to oppose Ogdin] at the local levels. I advocate that we start with small [California state legislative] bills so that we stop running into these problems.

Migacz is a Muir College junior majoring in history.

CRAIG PETERS
Vice President External

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of VP external? Specifically, what campus activities?

Peters: A program which I helped design and then coordinate and then lead was called Help For the Homeless which was a drive for the Salvation Army to raise money for their homeless shelter. Last Wednesday, we had Party Smart Day which dealt with not only the campus, but was part of a larger effort for the City of San Diego [sponsored] alcohol awareness week. That was my project and, all in all, it was very successful.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what do you see as problems that will be continuing into next year?

P: I think probably the biggest problem that we have right now is that the administration is not responsive to the students' needs and has continually built this campus around their own interests and not the students' interests. The administration needs...to think more carefully about student buildings and the maintenance of those buildings on this campus and who should be funding these.

The administration has the resources...to bring in these outside promoters, big companies that would be more than happy to give us money for these things for putting up their sign somewhere. The administration is so afraid of that outside influence...that they won't do that.

One of the things I'd like to do once in office is I'd like to make it mandatory that the administration pay 50 percent of any building that is student-oriented on this campus.

That leads to a second problem... which would be the incredible underrepresentation we have here of less privileged students on this campus and the ridiculous attrition rates that we have of those students. The thing that we need to do is we need to support and we need to expand the [Student Affirmative Action Committee] outreach program, in my opinion.

G: How are you actually going to get the University to foot a larger portion of the bill for campus buildings?

H: If we make it an A.S. constitutional law that we cannot pay for more than 50 percent of the building... it can't even be brought up on the ballot unless the administration is willing to pay 50 percent.

G: In January, the UC Regents voted to increase student fees by 10 to 17 percent for the 1989-90 school year. As VP external, will you support or oppose future efforts to increase student fees and what avenues will you pursue to meet your goals?

H: For UC San Diego in particular, I have to say I wholeheartedly support the decrease of registration fees overall. If we could somehow increase the system-based fees and significantly decrease the campus-based fees by getting the administration to pay their share, yes, I would be in support of that.

G: What do you feel should be the role of a VP external in interacting with private commercial enterprises effecting UCSD students and how will you pursue that role with regard to Ogdin Environmental Services and their efforts to burn toxic waste close to campus?

P: Obviously, that's the VP external's job so, yes, he must or she must deal with community influences on the campus.

In respect to specific corporations or companies and Ogdin in particular, one of the things I think we should be doing is we should be maintaining checks on all companies in the surrounding San Diego area. I would be in favor and support some sort of bill where we must go in and make checks on these companies that are doing this and make sure that it's being done safely... and maybe do that in cooperation with the San Diego regulators and the federal government regulators.

STEPHANIE DE LA TORRE
Vice President External

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of vice president external?

De La Torre: This past year, I've been A.S. Third College junior senator. The past two years, I've worked out of External Affairs through the University of California Student Association. Also, I've worked with the student advocate. This past year, I was also co-chair of the Chicano/Latino student organization on campus, and I've also been a member of the student affirmative action committee. Right now, I'm the A.S. alternate to the Chancellor's Committee on Affirmative Action.

G: What would you identify as two major problems that have faced UCSD this year and what do you perceive as problems that will persist into next year?

T: The first one, I would say, is the Ogdin waste site. Another one, I guess, would be student safety.

G: And what would you do to help remedy those problems?

T: In terms of the Ogdin waste site, I feel I could inform students on what's going on. Information booths seem to work very good where you have literature out, perhaps by the gym steps or the Revelle Plaza. I'm not really too abreast on the issue, but I think you need to directly address the Ogdin personnel.

G: The other problem you identified was the safety issue. What kinds of proposals would you have to remedy those problems?

T: The shuttle route in the evening has to be more extensive. A lot of students park down behind the medical school and it's really important that there's lighting. I propose perhaps having more shuttles.

G: In January, the UC Regents voted to increase student fees by 10 to 17 percent for the 1989-90 school year. As VP external, will you support or oppose future efforts to increase student fees and what avenues will you pursue to meet your goals?

T: Last year, I went to Sacramento and I lobbied through the municipal lobby with External Affairs in direct opposition to the student fee increase. I would directly oppose this increase due to the fact that we're facing a lot of fees besides this 10 to 17 percent increase and that's campus-based fees.

De La Torre

G: What do you feel should be the role of a VP external in interacting with private commercial enterprises effecting UCSD students and how will you pursue that role with regard to Ogdin Environmental Services and their efforts to burn toxic waste in close proximity to the campus?

T: I feel that my role as VP external is to try to insure and promote student representation on... committees. I don't know exactly the logistics of it, but if the administration does have a committee with Ogdin waste site, perhaps address the fact that student representation is needed.

VICE PRESIDENT finance

VANNESS HARRIS
Vice President Finance

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of VP of finance?
Harris: Well, I really haven't had any direct experience with finance, but I've been the director of a couple of boards. I'm director of Royal Brothers of Excellence and I've worked very closely with my budget coordinator and helped him plan and get activities together and get the budget together. I've also been historian for Afro-American Student Union, and I've worked closely with the budget director. Also, I'm the [Student Affirmative Action Committee] representative of Third [College] which allocates a certain amount of money to student organizations under the affirmative action umbrella. I've also worked with Third Council.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what do you see as problems that will need to be faced next year?
H: Basically... I would say safety. Also, another major problem, I would say, is the Ogdin waste site by Scripps. I [see] a conflict of interests there because the University supports the Ogdin company, but they're burning waste that's going to be hazardous to the students' health.

G: And how will you be in the office of VP finance help accomplish or solve those problems?
H: If I can get more money from the A.S. and the board members, maybe I can use it to work around and promote areas that I see as two major issues. They could buy another shuttle bus and, for the Ogdin waste site, maybe I could help start a campaign where we can get officers together to make some kind of motion, some kind of rally so that the University knows we really mean business about the concerns to our health.

G: As VP finance, what kinds of budgetary actions would you support to get UCSD through next year?
H: I wouldn't support the increase of 10 to 17 percent [in student fees] at all. I'm directly opposed to that because the students' financial aid stays the same. That forces them to take out more loans, it forces them to work more hours and why should we make students pay for the state's deficit? I know the increase in student fees are going for parking which I was directly opposed to.
G: If you're opposed to this increase in student fees and the parking fees, what alternatives would there be to raising student fees to help support the school?
H: I don't know. That's a good question. How will we increase the budget besides this? Really, right now, I don't have ideas exactly how we will do that.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which have faced UCSD this year and what problems do you anticipate for next year?
R: I feel that a smoother-running A.S. is going to be able to accomplish much more for the students than this year because of a lot of internal problems with the A.S. itself. I think if an A.S. comes into its term with goals in mind and hits the ground running, as we've been saying, it's going to be able to accomplish a lot more.

I feel that beneficiaries of affirmative action are lacking support at UCSD. I feel that this is a problem not only at the high school level, but also a problem with the administration and a problem with the A.S. itself. Ways to remedy that situation would be, maybe, give students who come to UCSD under the affirmative action program support once they're here, not abandon them once they're here.

G: What will you do to help remedy those problems?
R: Communication, outreach programs, just making those students aware of what's available to them. That, I think, is going to be more of an administrative issue than, perhaps, one that I'll deal directly with.

ANDERS ROEDE
Vice President Finance

Guardian: What campus activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of VP finance?

Roede: I'm a senior majoring in economics. This past year, I served as Warren College treasurer and duties of that position [included] overseeing the budget of the Warren Student Council. I feel that I've gained the skills needed to execute the responsibilities of VP finance.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which have faced UCSD this year and what problems do you anticipate for next year?
R: As far as funding goes for student organizations, those that have a need for programming and that have good structural organizations in their proposals for programming events in the past will be continued to be allowed to do so.

Funding for smaller groups, for example, can be made more available through, maybe, cooperation in cosponsored events if you have groups with similar interests.
G: The 17 percent 1989-90 student fee increase for out-of-state students means out-of-state fees have risen by 32 percent within two years. Is this an acceptable rate of increase for such fees and what actions will you take in that area?

I think priority should go to students of the state. If students want to come from out of state... I think they have to look at that idea that they... don't have first priority so they should be willing to pay that extra money in order to go to this school of quality learning.

Harris is a Third College junior majoring in biology.

 campus. I think that outside sponsorship may be the way to go there to provide not only a cheap way of getting an amphitheater, but in providing revenue for students.

Roede is a Warren senior majoring in economics.

LUIS RAMIREZ
 Vice President Finance

Guardian: What campus activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of VP finance.

Ramirez: My freshman year, I was on the Revelle College Council and I served on the council for three years. Also, I was sophomore senator. I also served as Revelle Dean's intern. This year, I'm presently A.S. commissioner of operations, services and enterprises. One of the activities I've done is orientation leader.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year and what problems do you foresee for next year?

R: The need for ethnic diversity and, I think, that's going to continue throughout next year. Not only a need for an ethnic studies program at UCSD ... but the need for faculty and staff of other ethnicities.

Another problem, too, is the animosity toward growth. One of the things I want to see is the A.S. grow and expand with the campus. Our campus is growing so much that our [A.S.] Constitution is not fit for it anymore ... [A constitutional convention] is going to be needed in the future — soon.

G: What will you do to help solve these problems?

R: The only thing, as a student, that I can do with ethnic diversity as being directly involved ... is showing our support as an A.S. council to them ... for the idea they're standing behind. Personally, I could contact people, show my individual support with departments and maybe attending departmental meetings or chancellor's meetings.

With the animosity toward the growth of the campus, I think it's going to fix itself with the Price Center ... but you really need to grow. We, as an A.S. have to grow as well, expanding services and expanding the offices that we have.

G: What would be major A.S. budget expenditures that you would support for next year?

R: I think that programming is a big part of ASUCSD not only to direct student programming, but also to support student organizations. I think the student organizations' programming that they do individually with the A.S. support, is even more important than A.S. direct type of events because when the actual student organization puts on an event, that's the actual students themselves doing something that they want to see.

Something I would vocally support and try to push for and try to encourage people to vote for would be something I started this year as services and enterprises commissioner: airport shuttle service.

G: The 17 percent 1989-90 student fee increase for out-of-state students means out-of-state fees have risen by 32 percent within two years. Is this an acceptable increase rate for such fees and what actions will you take in that area?

R: I think no major increase is acceptable for students because, of course, we're on limited budgets

DARIN MALLOY
 Academic Affairs

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for this position (campus activities)?

Malloy: I have served the last two years on two different academic senate committees, which will help me in dealing on CEP to get things done for the students. I've also served on an A.S. advisory committee on T/A development this year, and on several campus-wide organizations and the presidential campaign.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year, and what problems do you anticipate arising next year (specifically, regarding the A.S.)?

M: One major problem, I think, is the infighting going on within the Council.

The A.S. Council controls the resources for representing the students, and when they're doing all this infighting, they're obviously not accomplishing all that they could.

The second major problem that the A.S. faces, and will continue to face next year, is the power that they have. Unlike other UC campuses like UCLA and UC Berkeley, they are not independent of the administration. This seriously affects their power in terms of trying to get things done.

G: How do you plan to improve or solve these problems?

M: First, I think we can work with the faculty, with the administration — we need to make our views clear to them.

Quite honestly, we outnumber them. This is not only the administration or the faculty, this is also the community; the red-curling for example; we are 16,000 votes. If the A.S. Council had organized 50 people to go down to a San Diego City Council meeting to say, "we don't want Torrey Pines red-curbed," it wouldn't have been red-curbed.

 We need to go out and organize the students ... so that they can demand majority representation on the parking advisory committee or so that they can demand elimination of the "W" grade.
G: What should the A.S. Council's attitude be toward the administration (academically, in particular)?
M: We need to pressure the administration to do several very important things. We should be very unsatisfied with them right now; for example, there must be a mandatory ethnic studies graduation requirement. This is something I'm going to work for, and I think the Council should work for.
 We need to pressure them on extending when you can change your grading option.
G: Do you feel that students are adequately represented in academic policymaking, and what, if anything, would you do to change this?
M: We have to have voting rights on the Academic Senate. That is mandatory. The issue is not student rights ... unless we empower ourselves, and get the voting rights, we can be kicked off at any time by the administration.
 It's not an issue of rights, it's an issue of empowerment; and until we empower ourselves, nothing is guaranteed."

(Malloy is a sophomore, majoring in History and Third World studies at Third College.)
ALINE C. ZIRINO
 Academic Affairs
Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position (specifically, campus activities)?
Zirino: My freshman year, I was at Cal-Berkeley; and I started out as ASUC Senator in 1986. I founded a political party up there, which still exists. I worked in the Unitage house ... sort of an international house; I worked for the disabled student program at Berkeley.
 I worked for the YMCA juvenile delinquent program there; I was a youth mentor for kids who had had trouble. I worked in the ASUC as assistant in the ASUC store.
 When I came to UCSD, I got appointed as representative to the Academic Senate — I have that position again. I was on the Committee on the Status of Women at UCSD. I work for Provost Bond, in admissions; I organized the student dance company, for the ballet — I was in the California Ballet. And, I'm the ASUC artist for the Charity Ball for the grand opening of the Price Center.
 I worked at Mesa College, at the TAP Center, in chemistry, organic chemistry, calculus and biology ... I do some politics, but I'm more a behind-the-scenes sort of worker; I'm not used to being out in front of the situation; but I have organized about 10 different groups.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which faced UCSD this year, and what problems do you anticipate arising next year (specifically, regarding the A.S.)?
Z: My idea of a council is a group of people who work actively and constantly on serious issues, like lowering the fees, creating student scholarship sources, fighting the parking [problems] ...
 I see the fees as the most important problem. I come from a very poor high school, and I see a lot of people that are not going to UCSD (and other universities) ... because they can't afford it. We have got to make UCSD affordable ... the little expenses [are important] too, [like] the parking [permits].
 I don't have a permit; I've been going here without a permit, and that's hard to do — I mean, I walk quite a bit. I've had to work up to three jobs just to put myself through school, and I'm pretty bitter about that ... we should be able to have people attend this University no matter what their economic level is.
G: How to plan to improve or solve those problems?
Z: "I think we need to work really closely with the ... external affairs lobby. I think we have to have much more of a public show; if necessary, we need to stage peaceful, tactical protests, to our chancellors.
 I think people will listen ... we can publicize from radio stations, news stations; I think they would live a story like that if we are honest, upright people.
G: What should the A.S. Council's attitude be toward the administration (academically, in particular)?

Z: Being the rep for a couple of years, I've been dealing with just that; and what I try to do is be worthy of respect. I think the approach that has worked so far in dealing with the Academic Senate has been to be polite, nice, low-key, respectful; to speak with them individually when you have questions.
G: Do you feel that students are adequately represented in academic policymaking, and what, if anything, would you do to change this?
Z: No, they are not represented. [For example] I spoke at the Academic Senate meetings over the grade dispute—Alan Finlan was putting through (as part of my job). There were three people ... who probably listened; the rest had made their mind up.
 They do things in spite of us ... they feel they know what is best for us ... I think we need a bolder representation on the Academic Senate ... a lot of them don't see any reason to listen to us, so I think we need a more personal approach.
 I also am the chairman for the African section of the Sun God festival. And the Media Board itself is a qualification because you learn how to work within the system that way.
G: What would you identify as two major problems, either at UCSD, within the A.S., or specifically within the Media Board, that happened this year and that might come about next year?
H: Well, definitely a problem that's facing us right now and will to deal with that mess, and it really is a disaster.

 Another problem is that the Media Board is considered just an advisory committee. It's not really very strong. I've heard a lot of comments like, "Well, we can change them. They're not permanent. We can change them to fit our needs." And that's not the way it should be.
 As it is now, we're just advisory. We're not very strong at all ... This year we tried to make [our charter] a little stronger ... and, of course, next year that will continue; trying to make it stronger.
G: How are you going to budget the funds to make all the alternative media happy, or is that possible?
H: Well, it's never possible to make everyone happy. I feel the last commissioner did quite well in the way that she just tried to see what their needs were and do it that way; looking, of course, at their requests, but also going through background work, looking at what exactly the costs were and trying to go about it that way.
 That seems to be pretty logical to me. [The Media Board] is going to be putting out a survey this quarter to the students having them say which newspapers they prefer. We want to know what's being read, what's being used.
G: Earlier this year, the Koala seemed to have a lot of trouble with being called racist and offending a lot of people. They said their funds were cut, when they really weren't. Do you see such action as ever being possible in the future?
H: No. That's impossible. The board cannot censor [because of content]. The students are putting the fees in. The students are paying for these papers.
 If [the papers are in] the students' interests and for UCSD, that's fine. We can't judge content at all. People have been talking about racism in the Koala and that's going to be an issue brought up, too, next year ... If the students are deciding that they don't face next year is the problem with the New Indicator. They have a lawsuit pending against the A.S.

 It's probably going to come about next year or the year after where some newspapers were thrown away, so they're feeling that their rights have been invaded.
 So, the commissioner next year, or the year after is going to have to deal with that mess, and it really is a disaster.

Israeli Politician Seeks Cultural Integration

By MAUREEN SPURR
Staff Writer

An old conflict, a long-time grudge, years of resentment. We've all had them. But few have had them as long as the Arabs and Israelis.

This is a conflict stemming from as far back as Biblical years, and the struggle for territory and peaceful coexistence has been everything but harmonic. Now 2,000 years worth of wrongs have accumulated and coexistence seems like a far-fetched dream.

One campus organization, The Israeli Action Committee, would like to see better education about the developments in the Middle East, said Darrin Freedburg, Co-Chairperson of the Committee.

Freedburg agrees with recent criticism that the media's coverage of events is slanted or only partly uncovers the situation by showing violent news flashes.

They would like to explore different perspectives, especially those of Palestinians. Along these lines, the Committee invited the Consul General Muhamed Massarwa, an Arab who grew up in Israel, to speak on Thursday.

Massarwa came to UCSD from the Israeli Consulate in Atlanta, Georgia, where he serves as Consul General of Israel for the Southeastern Region of the United States. He said, regarding his appointment, "I'm both an Arab and an Israeli. I have more or less fulfilled my aspirations in the Arab sphere. We, of the younger generation of Israeli Arabs, have been demanding, for some time now, that we be given opportunities for full integration into all aspects of Israel. I see my appointment in the Foreign Service as just such an opportunity."

"Today, more than in the past, there is a vast majority of the population in Israel from different parties, that raised the necessity to solve the Palestinian issue or the Palestinian conflict," Massarwa said.

"I do believe that within Israel, to get the message about the people living [in the territories] now is the main issue for ... the political agenda within Israel, about the issue within the Israeli society.

Every week we have a new survey, every week we have new views-new people ... meeting with Palestinians in the territories," he said.

"In the late seventies, after the ... war in 1973 it was president Sadat [who] realized that there is no way to achieve a victorious war or a military solution. Even if one part ... can, the international community will not allow them to achieve a military solution or a victorious war," he added.

Several members of the audience objected to Massarwa's statements and repeatedly interrupted his lecture. They said that they were Arabs themselves and had been thrown out of Israel. Massarwa announced that he could not go on if members of the audience continued to interrupt him.

Massarwa said his goal was to present an objective update of the situation in the Middle East. Among the issues he mentioned were the proposed autonomy of the occupied territories, negotiation of their boundaries and the hope that the superpowers will help out in an international peace conference.

Massarwa's solution to the problems was to "deal with the conflict without emotion." He said that the two groups must stop worrying about who is recognizing discrimination as far as role playing. "There's a 55-year-old woman who's the head of a war band," said Muir sophomore Alicia Anne Conley, the group's "keys officer."

Titles are awarded for various achievements. "A knight is a high award in arms, and you also have to be good at medieval chess, music, poetry, dancing ... and they have to be chivalrous," Conley said.

Members conjure up their own character or "persona" from historical information. They model their personality, name, clothing, occupation, and background according to real historical culture between 900 and 1600 A.D.

Members can be as creative as they wish as long as they can explain "how they got there," Prewitt said. For example, "We have a Russian fighter fighting with a Celtic warband," she said. One restriction, however, is that SCA characters may not be real historical figures.

"I'm Welsh, so that dictates how my name is spelled," Prewitt said, whose SCA name is Sian Ap Alywinn. "You go to war and you get used to three days of everyone calling you by your SCA name, and you don't answer to your real name," she said.

Conley's SCA character is Aithbric na Dhu-Ard, a Scottish Highlander. "For me, the year is 1315. I picked that because my father, in real life, died last year, and I figured he could have died in the battle of Banicburn ... which was in 1314," she explained.

Once a member has chosen a persona, they are not bound to its characteristics for life. "Maybe [a member's] persona is Scottish, but for that day they want to wear a German outfit, you just say ... you went traveling," Conley said. "Or your father is a merchant, that's a good one," Prewitt added.

armor, as lords and ladies danced and told stories.

It was a tournament for the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA). The society holds such events throughout the world. San Diego hosts tournaments as often as twice each month.

The event at Stonehenge began with Opening Court at the baron's tent at which a "dead" Saint Artimus was presented to the baron. Three contests ensued. The first was to find the saint's murderer. The second was to find the place of the crime, and the third was to find the murder weapon (a quill stained with Saint Artimus's blood).

Contests were also held for the best confession to the murder and the best storyteller to describe the details of the crime.

At night, the group gathered for a "revel," at which they listened to the winning storyteller, danced, and ate dessert.

SCA also holds "wars," which last entire weekends. The organization is divided into kingdoms, principalities, and baronies. Dean Halford is the baron (Baron Talanque) of UCSD's region.

A recent war between the kingdoms of San Diego and Arizona involved 780 fighters and twice as many other SCA participants, according to Third junior Stephanie Prewitt.

Prewitt is the seneschal (president) of UCSD's year-old branch of the SCA, the College of Saint Artimas. The group includes UCSD staff and students as well as people from the surrounding community.

SCA members encompass a wide span of age groups. "There's all kinds of people, and ... families will bring their kids out," Prewitt said.

There also seems to be little ing who, such as the Israelis, who don't want to recognize the PLO's right to exist, and the Palestinians, who don't want to recognize that the state of Israel exists.

The two groups must start talking, Massarwa said, instead of ignoring the other's existence. He explained that there are two ways of solving problems: with the military or with negotiation.

When Massarwa mentioned Israel as a "Jewish state," members of the audience became especially aggravated, arguing that Israel is not a "Jewish state" by virtue of the fact that there are Arabs living there. Another argument against Massarwa's lecture was that he wasn't telling the objective truth because he worked for the Israeli Government.

The argument pursued to the extent that both parties began speaking Arabic. Co-Chairperson Freedburg made an effort to interject and mediate, while members of the audience began to argue among themselves.

Freedburg and Lisa Pinck, the other chairperson of the Israeli Action Committee, encourage students to join their organization or offer opposing viewpoints.

The organization was created about seven years ago. It sponsors speakers, movies and other social events.

persona, but she says that her husband kidnapped her ... the purpose is to have fun," Conley said.

SCA has a formal structure at the administrative level with accountants, a lawyer, rules, and a board of directors (known as the "Bod"). The society will celebrate its 24th anniversary on May 1.

Although SCA is an autonomous international organization, members of SCA may have been seen battling or dancing at Revelle's Renaissance Faire. They contribute to the event as a separate organization. SCA will be back on campus April 30 for UCSD's Open House.

I wanted to get experience writing for a newspaper but felt intimidated because I had never tried it before. The Guardian gave me a chance to ask questions, giving me the confidence to go out and interview for my first story.

COMMISSIONER

BENNY SINGER
Public Relations

Guardian: What activities, specifically on campus, have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for this position?

Singer: I helped develop the Minority Affairs Program for ASIO [Associated Student Internship Office].

I was able to develop a program that was only for minorities, meaning that we went out and looked for specific companies that were looking for minority students and we were able to form a file of maybe 25-30 organizations interested only in minorities. We advertised this special program and there was an increase in minority students coming into the office.

Also, I have been volunteering for the public relations committee in the past. This year I have not been very active with this committee because they were not doing a lot and I felt very frustrated.

I had an internship at the [San Diego] Mayor's office in the department of public relations in the Department of Environment. That was a very big influence on my college life because I was talking to people of the San Diego community; people with different issues than college issues so I was able to expand my views on other problems.

G: What would you identify as two of the major problems which faced UCSD this year and are likely to arise next year?

S: The fact that [this year's Public Relations Committee] is not communicating to the students 100 percent. I feel that there are many activities that we are very vaguely told about in the sense that we have a bulletin page in the Guardian in which all the organizations try to get an ad for an event and you end up with one line per event... and it doesn't tell you anything.

So, I would try to get funding for the organizations to have advertising money where they can put a quarter page ad in... I don't think one page is enough for a school like this. We have so many organizations.

There are a lot of students who come to class and go home... and you can't expect somebody to participate in a school activity when they don't know what activities there are for them to participate in.

And another thing that I also think has not been done is the input from students. We don't have a chance to tell the public relations commissioner what he's doing wrong.

On my platform, I would like to have an input box... where you can express to me what is going wrong. They don't have this box. The only way you can communicate to the commissioner of public relations is if you know who he is, if you go to his office and you make an appointment and you see him.

If you get input, you can provide a better service. I also want to have an information telephone line where you would call in 534-INFO, and it would give you the information for that week's activities.

Also, I was thinking about putting a section in the newspaper where it would inform students of the A.S. Council meetings... what passes and what doesn't... and in that same section, list what issues will be addressed on the next Council meeting, so if you are interested in making sure something passes, you can go to the Council meeting and express your views.

G: Is it the role of the PR commissioner to go out of his or her way to improve relationships between UCSD and La Jolla?

S: Absolutely. Not only with La Jolla, but with downtown San Diego; with Del Mar. I don't think it's a primary goal of the public relations commissioner to make sure that the people in La Jolla know what is going on here.

That wouldn't be on the top of my list, but I definitely think that it is very important that we get the community involved. More importantly that the students are involved, first. That's number one on my list, to let the students know what's going on.

G: Should the public relations commissioner be associated with the University's Public Information Office?

S: Absolutely. Because it's another way of approaching the students. Anything that will get me to a student, I will do it, without breaking the school laws, and if it's under my budget... That's my main concern. The students are not informed.

Singer is a Third College junior majoring in political science.

ALLYSON GOLD
Public Relations

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with, specifically on-campus, that you feel qualify you for this position?

Gold: I've done a lot of things. For the past year, I've been the publicity commissioner at Warren College. So, I've done publicity for all the Warren College Student Council events.

Through that position, I helped out a lot on the Commuter Board; helped publicize their events. I've [also] helped out with the all-campus Commuter Board and publicizing their events.

I'm currently serving on the Public Relations Council for the 1989 Sun God Festival.

I'm also on Media Board... so I'm familiar with all the on-campus media aside from the Guardian, which I think is real helpful because they can be utilized more.

I also worked last summer at a public relations and advertising agency as an intern.

G: How do you intend to take what you've learned about the media and put it to use at UCSD?

Gold: One of the most useful things I learned at the... agency [is that public relations] isn't just sitting in the office and sending out press releases. A large part of the public relations as well as the advertising aspect is getting to know the people.

I intend to stay on the Media Board again next year, because I think it's important to maintain that contact with all the newspapers, and that gives me good access.

[Contacts] will help me be able to enhance the image of the A.S., which is an important part. It'll help me to get more publicity for all the events... and not just your standard ones.

I'd like to increase sports publicity, maybe doing intramural sports championship publicity... and establishing those relationships will maybe help that appear.

G: You've already gone into it but the next question is, could you identify a couple of the major problems that you've seen either at UCSD, within the A.S., or specifically with the public relations committee this year which could arise next year?

Gold: I'll start with the public relations commissioner and the problems I see. Public relations is getting publicity for whoever you're representing.

When it's just called public relations, that's free publicity. That's establishing those relationships and getting articles in and stories placed. It's free.

Then there's advertising. Advertising is something that you pay for.

It's been discussed that [the public relations commissioner] position should be broken down into advertising and public relations.

I don't have a problem with combining both, but I really think the problem is that all that I've seen happen this year and in the past is that the public relations person has only done advertising

Gold

 ...there's more to it than just the advertising.

In terms of advertising... the only events that really get a big push are events that most of the students attend: the TGs, the Reggae Fest, the Jazz Fest... but, there's a lot more.

All students pay fees. We shouldn't just try and advertise events that most of the students attend. We should try to reach out to all the students.

G: Do you think that the public relations commissioner should help to improve the relationship between UCSD and the surrounding communities?

Gold: Absolutely... Like I said, I'm fairly experienced with working with local media, and they're real supporters.

Advertisements in local media — not that you can really advertise, "Hey, we really are nice guys," but advertisements — people don't believe those. There's more truth in news; if it's in an article.

I can work with them and get them to write stories about what's going on. When the Sun God Festival happens, that's going to be a real loud event, but it's a charity event.

And they should know that, and it should be out in the local media so the community could say, "We're going to be up till midnight tonight, but they're giving this money to the Abused Children's Foundation." That's a real philanthropic thing.

Allyson Gold is a junior at Warren College majoring in political science.

LISA COLLINS
Public Relations

Guardian: What activities, specifically on campus, have you been involved with that you think qualify you for this position?

Collins: For the past two years, I've been an RA, and that is extensive programming and along with programming comes advertising, public relations, publicity. I've also been an orientation leader, been on AIDS Awareness Committee; we've made an educational video at Warren College. Also, I have a job off-campus in sales and marketing, which deals specifically with public relations.

G: What would you identify as two major problems, either at UCSD, with the A.S., or with specifically the commissioner of public relations that have happened this year and that you anticipate happening next year?

C: Well, actually I don't anticipate them happening if I can head them off. One problem I see is not enough outreach through publicity or public relations.

I feel that there can be more outreach to diverse groups because there are a lot of leaders out there that aren't being targeted through the public relations, and I feel that that's a problem.

I feel that that can be targeted a little better, there can be more public relations in that sense; going out to those groups and asking them for leaders to join the A.S.

G: Do you feel that your job will have anything to do with the outside communities?

C: Yes. I feel that that's another problem. I feel that a lot of the actions that have been taken against the University, like the red lining of Torrey Pines, people calling up and telling us to shut down Reggae Fest when it's too loud, that stems from our lack of reaching out to the community in the first place.

I think that if we invite [the surrounding communities] in and reach out to them more, there will be less tension between the University and our community.

G: How would you interact with on-campus media?

C: Everyone reads the Guardian. That's an aspect I intend to use. Everyone reads it. You have to get in. You have to do an update, not only on upcoming events, but what is the A.S. doing for students, what is important legislation.

Maybe people want to be at these (A.S.) meetings to see what we're putting through. And that, obviously, can go into the Guardian. That's something we can use that has been budgeted.

I do see an A.S. page, but what are they really telling us?

G: What would you identify as

programming

MATTHEW T. SCHNURER
Programming

Guardian: What past activities have you been involved with that make you qualified specifically for the position of programming commissioner?

Schnurer: I've been with University Events for two years working on their sound crew. I've been at KSDT for about three years in the Publicity and Programming departments.

I've also worked at Assorted Vinyl... I have a clue what people like out there and what type of music is selling.

G: Have you ever actually programmed a big event?

S: I can't say I have, no. I've set up stage, sound and lights and stuff.

G: Do you have any connections with bands in the area?

S: Uh, yeah, I can name some: Phineas Gage, Milestone, the Nephews... and others.

G: What would you identify as

And let's not forget my plan to annex Baja California so we can get the construction of UC Cabo San Lucas underway, as I will be self appointed Chancellor/Party Dude. Being the recipient of the Budman's prestigious "Gold Keg Award," I feel this qualifies me as the best man for the job. Oh yeah - vote for my running mate Jim Valladao (A.S. Commissioner of Programming) 'cause he's a walkin' dude and wants to be swept in on my coattails.

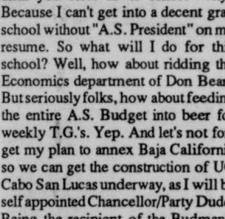

JOHN RAMIREZ
A.S. PRESIDENT
STAND SLATE
How do you feel about the nighttime parking proposal or about the constant increases in students fees? My name is John Ramirez and I'm running to be your President. I want to implement monthly campus forums where YOU can tell us your concerns. This will be followed up with quarterly State of the Campus Addresses where I let you know how we're addressing your concerns. I also want to have a safer campus. More lighting, more use of the call boxes, and expanding the current shuttle system are also of high priority. We need this campus to take a new direction. STUDENTS NEED TO CREATE THE FUTURE OF UCSD. We need to integrate and unify the student body and take vigorous and positive action. I'm running with two other students who, with their ideas, will be helping students make a STAND.

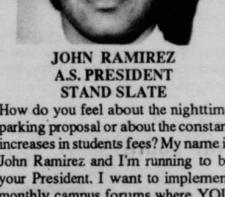

JOHN ROBISON
A.S. PRESIDENT
JOHN ROBISON FOR PREZ
For three years I have actively represented student concerns. This past year I insured that qualified students represented the campus with over thirty appointments to campus-wide committees. I worked closely with the current A.S. President and familiarized myself with the "Administrative Nightmare" facing students demanding action. I plan to use this knowledge to assist student organizations, co-ops, under-represented student groups, and individual students seeking fair and equitable treatment and representation. I will communicate directly with students, informing you of issues before they happen. I am ready to use my experience for you! For Progress, Responsible Leadership, Experience, and Student Rights, vote JOHN ROBISON FOR A.S. PRES!!!

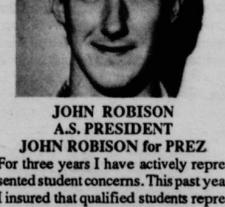

PAUL ZIMMER
A.S. PRESIDENT

ROY "TURTLE" HOBBS
A.S. PRESIDENT
A.S. is the student voice. It is the vehicle for students to direct campus life in the most positive direction for them. In order to achieve this direction, students must elect the candidate who will best represent them. I represent an alternative to the current A.S. status quo. As an outsider I have the freshness and drive to see that student desires are fulfilled. I want to have continual contact with as many students as possible, thus eliminating the alienation from the electorate which so often occurs in campus politics.

V.P. ADMINISTRATIVE
CLEAN SLATE
UCSD's administration needs to be directly confronted with issues affecting students. I will help focus a UNIFIED AS Council towards these issues, address them from Day One, and see to it that the Council addresses ALL Student needs. Currently I serve on the UCSD Search Committee for Student Organization Advisor and Leadership Development Coordinator. I have programmed the A.S. Film Series two year and have been President/Chairperson of two student organizations, including the Interfraternity Council, which governs all UCSD fraternities. I have the practical skills vital for this position, and I will work successfully for you. Vote for a CLEAN SLATE and get results. Thank you.

and have an understanding of the broad number of issues that the committees he/she appoints people to will address. I have this experience.

My personal goals if I am elected are to run AS meetings quickly and efficiently and to reduce or eliminate the political infighting that traditionally occurs within council. I would like to see all students at UCSD represented and will work towards appointing a diverse variety of qualified individuals to the numerous campus committees. Additionally, I would like to form committees to address commuter issues, ethnic studies and the possibility of Division I Athletics. Most importantly, I would like to have the AS fulfill its original purpose - to serve the students. And the people I am running with on the STAND slate believe in a government that stands up for the student and student rights. If you approve of my goals and abilities, please vote for me and TAKE A STAND.

Hi, I'm Mishka Migacz, and I'm running for A.S. V.P. External Affairs. A vote for me is a vote for progress. I aim to bridge the gap between UCSD and the surrounding communities. I intend to promote an Events Arena on campus, and to seek an end to the toxic burning. My experience as an A.S. V.P. of Policies and Procedures at a local junior college and the fact that I founded the Pre-Law Society there, plus my current position of Chief Justice on the Muir Judicial Board qualify me for A.S. V.P. External Affairs. Mishka Migacz Bridges the Gap.

VANNESS HARRIS
V.P. FINANCE

Hello my name is Vanness Harris and I am running for the position of Vice President of Finance. Due to the existing problem of cultural funding, many student organizations are forced to limit activities which promote their growth. A better balanced and distributed budget would provide equal opportunity for organizational advancement. Being so fundamentally involved in many student organizations I can feel the pressure and need to make a change. If chosen as Vice President of Finance, I do not make the idle promise of doing for but the solid promise of working with the student body. The fact remains there is not enough money allocated to the finance committee to satisfy the needs of the organizations. If elected, I will push wholeheartedly for more money. This is the underlying job of the V.P. of Finance. Casting your vote in my favor is a step in the direction of prosperity and organizational peace.

ANDERS ROEDE
V.P. FINANCE
CLEAN SLATE

My name is Anders Roede and I am running for A.S. Vice President Finance. I am a Warren Senior majoring in economics and by having served as treasurer of Warren College Student Council this year, I have gained valuable experience needed to efficiently execute the responsibilities of the V.P. Finance position. In overseeing the A.S. Budget, I will assure funding for campus wide cultural events and will ensure that the student are aware of how their money is being spent.

For an effective and efficient A.S. Council, vote for a CLEAN SLATE and for Anders Roede as Vice President Finance.

LUIS RAMIREZ
V.P. FINANCE

First of all I would like to thank you for taking the time to read the candidate's statements printed in this issue. My name is Luis Ramirez and I'm running for the office of Vice President Finance. I feel that what the A.S. Council needs is continuity. It's important that A.S. Council Members, especially the executive officers, have experience with A.S. government. My personal experience includes three years on the Revelle College Council and two years on the A.S. Council. This year, I'm A.S. Commissioner of Operations, Services and Enterprises. I would like to see services such as the Airport Shuttle Service, which was implemented during my term, continue as a service for students. As Vice President Finance, I will be able to continue my effort with the services as a member of several service governing committees as well as expand my efforts with A.S. financial matters as A.S. V.P. Finance.

DARIN MALLOY
COMMISSIONER

Students, it is time to pick the BEST candidate for commissioner of Academic Affairs. I feel that I am that person. I have volunteered on various Academic Senate and A.S. committees during my two years at UCSD. I worked with Students for Jesse Jackson last year, and earlier this year was a paid staffer for the Dukakis Campaign. I hope you will vote for me and the other members of the BEST slate, since we seek to transform the A.S. government into a body which will truly represent us. For example, if elected I will try to eliminate the "W" grade, and extend the deadline by which students must change their grading option.

COMMISSIONER

My goals as Commissioner of Academic Affairs: To work for Reduced Class Size in undergraduate work. Increase personal attention by faculty, staff, and TAs. Academic Excellence means students learn, are motivated, challenged, interested and have marketable skills as a result of their classes. It does not necessarily mean overflowing lecture halls and harsh grading.

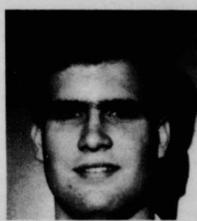

I believe all representative should actively work on issues that severely affect our lives as students: grade disputes, financial aid, scholarships, safety, parking, fee increases, and social activities on the campus. I have experience as a UCSD mediator, representative and publicist, through persistence we can accomplish all of our goals.

GIOVANNI MUZZARELLI

Having taken over 75 classes from 15 different departments in my almost 4 years here at UCSD, including summer session, I have a very good idea how most departments work and have had the opportunity to get to know many of the Faculty. Furthermore, having been an OASIS tutor has given me not only the perspective of seeing what students need in the form of Academic services but also that of how such programs are run from the Administrative Side. I feel that the above qualities demonstrate that I am very well acquainted with the various aspects of the academic process of the school, and along with my energy and enthusiasm I would be an excellent choice to perform the duties required of the Academic Affairs Commissioner.

COMMISSIONER

The Media Board is not just a superficial part of the A.S. as many seem to see it-- the Board can be a lot more. I see the Board as a strong check against media legislation and budget allocation -- not a weak advisory nor a direct part of the A.S. With such problems as a pending lawsuit against the A.S. it is clear that we need a commission that is unafraid to work behind the scenes to prevent and abolish these problems. Ironically, it is communication that is needed -- more talking and cooperation and less power and struggle.

BENNY SINGER
PUBLIC RELATIONS

My main concern is to make sure all students are informed of all the activities happening at and around UCSD. In addition, I will act as a liaison between campus and local media. I plan to have a weekly section in the Guardian informing students of the A.S. Council's decisions. It will also have next meeting's main Agenda items for everyone to know, and to be able to voice their opinion on specific items during the hearings. Also, I plan on an A.S. Suggestion Mail Box where students can express their point of view as they will be printed with a response in the Guardian.

How to get the Most for your UCSD Dollars: Allyson Gold for A.S. Public Relations. You pay nearly half a million dollars every year in student activities fees. You have a right to know how your money is being spent. You should be informed of all student activities before they happen. I currently serve as the Public Relations Counsel for the ASUCSD Sun God Festival and as the Warren College Council Publicity Commissioner. I've worked at a Public Relations/Advertising Agency and coordinated publicity which appeared in both print and broadcast media. GO WITH THE GOLD FOR A.S. PUBLIC RELATIONS!

LISA COLLINS
STAND SLATE

I feel that student outreach is the job of every member of the A.S. but as Public Relations commissioner I will make it my job specifically to reach out to a diversified group of students to become involved in the A.S. I will promote a type of council that will represent all students at UCSD. I feel that my experience as an R.A., Orientation Leader, various committee work as well as a position in Sales and Marketing in an off-campus job gives me not only the sensitivity to be a voting member of the A.S. but also the skills to do my job as Public Relations Commissioner. I am creative and excited for this kind of work. I am also pleased that I have found people who share the same goals I do and will work for these goals. Please take a STAND at election time. Vote Lisa Collins for Public Relations Commissioner.

MATTHEW SCHNURER
COMMISSIONER

I am Matthew Schnurer and I am running for your AS Programming Commissioner. I have worked with the AS Programming Committee on the TG Crew for 3 years, served with the University Events Sound Crew for 2 years, and worked at Assorted Vinyl for 2 years. I have also been the Co-op Rep. for KSDT and a member of the Publicity Department of the radio station for 3 years. I think the campus community will benefit from bands that appeal to a wider audience, and lecturers who can focus on interesting and relevant issues. My experience with live entertainment qualifies me to lead the Programming Committee in its pursuit of a broad range of quality events.

MARK SUSTER
ENTERPRISES

The commissioner of Operations, Services, and Enterprises is responsible for overseeing the budget and daily operations of ASUCSD's Grove Caffe, ASIO, Lecture Notes Service, Assorted Vinyl, Volunteer Connection and KSDT. This is a pivotal point in the operation of these organizations as some will be in transition to the new Price Center. It is vital that the commissioner establishes a good working relationship with the managers of these operations in order to help them expand. This will help provide the students with services such as offering video rentals at Assorted Vinyl. The expansion of these services will require firm A.S. guidance. I am qualified and prepared to help lead these services into their new era. Vote for Mark Suster, Commissioner of Operations, Services & Enterprises.

I'm committed to making UCSD serve our needs as students, taxpayers and future leaders. When I'm elected I'll work to put an end to taxation without representation at UCSD. I'll also work to expand library hours during mid-term season. Make the BEST choice!

GAYATRI GUNASEKARAN
UNIVERSITY CENTER BOARD

Hi! My name is Gayatri Gunasekaran and I'm running for Chair of the University Center Board. In its strictest sense, this position entails presiding over UCB meetings, and serving as a voting member of AS. My experience on the Board this year as Third's representative qualifies me to serve as Chair. This year I also served as Vice Chair of the UCB, and I am Chair of the Grand Opening Committee for the Price Center. Nor am I a stranger to the AS - last year I was Third College's Freshman Senator.

Important as these duties are, the Chair also has the extra responsibility of determining the tenor of the Board. This year, when we begin using the Price Center, and when we renovate the Student Center, will be a pivotal one in the life of the campus. During this time, I want to see the Board maximize its role, and use the full scope of its abilities to ensure that the ideas which are implemented will provide the greatest benefit to the students.

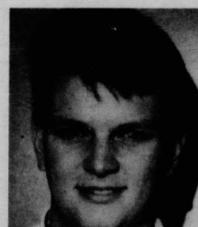

JASON CARBONE
UNIVERSITY CENTER BOARD

Hello and Welcome Back. As we look forward with anticipation to the opening of the University Center and the renovation of the Student Center, you the student are asked to make a choice. What direction would you like student facilities to take? How would you like to see your dollars spent? The University Center Board oversees a budget in excess of 1.25 million dollars a year and students deserve a fair and equal representation where their money is concerned. It is my hope and desire that with the opening of the Price Center we can begin to try new and interesting things, while still maintaining and operating the current Student Center at the level we are accustomed to.

KI SONG
MUIR SENIOR SENATOR

My name starts with K and ends with an I. For all you intellectuals out there, that spells Ki (Key). It's key that I am elected to the position of Muir Senior Senator. Like my name, I hold the Ki that will unlock the rigid stem tradition doors between Muir students and the A.S. student body. Ki Song will listen to you, the miniscule innocuous ants, which crawl about our campus every day. But many ants find strength in numbers, and build sophisticated giant networks - TOGETHER. Right now, I am an ant, but I am an ant with ears, with eyes, and most importantly with a voice. Support this ant, KI SONG, and your voice will be heard. JOSEPH FLOREN
MUIR SENIOR SENATOR

Fellow Muir students, it's time we take control of our education and our school. I am Joe Floren, co-founder and Vice President of the Pre-Law Club, pep band member and former Dukakis worker. As your Senior Senator, I will make sure that things like the Pub closing and nighttime parking are not pushed through without the approval of you, the students. I also will work to protect and expand our co-ops, to eliminate "W" grades, and to push back the deadline for changing grading options. These and other important student issues will only be addressed if you put the BEST candidates in office. I hope you will vote for me and the other members of the BEST slate, and remind the administration that UCSD belongs to its students.

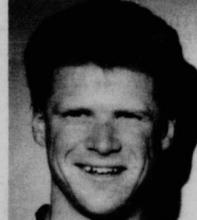

STEVE NETZLEY
MUIR SENIOR SENATOR

My name is Steve Netzley. I've been a Muir student for three years and have noticed several very positive aspects of life at UCSD that are directly tied to having five colleges within one university. The opportunity to meet people through individual college functions here at Muir is a somewhat unique characteristic to the UC System that I would very much like to help strengthen. I am a very self-motivated person with the ability and perseverance to succeed. I hope that I'm given opportunity to impress Muir students as well as the A.S. with action rather than stagnation. I will be a Senator you see and hear from when Sept. rolls around, not just until elections are over.

MARK VAN DIERENDONCK
MUIR SENIOR SENATOR

As a student at UCSD for the past three and a half years I have seen this school go through many changes. Some of these changes have been good, but for the most part, these changes have been bad. Quite simply stated my goals are:
*Bigger TG's to bring the student populace together.
*More support for our intercollegiate athletics.
*To protect the right of students to safely ride their bikes or skateboards across campus.

COLIN "RED" DONAHOE
MUIR SENIOR SENATOR

As a Muir Senior Senator candidate, my goal is to improve communication between Muir College, the A.S., and the students. As a Muir Orientation Leader, freshman orientation volunteer, House Advisor, and Publicity Chairperson for the Muir Residence Council, I am in touch with the concerns of both the commuters and residents at Muir College. Close communication with Muir students will enable me to effectively represent their views in the A.S. and the Muir College Council. Vote for "Red."

KATHY OH
MUIR JUNIOR SENATOR

Students' rights should not be infringed upon by Administrative Bureaucracy.

Student have the right to a quiet area in which they can study at all times. To assure this, I will work for an extension of library and the study hall hours late into the night. Students have the right to a quality education; they should not be bothered by the extra worries that come with fee increases. To ensure this, I will organize opposition to this unnecessary assessment. Students have a right to an extended period in which to decide their academic interests. To assure this, I will lobby for the implementation of an extended grading option change period, giving students the extra two weeks that other UC schools already have. Students need a say in their education. So take initiative and vote KATHY OH for MUIR JUNIOR SENATOR!

VANESSA MAY
MUIR JUNIOR SENATOR

I feel that it is important for me to get involved in university politics because I care about what goes on. As a student I feel that I should give my input. College is not just an academic experience; it is an all encompassing one. An experience that helps one grow not only academically but socially as well. By getting involved and contributing my thoughts, ideas and actions I can become a better person. Moreover, I might be able to make things better for my fellow students. I feel that student input and actions are what make the university what it is. Students help to define the campus atmosphere and attitude. I am running for Muir Junior Senator because I feel that I can contribute worthwhile ideas and actions to this school.

GOLDA BENDAH
MUIR JUNIOR SENATOR

Hello. My name is Golda Bendah and I am running for Muir College Junior Senator. I aspire to place a sincere emphasis in motivating and influencing Muir College students to become actively involved within their college, either by action or verbal input, so that their college experience may be complete by satisfying their expectations. I will competently and efficiently represent the interests and ideas of the Muir College students, as to unite the different colleges and their student bodies together. As representative of Muir college Junior class students, I will dependably and efficiently represent your thoughts, needs, ideas, and interests that will prove to be better your college experience.

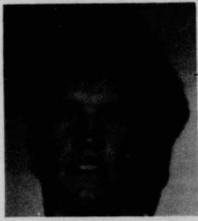

MICKI WINSETT
MUIR SOPHOMORE SENATOR

Hi! I'm Micki Winsett and I'm running for Muir Sophomore Senator. I feel that my involvement at Muir College, through Resident's council, being co-chair of the Burnout Center, and being H-House president, demonstrates my enthusiasm and dedication to Muir. My belief is that the position of sophomore senator should not be used for me to share with the Muir College Council and the ASUCSD what I feel to be the concerns and needs of Muir students but to actually represent the sophomore class and what the students tell me their concerns are. As Sophomore Senator, I will come into contact with Muir sophomores by attending suite rep meetings, apartment meetings, circulating surveys and newsletters and actually getting out and talking to the students.

What Muir college needs is someone outgoing enough to talk to students about the issues, creative enough to think of new ways to approach those issues, and "crazy and assertive enough to stick their neck on the line for what the students need and want. I am that person. Vote for someone interested in your interests - Micki Winsett for Muir Sophomore Senator!!

NIC SPIESS
REVELLE SENIOR SENATOR

The '89-90 school year will be my last at UCSD. In previous years I have participated in various athletic and social programs, but feel that now comes a time for me to contribute to our campus politically as well. As a Revelle student, I am familiar with the dilemmas facing this college and its students, for I too have faced them. I possess strong communications skills, and will employ these to pave a smoother way for all Revelle students for the present as well as for the future. Thank you.

JAMES REINER
REVELLE JUNIOR SENATOR

Revelle is the oldest college on the UCSD Campus and deserves fair and vocal representation at AS Council meetings. As a Senator, I will make an active commitment to strengthen this link between Revelle Students and the A.S. Council. In addition, I will work for the following:
-obtaining a firm commitment from the administration for education concerns over the current overemphasis on research concerns.
- work for moving Revelle classes to Revelle classrooms (No Humanities classes at TLH)
-Address Revelle Parking problems
-Work for equal allocation of A.S. Money. This Tuesday, vote in the interest of Revelle. Vote for James Reiner.

RAMON CESTERO
REVELLE JUNIOR SENATOR

During my two years as a student here at UCSD, I have noticed that a majority of the students are not aware of what occurs behind the closed doors of the Associated Students. Many do not know of the issues discussed which may directly or indirectly affect them in various ways, such as parking, monetary allotments, etc. I believe that as a representative of the student body, the duty of senator includes both conveying the students' views and interests as well as informing them of the issues which concern them. If the students are not informed, how can an individual effectively represent their views? One of my main goals would be to let student know what is going on and also to obtain their views on the issues which concern them.

REVELLE JUNIOR SENATOR
As a student representative, I will try to change the approach of the A.S. toward UC Regent policy. In the past, the AS has fought detrimental policies only in the final stages of their implementation. By that time it was too late to stop these policies. An example of this is the bike and skateboard policy. I feel there is a better way. In October of last year, a "Master Plan" was completed by a consulting firm for the UC Regents. This plan sets up the growth and change of UCSD past the year 2000. Now we, as students, have a chance to determine which parts of this plan are good and which parts we need to stop, before they are in effect. The new parking proposal is an example of this need for control. The Master Plan proposes that over 1/2 of the lots on the west end of campus be closed. As a replacement, a large lot will be built on the other side of the freeway. This would force Revelle students, including residents, to park 15 min. away from their car. There will be a shuttle but can we rely on that in an emergency? We need new parking, but not at the cost of existing parking. Another problem with the Plan involves turning Revelle field into buildings. This would mean that Revelle students would be sharing Muir fields with both Muir and the intramural teams. My goal as the junior representative for Revelle is to stop these types of things from occurring. By looking to the future we can stop proposals from the Regents that are against our interests. We pay for this school and now we have the chance to make it the way we want.

committing myself to representing Revelle. I have strong opinions (such as believing in continuing the tradition of beer at TG's) as well as an interest in hearing others' ideas. As a good representative, I would be sure to keep you informed of my activities in A.S. as well as ways to contact me. Should you have any questions, contact me through my P.O. Box 4212.

PAMELA PAEK
REVELLE SOPHOMORE SENATOR

"There is too much of the past that I do not wish to forget." Years from now, college life will be a fading memory filled with nostalgia for friends, fun, and finals. I'd like everyone to remember UCSD and thus, I am willing to devote time to the student body because it is the force that controls the school. Communication is necessary to fulfill everyone's demands, and as Revelle Sophomore Senator, I hope to achieve just that. I will do my best to serve the Revelle Sophomore class by helping them keep the solid memory of good times at UCSD.

DAVID BONDS
THIRD SENIOR SENATOR

Over my first four years here at UCSD, many things have changed. Unfortunately many of those changes have not been in the best interests of UCSD undergrads. For example, when I was a Freshman the price of a parking permit was $89.00 - today it costs $144.00. Another issue I hope to further is the elimination of the "W" grade as well as extending the date for the changing of the grading option. Finally, at Third I want to work with Provost Lytle to establish an Ethnic Studies Department while reforming the Third general education requirements. The A.S. can accomplish this, but only if you elect the BEST candidates.

LAURA MURRAY
REVELLE SOPHOMORE SENATOR
BEST SLATE

I am the BEST Revelle Sophomore Senator candidate for student empowerment! As your Senator I will demand action regarding parking, University Center control, student co-op independence, and health food services by increasing student awareness and, thus, representation. I also want the BEST cultural representation in Faculty and student recruitment. I want Revelle students to receive the BEST possible education by modifying the Humanities program to include ethnic studies. I want the BEST information for students about what's happening on campus and I want your input! BEST will protect the best interests of students for education, representation, and information.

DINO DELFIERRO
THIRD COLLEGE SENIOR SENATOR

In regards to this office, I have the desire and ample experience which enables me to excel at this position. Currently, I am the Third College Representative to the Parking Advisory Board. I was chosen for this position because of my ability to represent a diverse number of students. Consequently, my duties as a Rep. required me to attend Third College Council and Commuter Board meetings. This enabled me to become better acquainted with the processes involved in student government and also the needs of Third College Students. Because of these achievements, I believe that I am well qualified for the position.

LARRY BECKER
THIRD JUNIOR SENATOR

Are you getting what you are paying for in the Associated Students? The A.S. allocated nearly $680,000 in the last year. What is perhaps more shocking is that they spent over $90,000 just on A.S. Administration. Thus, they spend $90,000 just to allocate the other $590,000.

A vote for Larry Becker for A.S. Third College Junior Senator is a vote for fiscal responsibility. By making many of the A.S. services and programs user-funded and by slashing the bureaucracy, we can cut the A.S. budget. On April 11, 12, and 13, tell the A.S. to spend less on itself and more on university-wide events like T.G.'s spending by any government must be checked and controlled. This is your chance to check the A.S.

PATRICK FROST
THIRD SOPHOMORE SENATOR

When dedicating oneself to a leadership position, one must be adept in the responsibilities of a leader and in the concerns of his/her constituents. As a freshman in Third College, I bring to this school vast experience as a leader. Involved in Student Government in my past 6 years of school and elected to 2 senatorships in California Associated Students Council (CASC), I was also able to experience leadership in the United States Congress for 1 year when I worked as a Congressional Page. But here at UCSD, my participation in Town Hall Meetings has familiarized me with the concerns of my fellow Third College Students. My past experience and my familiarity with my own college has "warmed" me up to run for Third College Sophomore Senator. "Warm up to Frost" and vote for Patrick Frost.

RUBEN DURAN
THIRD SOPHOMORE SENATOR

Serving on the A.S. Council for the past six months as Third College freshman senator has been a very educating and unique experience. I believe I've served the best interests of the students of Third College, and I can continue to do so. Among my top concerns for the coming year is the pending proposed student fee increases. Public education is a right not a privilege and raising fees dramatically would close too many doors for too many people. If elected, I will also be sure to keep in mind that the students of Third are a unique group with unique needs. Ruben Duran for Third Sophomore Senator.

LISA FLAIG
WARREN SENIOR SENATOR

I am Lisa Flaig and I am running for Warren Senior Senator. I have been Secretary of Warren Student Council for two years, serve on many A.S. Committees including Sun God Festival Board and am currently chairing the Warren Semi-Formal Committees. With my experience and enthusiasm, I believe I can help to improve life for Warren students. I understand and am aware of the problems facing Warren students today like parking and isolation. With your vote and your future input, I hope to find solutions to these and other problems.

JEFFREY SHEAR
WARREN JUNIOR SENATOR

Hi! My name is Jeffrey Shear, and I am a sophomore at Warren. During the past year, I have had the opportunity to serve as Freshman Senator and currently as the Vice President External of Warren College. I am very familiar with the way A.S. works and have experience dealing with the bureaucracy. One of my principal goals for the upcoming year is pushing to get more funding for Warren College, for the construction of more facilities to be built closer to the Warren Apartments. I want this position because I believe that a vote can make a difference. Vote Jeff Shear Junior Senator! I will make a difference.

CRAIG SNEIDERMAN
WARREN SOPHOMORE SENATOR

Taking the initiative. Running for AS as Warren Sophomore Senator, my goal is to always take the initiative to keep our campus moving forward. After living at Warren for the past year, I've seen what should be strengthened and what can be changed. For example, why don't we take Warren's most successful event, "the bed buddy ball," and have it with another college to integrate Warren with the rest of the campus? Also, I feel strongly that Warren needs a sundry store, and this should be of primary importance. Lastly, as a voting member of AS, I feel I have the qualities to make decisions on behalf of the students. My campaign is based on "C.H.O.I.C.E." (commitment, honesty, objectivity, initiative, creativity, efficiency). Make the right "C.H.O.I.C.E." on election day, and vote Craig Sneiderman for Warren Sophomore Senator.

VICKY LIPON
WARREN SOPHOMORE SENATOR

If elected as Warren Sophomore Senator, representing my constituency's views would be my paramount goal. I would do this with monthly visitations and newsletters as well as questionnaires and opinion polls. Although it is important to represent all interests with equal vigor there are a few areas which I would like to emphasize if elected: 1) Safety Improvements 2) Improved Social and Cultural programs 3) Maintenance and Improvement of Student Rights 4) Increased Aid for Academics and 5) Improved Communication between the individual and Associated Students. I have served as Freshman Senator and have held other government positions as well within UCSD so I will bring experience and dedication to the office as well as my own personal brand of creativity and enthusiasm. I want to serve you in this capacity; I know that with your support I can excel and bring exciting changes and improvements to Warren College.

LEON MESCHOULAM
FIFTH SOPHOMORE SENATOR

If I'm elected Fifth's Sophomore Senator I will represent the interests of Fifth College students. I feel that I am the best qualified candidate to execute this goal because I have served as treasurer of Fifth College council and I have been active in Fifth's Fund-raising committee. Because of this, I have become aware of the needs of our college first hand. I have also been actively involved in various campus-wide committees, expressing Fifth's needs to other college representatives. If elected, I will work closely with the Fifth College Council in coordinating the interest of Fifth College with the A.S.

two major problems UCSD faced this year, and what problems do you anticipate arising in the future, either specifically with Programming, or in general?

S: This year as far as Programming, I didn't really see an involvement with Jonathon [Judaken] in actually involving the students in the decision-making process.

For example, with TGs it was like, a reggae band every TG or so, or at least it seemed like it. Some of the people I've talked to have said, "Why isn't there any rock?"

G: What are you going to do to solve these problems?

S: I want to have somewhat of a synthesis of having some close friends I can rely on, and also opening myself up to everyone, to decide what kind of bands and what kinds of events are going to be here.

G: How would you go about finding out what students want?

S: Just right now in this campaign process, when I go up to people and ask them "What do you want as far as events?"

One way to do it is to go to the student organizations and see what programs they're after.

G: What have you been finding out from people?

S: It has either been that "Jonathon [Judaken] really sucked" or that he did a good job. Some people say that they really like the reggae, and some people said that they wanted an alternative.

G: What about other aspects of Programming, such as lectures?

S: That's where I see the student organizations coming into play.

I'm sure each organization has their own group of people, and they're interested in what that group deals with, and by presenting that as an event, not only do you get those people, but anybody else who may be interested in that topic.

G: Do you have any plans for going beyond student fees for money to sponsor events?

S: Well, there's Bill Silva and I'm not clear about this, I don't know how much influence POP Events and the A.S. programmer have in deciding which bands come over here.

G: Do you have any qualms about whether beer companies should sponsor college events?

S: Well, I myself don't drink, but I don't see anything wrong with it if you are old enough. Now with this TG referendum, I can see both sides.

One side is that it is my money that is going to someone else's beer, but on the other hand it is the money that goes for the TG, including the band, the beer and the Pepsi. I'm aware that the beer is an attracting factor to the TG.

G: What are your specific plans for different or new programming next year?

S: One of my ideas, in addition to the Reggae Fest... is to have a sort of a "Rock 'n' Fest, for lack of a better word, and also to continue the film series. I would intend to get better movies... and advertise it more.

JIM VALLADAO Programming

Guardian: What past activities have you been involved with that makes you the most qualified for this position?

Valladao: Well, the All Night Party [slate] is pretty much going into this with no experience. But, um, we kinda want it that way because there's a lot of things that never get tried because of people, who, in experience, say it just can't be done.

We're going to try a lot of different things and yeah, a lot of them probably won't work, but there'll probably be a lot that will and it could make life interesting.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which UCSD faced this year, and what problems do you anticipate arising next year, either specifically with Programming or in the school in general?

V: One problem I found [was] the way money was spent. Johnny [Jonathon Judaken] seemed really interested in the concerts and he let most everything slip, mainly the A.S. film series.

I'd like a bigger diversity of groups that play TGs or school events. It seems we've discovered this year how many times Barracho Y Loco and the Cardiff Reefers can play at this school. I'd like to bring something like some rock or funk — more diverse music.

G: What would you do with TGs in the future?

V: I do want TGs because they are one of the only things that really work as school-related events.

I do want to keep the alcohol because this is the question I would like to pose: "Did you go to either of the non-alcoholic TGs, and if you did, did you have fun?"

If you answered "no" to either of these questions, you are correct. [Alcohol is] one of the big draws of the TGs to getting that many people there . . .

If you try to put the money that is spent on that in some other kind of draw to get people there like bigger bands, it still won't bring as many people.

G: If someone in the administration finally decides that there isn't going to be beer at the TGs, does that mean Programming will fall apart?

V: I think it would, I mean I'd try putting that money into better bands, maybe free food, maybe pizza. Nothing is going to draw the way free beer does.

It would be a tough thing to keep that program alive with that many people participating without the alcohol.

G: So where does that leave you?

V: I'm going to fight for the beer all the way.

G: What types of things would you do?

V: Student petition drives, I mean some of the students just need to have a swift kick in the ass of what to do. I mean this is one of the most disorganized schools I've ever seen.

Since I've been here the administration has just constantly been taking things away and nobody fights for it . . . I think a little civil disobedience is necessary, and I will be behind it all the way.

G: Do you have any specific goals for next year, any changes in mind for Programming?

V: Well, Anthony (Waldichuk) came up with the Inter-campus Brady Bunch Trivia Contest, and we're thinking of offering the winner a seat on the A.S. Council.

We figure we could probably get a good draw for the "A.S. Pornographic Film Series." Otherwise, something like a hockey rink in the new Rec Gym would be nice.

G: Are you serious about a pornographic film series?

V: Yes, I think they'd be big draws. You've got to appeal to the people. G: Do you think that half the population at this school might be violently opposed to a pornographic film series?

V: Half? No. A loud minority though.

G: Is this something that a programming commissioner should be doing?

V: Oh, yeah, if the students want it.

G: What students?

V: Young male late post-adolescent kind of students.

G: So, that's the group that you are targeting?

V: I'm targeting at anybody that would go. It'd probably have a good draw . . . There's a lot of people at this campus that don't get a voice in government because they're not loud enough to go through . . . what the screaming liberal organizations will go through to get things done.

COMMISSIONER operations, services and enterprises

MARK SUSTER
Operations, Services & Enterprises

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past, and how have these qualified you for the position for which you are running? Specifically, what campus activities?

Suster: I've been part of student organizations in the past. Right now I'm the public relations chair [of the Interfraternity Council]. I'm involved in the campus in that way. What we're doing is press releases around campus and we are getting into contact with the administration. I work at the Career Center, I'm a student [computer] programmer there.

I came into a position that had not been established and was asked to take over their computer operations. So that qualifies me in two ways: one, I had the experience of stepping into something that I'm not 100 percent familiar with; and, two, the computer experience.

G: What would you identify as two major problems which have faced UCSD this year, and what problems do you foresee for next year?

S: [The A.S.] has been trying to increase the profits made from some of these organizations that are not necessarily co-ops. What I would like to see rather than that, is to see things like [the General Store and Food Co-op] better advertised so we can get people in there.

When we increase profits [we will be able] to expand and offer more to the students. I think there has been a lack of communication among the current [commissioner of] operations, services and enterprises and the managers.

As far as the actual A.S., [an obvious issue] that comes to mind is the [night] parking issue. To be quite honest with you, I don't feel it is worthwhile for a lot of different reasons. One being I don't think people who don't purchase permits for the day are going to suddenly turn around and purchase one for night.

We also need to look at social life on campus. . . I am really for a lot of school spirit and a lot of events on-campus.

G: How would you go about establishing communications between yourself and the operations, services and enterprises?

S: I would hold strict office hours to analyze any problems [the managers] are having. But you just can't sit back and wait for people to come to you, because it just won't happen.

I plan to establish relations with the managers of the operations. . . just set up a time where we meet at lunch and talk over their problems and establish a working relationship. . . and basically make sure they are properly advertised.

G: What would you do with an operation, service or enterprise that is losing money?

S: If it's losing money, it's obviously not being operated efficiently. So you have to take a good hard look at what is going wrong. You have to do a lot of analyzing to see where you are and where you are going.

G: Do you think there are services the A.S. provides that are worth keeping, even if they are not money makers?

S: I think there are some valuable services the A.S. provides. . . If we are operating efficiently and still losing money I think an organization like [a radio station, for instance] is important.

Suster is a Muir College junior double majoring in economics and political science.

JIM EDWARDS
Operations, Services & Enterprises

Guardian: What activities have you been involved with in the past and how have these qualified you for the position of commissioner of operations, services and enterprises?

Edwards: I was really active on the [Jesse] Jackson campaign, putting in like 30 hours a week . . . I'm a member of the California Alliance of Progressive Student Activists, a statewide network of students.

My experiences lies in promoting student empowerment. There's a difference between student rights and student empowerment. When people talk about student rights you think about students' rights to have small class sizes, the right to more office hours or something like that. I would say that student empowerment is needed. [If] there is some sort of academic senate committee which decides how many classes profs should teach and how many office hours should be standard, there should be students on that committee so that students are helping to make policy.

G: Why are you running for commissioner of operations, services and enterprises and not student advocate or president?

E: Well, aside from Programming, I guess it's one of the only specific positions where you are actually serving students. It should be done in a democratic way serving the majority of students. [For instance] it's nice to have a record store. . . but [the A.S.] sunk about $50,000 into it and then another $10,000. And things like lecture notes which I think are probably more basic student services are not funded as they should be. We have $60,000 going to Assorted Vinyl when I have friends going to classes with 100 students and they can't get A.S. Lecture Notes because [the A.S.] says they will lose money on it.

If we were to lose $5,000 a year on lecture notes I don't think it would be that big a deal, but to sink $60,000 into Assorted Vinyl. . .

G: How would you decide which lectures should be covered by the A.S. Lecture Notes?

E: It is a good idea that larger classes be covered first. Aside from that, ask CAPE (Course and Professor Evaluations) to put something on there like, "Would you buy A.S. Lecture Notes if they were offered for this course?" and next time that course came up the [A.S.] could take that into consideration.

G: How do you think the Price Center will affect students?

E: Students don't really have a voice in how that thing is run. I have a class at the Price Center Auditorium and there are no blackboards. It's got nice plants, nice seats, nice carpeting. It's set up for management trainee conferences and things like that. It's not set up for classes, it's not set up for student conferences, we're the one's footing the bill. . . it should have been done much differently.

G: What can students do to bring about change?
E: The A.S. should be working to try to get more students onto committees. Try to mobilize students to pack meetings. To pack them with students who are orderly, but who are upset. Since [the administration] doesn't like bad press, they might do something about it.
G: Do you have any ideas for new operations, services or enterprises?
E: A 24-hour study space — at least from the third week on. There is a lot of library space. The major concern would be protection. Maybe a police officer or CSOs could be used.

COMMISSIONER

GAYATRI L. GUNASEKARAN
 University Center Board

Guardian: What past activities have you been involved with that specifically make you most qualified for this position?
Gunasekaran: As a freshman I served as Third College senator and I've served a year on UCB (University Center Board) as sophomore senator this year.

I also served as chair for the [Price Center] Grand Opening Committee. So, in the strictest sense, that's what qualifies me.
Guardian: What would you identify as two major problems that UCSD faced last year, and what problems do you anticipate arising next year either specifically in the UCB, and the A.S. or the school in general?
G: What I am always upset about is that students are never guaranteed to get their classes. Most of the time you end up crashing and to me that's terrible.

Some of the professors really care, but a lot of the time you don't get to see them. The fact is that undergraduates aren't put first.
Guardian: How, in the position UCB chair, are you going to solve these problems?
G: I think that as UCB chair I couldn't really have a direct affect on academics per se, but I think that the Price Center and the Student Center could provide places where students can have a chance to add to their academic capabilities.

We as a board (UCB) really can't do anything about the academics, but we make sure that the rest of their experience is a little better.
Guardian: Is there anything you would initiate that would help the academic problems?
G: I could try to do that on A.S., but I would have to say that my first responsibility as UCB chair would be to make sure that the Price Center and the Student Center would be working very, very well before I started looking at the academic side of things.

Guardian: If elected you will be the first UCB chair in office with the Price Center in full swing. Given its commercial quality, how are you going to maintain and improve the old Student Center in the interests of co-ops and enterprises?
G: I've sort of felt the fear the co-ops have that they think they will be neglected once we open the Price Center, and I sort of see it as analogous to when parents have a new baby and for a while all the attention is centered on the new baby.

But, that doesn't mean that you're going to forget about the old child...it's just that "giving birth" is a difficult process.

We're not going to neglect the Student Center in any way shape or form...I can assure them that there is no need or no reason to feel threatened.

Guardian: In the past, the UCB chair has been criticized as a "tool of the administration." How are you going to see to it that you are not a voice for administrative goals and wants?
G: I would not be a voice for administrative wants because I would have to be a schizophrenic at that point.

I'm a student and I care about students, and I don't spend my time on UCB because I want to voice the administration's concerns. I sit on UCB because I want students to be better represented.

If there were any chance of that happening (voicing administrative concerns), I would just have to keep my eyes and ears open and ask pertinent questions...you find out what's going on.

Guardian: How do you stand on the co-op referendum?
G: I read over it...it sounds like [the co-ops] are worried that UCB isn't going to take care of them anymore—that all of a sudden we're going to forget them. That is not the case.

If I felt that UCB was going to forget about the co-ops, that we did not care about them, then I would have to say "yeah, vote 'yes' on the co-op referendum," but I really don't see that is going to be the case, and I personally don't have commitment to forgetting about the co-ops.

So, I'm not going to vote for the co-op referendum because I personally have a commitment to making the Student Center great and making the Price Center great.
Gunasekaran is a Third College sophomore majoring in literature/writing.

JASON CARBONE
 University Center Board

Guardian: What past activities have you been involved with that make you more qualified than your opponent?
Carbone: This year I'm the Muir College representative to the University Center Board [UCB]. The year before I was the student-at-large on the Retail and Services Committee.

I've had a working knowledge of [UCB] now for two years, and this year I've been involved in a number of projects ranging from the poster that's coming out for the [Price Center] Grand Opening to helping hire the assistant director for the new building.
G: What would you identify as two problems that UCSD faced this year, and what problems do you anticipate arising next year, specifically in the UCB, the A.S. or the school in general?
C: One, I think students are sick and tired of reading about A.S. bickering in the Guardian.

Every week we see letters to and from [members] who are angry with each other. [Council members] should stop bickering amongst themselves and just do it.

The second big issue ranges from our fees going up to nighttime parking permits. It seems that the students that go to this school don't have a say in what happens; it seems the all-mighty dollar rules and that dollar happens to come from graduate funds.
G: How do you plan to improve or solve these problems?
C: Well, number one, I'm not one to bicker. I hope to be a very accessible person, and when someone has an idea I'll be the first person to move forward with the idea and see if it's feasible.

Number two, I think I'm going to try a number of things with [UCB] funds so that we can increase student awareness of not only what is offered here at the University, but also what, as students, we are basically paying for and should utilize.

G: If elected, you will be the first UCB commissioner in office with the Price Center in full swing. Given its commercial quality, how are you going to ensure that the current Student Center is maintained with the non-commercial interests of the co-ops and enterprises?
C: That is a very good question. Number one, it is important to realize that over the summer the current Student Center is going to get a much needed renovation of a half million dollars, and in doing so, we are going to be expanding all the existing co-ops in size and space.

I think that it is important as UCB chair that we recognize that the Price Center is going to be very commercial and so we keep in mind that the co-ops and enterprises exist not only for the benefit of students, but because there are a number of students that are actively involved in all of these organizations.

G: In the past, it's been said the position of UCB chair is a "tool of the administration." How do you intend to direct The Board towards student goals instead of administrative goals?
C: Everybody has their own agenda. The University has its own agenda, and I, as a student running for [UCB] commissioner, have my own agenda. Being [UCB] commissioner means I can set my own agenda for what happens at those meetings.

I think it's important for students to realize that there is a voice, and if elected, ... I'm going to be listening to students, not the administration.

KI SONG
Muir Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Song: I want to provide some type of budget bulletin for the Muir students, so they know where their fees are being allocated. My second goal is to get this school more involved with the University itself.

In addition to that, what I can do is provide a suggestion box which would give the students input. Students are your best resources. I also want to provide some type of academic services for the students who work and don't have the time to go to their academic advisor. I want to provide an answering service where they can call and ask questions.

They could leave their name and number and someone could, or I could, find out the exact regulations regarding general education, their major, minor, things of that sort. I think that would be a convenience for the students.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

S: I'm going to provide a suggestion box at the Price Center. [Boxes will also be] at key places in HL and in every [house advisor's] or [resident advisor's] room. At the end of the week, we'd collect those and go through them to see which ones seem more applicable.

Students are the best resources, they know what they want. If there's a majority of a topic that they want to proceed into, I'll do the best I can.
Song is a Muir College junior majoring in pre-electrical and computer engineering.

JOE FLOREN
Muir Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Floren: I would say one of the issues is protecting the co-ops from the administration, protecting them and helping to expand the co-ops.

I don't think they should just try and gouge the students for money. It just seems that the administration, for whatever reason, likes to deal with corporations rather than with students.

One thing that hasn't been addressed at all [by the Council] that I'd like to mention is the "W" grade. At schools like Stanford, you can drop up until the day of the final and not get a "W." One of the BEST slate issues is to get rid of the "W" grade entirely.

We'd also like to push back the last time to change the grading option from pass/no pass to letter grade until after the first midterm... The way it is right now is that there isn't a point in having the ability to even change it, because nobody's got their grades yet [when the deadline arrives].

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

F: Just by talking to people and sort of getting a feel for what's in the neighborhood. One way to do it would be, I work in the Muir Cafeteria, to talk to some of the people who come in there, talk to people in classes. I like to talk to people about politics, and even when they're not interested in it, I try to get their views so I can find out what's important to people.

Floren is a Muir College senior majoring in political science.

STEVE NETZLEY
Muir Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Netzley: In the area of academic relations with the administration... UCSD has several characteristics that are not something that I'd like to brag about. Such as, one, we have the highest drop rate, of classes, of any of the schools in the UC system. And, number two, it takes longer for a UC San Diego student to graduate than it does for any other student in the UC System.

There are two major points I'd like to address on this — one is, we are not allowed to drop classes without a "W" after the fourth week, which is unique only to UC San Diego. Number two, we're not allowed to change our grading option after the fourth week, which is unique to UC San Diego.

The other thing I'd like to look for is social...I'd like...pseudo-TGs for Muir, more noontime concerts, and perhaps inter-college [activities].

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

N: If you have these events, say noontime concerts, you can address people prior to a concert...people who aren't necessarily politically aware. Muir dorms are kind of unique, also, in the fact that they're one solid building, and they have these suite rep meetings, so you can basically have a voice to everybody in the dorms through a suite rep meeting that you can meet with.

Netzley is a Muir College junior majoring in political science.

MARK VAN DIERENDONCK
Muir Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Van Dierendonck: Just keeping the TGs around for one thing. The most important question is the question about the administration kind of taking things away from the students. In parking, they've moved students way out on the outskirts of the campus. They've taken the Pub away more or less.

[Other issues include] expenses such as parking, books. I don't know if the A.S. can really do anything about that. I understand there's some kind of state law that says the state of California cannot use educational funds to build parking lots, they have to be self-supported, but by the same token they build buildings on top of existing parking lots, and when they do that they should basically buy the parking lot that they just took away and build it somewhere else.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

V: Just hang out in front of M.O.M.... The way I kind of stay in touch is just by reading the Guardian. If someone writes in a letter and something like "Muir Senior Senator" is printed beneath it, occasionally, I read it. If the new Price Center Round Table Pizza place turns out well, somehow we can organize some kind of bulletin board there or something like that where people can see DIERENDONCK, page 27

visually see that. The flyers [on the bulletin boards] would have things like meeting times, important issues like academic [issues], parking fees being increased, and weekend parking.

KATHY OH
Muir Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Oh: I feel that the two most important issues that the A.S. must address next year are the fact that there's a lack of access to student information and administrative bureaucracy. In a way they're interrelated in that because students are uninformed the [UCSD] administration is taking advantage of that by passing legislation that adversely affects students, and students can't fight that because they don't know their rights. Some examples are the nighttime parking policy and the fee increase. Because students are uninformed of their rights, they can't fight the administration effectively.

As senator, I wanted to use the media that's already offered to us such as the Guardian, the college papers, and KSDT [to inform students].
After informing students, I was thinking about getting a committee together between the administration and students so that they both know what's going on and they both know what each other wants... This will by my number one priority.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

O: By using different organizations. I know that there are a lot of cultural organizations as well as academic. I think by contacting the presidents and the people who are active within that group, and letting them know what their rights are, and like I said before, just using the media that is offered to us.

Oh is a Muir College sophomore majoring in history.

Muir Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
May: One of the issues deals with night parking and the other issue deals with the tax fee hike of student fees.

If nighttime parking really does come to be, I think we're going to need a lot more police enforcement just to make it safe for commuter students. Some people still won't be able to afford to have a parking permit for the nighttime, too, and unless you want to keep on putting money in your meter, you might want to park a little bit off-campus. If you have to walk from on-campus to off-campus at night, that might be somewhat dangerous.

[There are] some things going on in Sacramento this weekend, called Spring Action, and a lot of students from around the state are going to go up there and lobby for different things. They're also going to say their views on the 10 percent fee hike. The UCSA will also address that issue. So maybe we can get more people involved in the UCSA so that we'll have a bigger say in what goes on.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
M: It would be nice if Muir College Council would ask for more student input. I want to get a real varied account of what juniors feel. It would be nice if we could have a town junior meeting or junior council meeting where people come in who are juniors at Muir and discuss their gripes and grievances... For those people who are apathetic, I really feel we can make an effort to show them that if they do put their input in, they can change things.

May is a Muir College sophomore majoring in political science.

GOLDA BENDAH
Muir Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Bendah: I think that one of the things the A.S. should do is have more events. It seems like the student body is so segregated. There's nothing other than the TGs that unites everybody. The Sun God Festival is a great idea, though. I really want to motivate people that aren't participating in these A.S. events more.

Right now I think the A.S. is doing a great job. There was a thing about the TGs, that they might stop them and I think that would be a shame because TGs are the one thing that everybody likes to do. It's not like you have to invite anybody. Everybody's invited. Nobody's excluded. That's the best thing about it, nobody is excluded.

I think the A.S. should make some inter-collegiate type [activities]. Maybe some type of sports event where all the colleges would get together and compete or not even compete but just get together.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
B: I'd always be available. I always make [my schedule] so that I'm not inaccessible. It's impossible to go up to every student and bring them into whatever event is going on, but I'd really like it if I got their input. If they don't like how something is run, I want to know because the most important thing is the input of the Muir College students.

MICKI WINSETT
Muir Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Winsett: I feel that the common issues are parking, and something on Muir campus, like recycling centers on campuses — it's an issue, that a lot of the students feel they need.

The main point of my whole campaign is others' interests, not exactly what the big interests are on campus. Everybody's focusing on these huge things, but maybe

GUESS WHO'S

COMING TO DINNER

What is it?

Guess Who's Coming To Dinner is the name given to numerous dinner parties hosted by UCSD volunteers for alumni, students, faculty, and staff. These parties allow for refreshing and interesting conversation in an informal, relaxed atmosphere. Best of all, you're treated to a delectable home-cooked dinner absolutely free!

Why?

Possibly you're trying to find a way to make that "initial contact" with a faculty member so that he or she will remember you at the quarter's end and write that letter of recommendation you've been hoping for.

When?

Block about 2 to 3 hours on Sunday evening, May 7th, and be up for a fun and interesting evening.

How?

If you're interested in participating as a guest at one of these dinner parties, please sign up by Monday, April 17th, either in your Res. Dean's Office, your Dean's Office, the commuter lounges or EDNA. If you have any questions, please feel free to call the Alumni Office at 534-3900.

 We need to look at the things that people need that aren't being voiced as much.

The A.S. council could do exactly what they do with big problems, but on a smaller scale.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

W: I plan on going to suite rep meetings; there are also apartment meetings. I would spend a lot of my time attending these meetings, because that's where all these ideas do come in, like commuter council, residence council — just going around to the suites during the study breaks, or just, on a Monday night, going to a suite I haven't been to in a long time, and saying, "hey, guys, what's wrong, and what's going on — are these things reaching you, that we're trying to do?"

I'd also start newsletter to the sophomores... I run the newsletters for H house right now. I'd also pass out a monthly survey... I'd definitely come in contact with the people; I think that's very important. Winsett is a Muir sophomore majoring in pre-economics and political science.

AGUSTIN OROZCO Jr.
 Muir Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Orozco: Parking, definitely — I've heard things about it from people in the A.S. going both ways, saying that they want it, and why they want it. I live on campus, but being a commuter, it would be really hard for me to pay for parking, if I came at night, to pay for night parking as well. I'm not sure where I stand on that now, but I think I would probably vote against night parking.

The fee hike that they're talking about... is another hard one, too, because you've got the faculty and everyone else saying, "we want them to go up," and the students saying, "want the prices to stay the same"... Of course, being a student, I don't want to pay any more than anybody else does.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

O: I live on campus... so, being at Muir, if I get elected, a lot of people will know who I am. I will try to make myself as visible as possible, and to keep in contact with people. The best way, for me would be to attend... the residence council meetings.

The ones who are really not outspoken, just go walk around the dorms, and try to meet as many people as I can, and try and keep in close contact with people that I already know, to see what they feel needs to be done and see what I can do about that.

Orozco is a Muir freshman majoring in Spanish literature.

ALYSSA HENRY
 Muir Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Henry: I feel I would like to address the night parking permits, for one thing, because I don't believe we should have any night parking permits; and, I think, more funds towards the athletic facilities, the P.E. department, is important. I think it's an important part of campus life here, and at the rate we're going, there are going to be less and less P.E. teachers and activities.

As a senator... my main objective is to get the students' interest is my college, so they have a chance to say what they want the A.S. to do, instead of the A.S. just going ahead and doing stuff.

I think almost everybody running would like to have no night parking, and the co-ops stay open, and more funds for various parts of the campus; but I think... what the sophomore senator should be, is a middleman to the A.S.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

H: I am very open to everyone's suggestions... I would put up a suggestion box, I would be in my room certain times if people wanted to come talk to me. Or, I'm around campus... I'll be outside, and I'll ask people if they have any suggestions for the A.S. It's odd to me that I pick up a Guardian, and read what the A.S. decided, and I had no idea they had come up with it.

The only thing I could do [specifically to reach commuter students] is, visit the cloud's rest... and even have a suggestion box in there.

Henry is a Muir freshman majoring in chemistry and biology.

JOSHUA D. GROSS
 Muir Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Gross: I think the most important issue is going to be the rising fees. What we're going to have to do is lobby every single government agency, as in the State Senate, House, and the UC Regents, to keep the fees down. My plan has a fees freeze, which would hold the line right where we are for the next three years.

The other most important thing that we've got to take a look at is parking... I have to park here every day, and there's not enough space to park; we've raised the parking permit rate 70 percent in the last three years, and not one new space has been built...

I think the A.S. Council, as I said with the fees, is going to have to work to lobby the State Senate and the State House for funds for this kind of thing. You've got to talk to who's in charge, and as far as I'm concerned, the State Senate is who's in charge.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

G: As far as the residents are concerned, I'd like to have a weekly house meeting, where I would go into one of the house meetings every week. As far as the commuters are concerned, I'm a member of the commuter council, and we are always looking for ways to try to get commuters involved... a commuter town hall-type meeting, perhaps, once a month, would, I think, be a good way of doing that.

Gross is a freshman, who has not yet declared a major.

JAMES REINER
 Revelle Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Reiner: The administration's seemingly lack of concern for the students at UCSD.

It seems to me that right now they're really concerned with building up the place and they're concerned with research, whereas it's an institution of learning and they've seemingly forgotten undergraduate students, which is the whole purpose for the University: education.

[The second] is something that Revelle students seem to want. It's not as big of a concern to other colleges, but lately all of our Humanities classes, which is a Revelle-only class, usually have been held over in Third Lecture Hall and Peterson Hall.

G: That leads right into the second question. How do you plan on keeping in touch with the students in your college that aren't politically active or outspoken?

R: Well, Revelle College is lucky in that we have a newspaper called Revelations, which is just for Revelle, and I was hoping that I could work with them and tell them exactly what I am doing, and I'd like to extend an invitation to office hours if I do get elected... Revelle's the oldest college on campus and it deserves a good senator and great treatment on the A.S. Board. Reiner is a Revelle College sophomore and is double majoring in QEDS and political science.

RAMON CESTERO
 Revelle Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Cestero: Parking is a major factor, because most of the people here are commuters, and there is a huge parking problem.

Personally I've experienced it every morning coming back from work at 9:30 in the morning; I can't find a parking spot, [and I] can't get to class.

Another one I think A.S. will have to consider is expanding the range of social events we have on this campus. I feel that we are limited here, and a lot of people are not enjoying themselves here, and I feel there should be a wider range and more events.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

C: I don't know what is open to me right now, but I think a bulletin in the Guardian would be really beneficial for everybody, saying what happened in each A.S. meeting, what we voted on, what important issues we are considering right now, so people do know what's going on.

G: Why are you running for the office?

C: I'd like to get more involved with the campus. I feel that I can do a good job, and I would like to get more involved. I think I have been limiting myself to just studying, and I'm in a fraternity and everything, but still, I want to get involved with the school. Cestero is a Revelle College sophomore majoring in biochemistry and cell biology.

LAURA MURRAY
 Revelle Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Murray: An important issue I feel for Revelle is to press for the establishment of an ethnic studies department, because right now we're taking Humanities, and [studying] Western civilization isn't a great preparation for our society today.

It's a little more culturally diverse than that. They press you about being a Renaissance person, and they don't realize that there's much more to your society than just the Western power right now. Humanities is just not good.

What I'm about and what BEST is about is student empowerment, and an important issue with this year's A.S. is the parking issue.

We need better representation on the parking advisory committee. We only have eight students out of 22 people, but we pay for over half of the money. The A.S. just needs to be more on top of it.

 Revelle Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Murray: An important issue I feel for Revelle is to press for the establishment of an ethnic studies department, because right now we're taking Humanities, and [studying] Western civilization isn't a great preparation for our society today.

It's a little more culturally diverse than that. They press you about being a Renaissance person, and they don't realize that there's much more to your society than just the Western power right now. Humanities is just not good.

What I'm about and what BEST is about is student empowerment, and an important issue with this year's A.S. is the parking issue.

We need better representation on the parking advisory committee. We only have eight students out of 22 people, but we pay for over half of the money. The A.S. just needs to be more on top of it.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

L: Most of the people that I will be representing will be living in the Revelle apartments, or possibly, in the dorms.

What I would like to do is put up flyers every month about what we are doing in A.S., what I am doing in A.S., and a way to get in touch with me.

Right now I don't even know who is representing me, and I think that's wrong.

G: Why are you running for the office?

L: I really want to make a difference. I want to see things change, and I want to have something to do with it.

PAMELA PAEK
 Revelle Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Paek: Well I don't know. I'm not really for or against the TGs that are held on Fridays, and I believe that it's up to the A.S. to communicate with the students, and if that's what they want then it's for us to provide.

Parkingwise... I know that a lot of students are really against [night-time permits], and I don't know how much control the A.S. has about that.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

P: I live in a dorm, and I'm in touch with people [there] almost all the time. I don't feel I have any problems going around from dorm to dorm; I know lots of people in the dorms.

I think that it's important for the communication process to be open between A.S. and students, and I'd just go around from dorm to dorm and ask them what exactly they want.

G: Why are you running for the office?

P: I really want to make a difference. I want to see things change, and I want to have something to do with it.

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER

Smart

Help your parents get through college.

Just thinking about college tuition is enough to make most parents break into a sweat.

But can you blame them? When you consider the cost of tuition, books, dorms—not to mention pizza parties—you're talking big bucks.

Which is why you should do some talking. Like telling your parents about the Education Loan Programs at Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

At MHT, not only do we participate in all three Federally guaranteed loan programs, but we also work with state and national agencies and can make guaranteed loans in all 50 states.

In practically no time at all. In a matter of minutes, MHT Student Loan Processors can program your information into our computerized loan-processing system.

Within 24 hours, the Bank will get a decision from the Guarantee Agency. It's that simple. Better still, with MHT your parents will get all the money they need from one source.

Example: If your folks need more money than government sources will give them, we can offer them tailor-made payment plans through The Education Loan Program, Educational Lines of Credit or Monthly Budget Program and Pre-Payment Programs that make it easy for your parents to fund themselves. (The Education Loan Program, Monthly Budget and Pre-Payment Programs are offered through the Tuition Plan, a company of Manufacturers Hanover.)

Once you get a loan from us, you can be sure it'll stay with us. Because we've never sold education loans to other banks (unless the borrower asked us to).

So if you need money for school, call 1-800-MHT-GRAD and get yourself an MHT Education Loan Application.

Then when your folks ask you about tuition, at least you'll have an answer. "No sweat."

REVELLE COLLEGE senior senator

 Revelle Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Spiess: The only issues that I would be aware of would be the referendas coming up. This is really shallow, but the parking problem, I think it sucks. There's got to be some sort of solution for that, [although] the shuttle has helped out a lot. I'm running unopposed so I didn't prepare for this [interview] as much as I probably should have.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?

S: As far as keeping in touch with the Revelle College students... they have Revelle College Council meetings, don't they? The concerns are going to be brought up by the Council. As far as directly communicating with the Revelle students... you can't really do that.

G: Why are you running for the office?

S: I'm running for the office because I really wanted to see what the A.S. at this school runs like. I've never really given something [to the school] in the sense of where I can use my brain and say, okay, listen, I'm going to sit here and I'm going to try to do what's best for the students of my college.

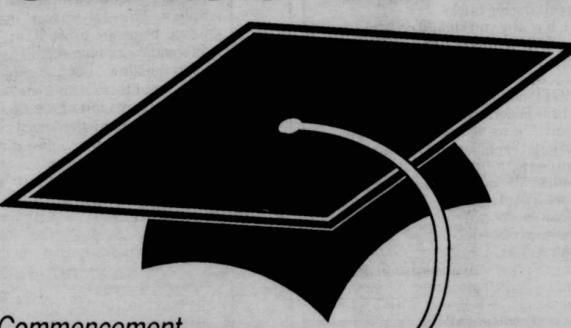

Spiess is a Revelle College junior majoring in history.

P: I've heard lots of gripes from freshmen and sophomores around campus and around the dorm area saying that their thoughts don't get heard through A.S. ... if so many people feel opposed to A.S. that's not really good because they control the school.

Paek is a Revelle College freshman and is double majoring in literature and math.

THIRD COLLEGE
senior senator
DAVID WESLEY BONDS
Third Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Bonds: One thing, particularly for Third College, they still have a committee looking into changing the name of Third College to Lumumba Zapata College ... that's perhaps not a monumentally important issue, but I think to a lot of students at Third College it's important. As far as campus-wide issues, I feel pretty strongly about the grading options — if there's a way we can at least alter the dates for the "W" grade and the Pass/No Pass grades. I think it would save a lot of people from completely dropping the class.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
B: I'm a senior this year and I've been living on-campus. I think I've gotten involved with a lot of students that way. I'm involved in MEChA, I was a TA for two classes of math in fall quarter, I worked in OASIS last quarter, and I got to talk to a lot of students, and I got to talk to a lot of people in A.S.

DINO B. DEL FIERRO
Third Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
DelFierro: Issues that pertain to Third College would be the 20th anniversary of Third College, which is coming up. I think we need to inform students more. I don't think that people know about the 20th anniversary, even Third College students. They don't realize how long Third has been here, or what Third has done.

I think minorities need to be better represented in student government. A topic that I think A.S. needs to deal with is community involvement ... just support in general from the community so that UCSD can grow and prosper.

Maybe we can send out a newsletter to a local newspaper like the Union or the Tribune and have a section reserved for UCSD. G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
D: I think the best way that we can keep students informed is the Guardian. Everybody on campus reads the Guardian, more so than other publications.

I think it's important to get opinions of the students. I think we should keep in touch with the [Resident Advisors] because I think they're a vital link to student opinions and attitudes on a lot of issues.

Another way is through, I'd say the biggest organization on campus is the Greek System. You can get a lot of different views on matters that deal with school.

Besides the Guardian, I think we should send A.S. minutes to the different college councils, to the provosts and deans of each college, and to different departments.

Del Fierro is a Third College senior majoring in economics.

junior senator
LAWRENCE BECKER
Third Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Becker: I think the most important issue is the fact that in the A.S. they're spending huge amounts of money; I think out of general unallocated they spent some $680,000 last year. Yet, at the same time they don't have any office or any kind of apparatus within the A.S. to raise funds.

I think it's just a disgrace that they're not looking for other ways to save the students money and to raise funds and I also think that of that $680,000, there was a lot of waste. They spent $90,000 just on the administration of the A.S. ... that's too much.

Also, I'd like to see some kind of institution set up so that ... officers in the A.S. can have a better chance at communication with the students, because just the A.S. Bulletin that's in the Guardian I don't think is enough, although it helps.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
B: I'd like to see the A.S. put together a newsletter of their own, or something. I think part of the blame isn't just on the students, it's also on the senators themselves. If there's something really important going on, I think if a senator feels a certain way, he has something to gain by having a lot of students who feel the same way there at the meeting with him.

PATRICK FROST
Third Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Frost: One of them's probably going to be parking, and the second one I think is going to be the TGs. It seems like that'll be the two big ones. I don't think we should have to buy weekend passes. I think it would keep people off the campus, which I don't think is a good idea.

As for the TGs, I don't know, it's a tough choice. It does sort of seem to be favored toward the people that are 21 and over, but then again it's a big part of the social part of this campus. I think that the people who go, enjoy themselves whether they drink or not.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
F: I go to all the Town Hall meetings, and there you hear all the complaints about the people living in the dorms, and just about what's wrong with the general ed of this school. I'm not just for the sophomore class; I would also be for the entire Third college itself; it takes involvement. What I think is important, is just posters and flyers, I think that's what's the most important thing.

I would like to see [Warren] become less isolated from the rest of the campus. I want to have more things go on at the Price Center. We're lucky that's going

RUBEN DURAN
Third Sophomore Senator

G: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Duran: One of the main things for Third College is philosophy. A lot of what Third College is about is lost. It was originally meant for diversity, and to promote learning about other cultures, and brotherhood among people. I want to work on that. I'm on the 20th Anniversary Committee, too. Parking at Third College for residents is really, really bad ... I've worked out some plans on that. As far as A.S.-wide, I think something that's really going to raise a lot of controversy is the constitutional convention.

G: Do you think a convention is necessary?
D: Yes. The way it stands right now we can do only three amendments.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
D: Right now we have the Town Meetings. What I want to do is set up an A.S.-Third College Council meeting, just to find out what [students] want, because we have office hours that are set up, and we're there and no one ever goes. Either that or just going out and asking each person ... walking around classes, you're hearing things.

Duran is a Third College freshman and is undecided about his major.

WARREN COLLEGE
senior senator
LISA FLAIG
Warren Senior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Flaig: First of all, there's the night parking issue which I know a lot of people are up in arms over and a lot of people aren't quite understanding what's going to be happening with that. I think they need to let people know.

Also, the parking situation here is terrible ... I would push for more parking for students, less for the faculty. They need those spots, but they don't need as many as they have. They certainly don't use them.

I would like to see [Warren] become less isolated from the rest of the campus. I want to have more things go on at the Price Center. We're lucky that's going

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
F: I'd go to the commuter breakfasts, and you see a lot of people there that are not active in the political things, but they come and they'll talk to you if you say "How do you feel about this?"

You get more of a chance to see how other people look at things ... find out more about them and I think that's a really good way to meet people.

Flaig is a Warren College junior double majoring in communications and biology.

junior senator
JEFFREY SHEAR
Warren Junior Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Shear: I think the A.S. needs to become more cohesive and get together and take stands on different issues, such as the fee increase.

When big issues come up, the A.S. should really get on it, write some kind of proposal up ... take some kind of a stand on that issue.

Now that the Price Center is going to be finished this quarter, I think that next year more events can be planned for different colleges.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
S: I am also involved with [Warren apartment government]. Because of that, it's real easy for me to get to know what the students really want. Even though I'm running unopposed, I'm still going to go apartment to apartment just to let people know who I am.

A survey asking the students what they like or what they need or how they'd like things to be at their college [could be used to solicit student opinions].

CRAIG SNEIDERMAN
Warren Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?
Sneiderman: I feel that one very important issue is basically just a social issue.

Related to the TG referendum, but more than that. I feel the TGs are important. I'm not 21, but I still enjoy them. If people feel the need to drink, they can do it beforehand.

I also heard that four or five years ago, Warren used to have TGs at the Commons on off-weeks that they didn't have TGs. I think it would be a great idea to reinstate that. I don't know how great it is that alcohol is present, but that's what draws people.

A second issue is probably the nighttime parking because a lot of people don't really understand it because it came up kind of out of nowhere and there were petitions for it and everything.

With the weekend events that are held here and the nighttime [restricted parking], it might be discouraging. I also don't think it's a very good idea for students to be parking off-campus ... because there's more chances of vandalism to their car or if it's at night, someone walking alone, it's adding more chance.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
S: People think of newsletters or they have office hours, I really don't feel that's effective because anyone that's really motivated enough with a problem is either going to take an office themselves or they'll seek you out.

So I'm pretty active with all the programs that are held ... and I think the best way would just be, when attending those, to talk to people I know and people that I don't know.

Sneiderman is a Warren College freshman and is undecided about his major.

FIFTH COLLEGE
LEON MESCHOULAM
Fifth Sophomore Senator

Guardian: What are the two most important issues you feel next year's A.S. Council must address?

Meschoulam: One is going to be the fees. A lot of people are trying to increase the fees, with the amphitheater fee and the athletic complex fee. So, I think fees is going to be a big issue, because we're the second highest. So, basically fees, I think, is going to hurt a lot of people.

The other one, which kind of ties into that, is the athletic complex. I think it's something that UCSD has needed for about 10 years now, but nobody has done anything about it until now. The problem is, there are no funds. It will be hard for students to approve an increase in fees. We do need the athletic facilities, but we need to look at other ways of funding it.

G: If elected, how do you plan on keeping in touch with people in your college who are not politically active or outspoken?
M: I would like to try to get a newsletter out about once a month. I have an advantage because Fifth College is relatively small. I want to let people know when my office hours are, so if they have any problems or questions they can stop by and see what's happening. I would also like to work with the Fifth College Council and have a little forum, where anyone can come.

JOHN EDSON
Fifth Sophomore Senator

Guardian: Next year, what do you think are the two most important issues that the A.S. is going to face?
Edson: One would have to be the constitutional resolution as to whether or not we should revise the entire constitution, because it is severely flawed.

G: What's severely flawed about it?
E: A lot of the things were made when there were only two colleges. For example, I can tell you, from being the Fifth College freshman senator, that there was no provision for incoming new freshman senators.

G: What's the second major issue you feel will confront the A.S. next year?
E: The problem of internal dynamics [of the A.S.]. Those have to be really changed. It's going to take strong leadership by whoever is the next A.S. president or vice-president of internal affairs.

More important than that is letting students know what A.S. does; letting them know the importance of A.S., and letting the students know that they can come to us with matters that concern them.

It's up to the senators to find things that are wrong in their own colleges and take those [to the A.S.].

G: Is it important to keep in contact with the people in your college who are not politically outspoken who are not on the College Council?
E: I would say that many of the people who don't voice concern have an apathetic view. The really motivated students, the ones who want to make a difference, are the ones who approach the Council.

What can be done [sending out questionnaires with the question,] "What concerns you most about the college and about the school?"
Edson is a Fifth College freshman double majoring in political science and economics.

Babylon Baseball

By MIKE MARTINEZ
Advertising Designer

When the great scorer comes, to mark against your name, he writes not that you won or lost, but how you played the game.

—Grantland Rice

We can certainly thank myth makers like Grantland Rice and Ford Frick for this equation: man who plays baseball=hero. Sportswriters have passed on the myth from Ruth to DiMaggio to Musial to Mantle to Banks to Garvey to Carter.

Over the years athletes became role models — to be fair, a burden many didn't seek of particularly relish.

One of the most ludicrous myths was the image of Babe Ruth as a lovable lug who hit home runs for sick little boys in hospitals. Ruth did make a few sick calls, but he spent most of his time chasing whores and boozing. In the arena of consumption, he was the real "refrigerator."

Legend has it that on a train ride to Boston, in view of a contingent of writers covering the Yankees that included future commissioner Ford Frick, Ruth chased one of his tramps down the center aisle, both of them buck neck-kid. The writers looked at each other with knowing winks and nudges — there was one incident that would never see newsprint.

These are the men that preserved in print the legacy of the game.

How the hero/ballplayer merger came about is unclear ... or why. At the turn of the century, the image of a ballplayer was rather seedy. It was that of a streetwise brawler, Runyonesque, distinctly lowbrow. A boozing vulgarian with the same social standing as a carney act. A low paid thug with a nickname like "Alibi Ike."

Not exactly the stuff of popular fiction for young boys.

In the '20s and '30s baseball's popularity grew — it became the first professional team sport with a nationwide following. As its popularity grew, America's youth got caught up in the game and were interested in the lives of its ballplayers. Baseball players, who after all were entertainers enjoyed the popularity of movie stars. The game itself became like U.S. Steel — and those whose living was the game decided that the company line was the best policy.

The myth persevered for many decades, despite the efforts of such visionaries as Battlin' Billy Martin in the '50s to strike a blow (pun intended) for rebellious individualism and a reflection of society's problems. We've known (via full disclosure in hard news stories with full

Men's Water Polo Breaks Guinness Record

By BRIAN ITOW
Contributing Sports Editor

At 1:15 Saturday afternoon, 14 Tritons stepped into the UCSD Natatorium pool to attempt the longest water polo match of all time. 26 hours later, the exhausted players emerged with a new Guinness Record.

Bryan Bilyeu/Guardian

Weary, but not beaten: UCSD poses for a post game shot.

The record was set by players from the Triton water polo team who were divided into two teams that amassed 948 goals during the time span. Larry Sanders, J.P. Beay, Peter Mc Conville, Stuart Sweeney, Chris Carrillo, Mike Schatz, and Jay Hagen (who was a late replacement for Todd Brinton) comprised one team while Turtle Brown, Todd Sells, Randy Franke, Tom Schatz, Jason Vance, Greg Goodrich and John Sklut made up the other.

The Tritons' 26 hour performance broke an old record of 25 hours, 36 minutes, set three years ago by a boys team at Shrewsbury School in Schropshire, England.

The Tritons entered the pool prepared for their assault on the record. "I wouldn't say it was confidence," Todd Sells said. "We just knew we wouldn't stop until we got the record."

Playing seven a side without substitutions, the players began to waver in at about the fifteenth hour. At about 2:30 a.m., with neither a crowd nor sunshine in sight, three players became fatigued by bad cases of acid indigestion while others grew weary and bored.

"Early in the morning, it looked like a few of us wouldn't make it," Tom Schatz said. "It seemed like we'd never see daylight. But when we saw the sun, it was a big relief — it was like a light at the end of the tunnel."

"When I saw the sun ... it was over," Chris Carrillo said. "We'd made it. From that point on, we knew we wouldn't stop."

Approximately eight hours and 20 minutes later, the record was theirs.

"It's an incredible accomplishment," Head Coach Denny Harper said. "There was no doubt in my mind that we'd do it ... and we really had no major problems other than general fatigue and boredom."

Still, the players were relieved when it ended. "I didn't think it'd be too much of a problem, but the more I thought about it, the more scared I got," Vance said. "There was a point in the middle of the night when it began looking impossible, but we did it and I'm really glad it's over. Now I just want to stay dry for a long time."

Vance and the rest of the Tritons just might get the chance. "We won't be trying to break our record in the next few months," Harper said. "I think that'll be it for awhile."

Baseball Sweeps Doubleheader; Regional Chances Improve Greatly

Tritons Sock it to Cal St. San Bernardino

By PHIL GRUEN
Sports Editor

The UCSD baseball team's 1989 doubleheader blues may finally be over. After splitting their first six twinbills of the year, the Tritons have rebounded to sweep two for their last three — including an impressive and crucial one over the rival Cal State San Bernardino Coyotes 10-5 and 6-4 Saturday afternoon at Olsen Field.

Perhaps more significantly, the Tritons (17-12), battling with San Bernardino (18-8) for a regional spot, improved their chances of selection by virtue of a 3-1 record in head-to-head competition this year. With Triton Head Coach Lyle Yates on the Regional selection committee, the chances are even better. Still, the Tritons have 11 scheduled games left and Yates is going to take it one game at a time.

"We've got to go out there every time and play with the kind of intensity we showed today," he said. "We played aggressive ball in every inning. We took each inning today as if it was a separate game ... everybody was up for this game."

Michael Foulks/Guardian

game, UCSD scored in every inning and collected 10 hits to overcome a brief 3-1 deficit and cruise to a 10-5 victory. Junior J.J. Fisher went all the way for UCSD, striking out 11 to pick up the victory.

After taking a 2-1 lead into the third inning, Fisher ran into a little trouble when Matt Bynum's error at shortstop opened the door for Paul Gonzalez, who smacked a three-run homer to give the Coyotes a 4-2 lead.

Fisher, however, said that he was "never worried," and as the Tritons scored eight runs in the remaining four innings, he had no reason to be.

UCSD tied the game in a hurry — benefiting primarily from the defensive woes of Coyote catcher Brian Cooper. Before Cooper was taken out in the fourth inning for a defensive replacement, he had allowed four stolen bases and five passed balls. One of the stolen bases was Chris Murphy's steal of home which knotted the game at four in the bottom of the third.

After Coyote pitcher Gary Irwin kicked into his customary slow windup, Murphy charged down the line and slid head into first home plate with the tying run just as the ball was arriving. "I had a great jump," Murphy pointed out. "But I wouldn't have stolen it if my pitcher wasn't so slow. I knew I had it."

holding the Coyotes to only one run and three hits over the final four innings. The UCSD offense also muscled up in the final innings, particularly the last two, as home runs by Gary Fessia and Murphy and doubles by Anthony Sanchez and Jim Martinez gave the Tritons five runs in both the fifth and the sixth to seal the victory.

But in order to keep their playoff hopes alive, the Tritons knew they had to put forth an equally impressive effort in the offensive end in the first three innings as they held on to a 1-1 tie despite the benefit of a base hit.

But in the fourth inning, the Tritons bats came alive when three singles by Murphy, Dave Nowlan, and Bynum, and a walk to Martinez, all contributed to a three-run rally which gave UCSD a lead they never relinquished.

Leftfielder Henry Jimenez sparked UCSD in the final innings both at the plate and in the field by collecting two hits — including a home run — and by making a spectacular diving grab of a foul ball in the Coyote bullpen.

After the Triton bats had provided a four-run cushion, starter and eventual winner Mike Morgan took control of the game by shutting down San Bernardino on three hits from the fourth national coverage) for about a decade now that our professional athletes are human beings — not characters out of a Clair Bee novel. This has been a decade of drug rehab and trials, bad press relations, strikes, violent on- and off-field brawls, collusion, and ungraceful falls by great stars of the past.

In light of these standards, this spring's scintillating trifecta is not shocking in the least, but perfectly logical. The well-documented adventures of Wade Boggs (scorned mistress), Steve Garvey (children out of wedlock and broken engagements), and Pete Rose (gambling) are mind-boggling nonetheless. These stories are spectacular because of the magnitude of their talents and reputations. The mere drug falls of Pascual Perez and Floyd Youmans are old hat indeed.

Boggs, Garvey and Rose — all seemed to relish the image of role model. Try to think of three players that more epitomized the image of baseball. Wade, the hitting machine with his titles and array of good-copy superstitions, playing in that lyrical bandbox/shrine, Fenway Park; Steve, the all-American boy, marathon autobiographer and future senator, whose 1984 playoff homer still recalls chills in San Diegians; and Pete, the dusty-faced legend, ballplayer's ballplayer, Charlie Hustle (sorry), the game's all-time hits leader.

The common denominator here is arrogance — a trait that's not inbred, but acquired after years of special treatment. These incidents might be mere titillation if not for Boggs' sanctimonious rationalizing, Garvey's smug Eddie Haskell position, and Rose's bold lying.

In Boggs' defense, Margo Adams does conduct herself like a whore and capitalist, and as her shoplifting charge shows, she's none too stable. But the mental picture of Wade jumping up from the couch during "Geraldo," slapping his forehead with a sense of relief and self-realization and crying "Addiction to sex, yeah! That's the ticket," is laughable. He also seems to relish his appearance with another of his icons, Barbara Walters. He managed some convincing tears as he reflected on how lucky he was that his wife Debbie didn't send him packing when word of his indiscretions were to become public record. Does anybody think he would have confessed if Margo had just clammed up and offered to go off to Nordstrom's — never to be heard from again?

The expression on Steve Garvey's face as Marty Levin of Channel 39 interviewed him about his off-the-field interests was a familiar one. It was identical to the one he used in countless interviews over the years as he explained how he hit that homerun, or won that MVP award, or might run for the Senate someday, or would like to run the Padres. He was juggling more dates than Tony Curtis in "Boeing, Boeing," yet he failed to pick up one of the "Responsibilities in Birth Control" pamphlets anyone can find in the back of the church. His term for the handling of his problems was "damage control." If this scandal Triton Sports Update...

Softball

Lynn Moreno pitched the Tritons to a 5-0 victory in the second game of Saturday's doubleheader as UCSD split with La Verne on the road.

Stacie Sasaki was charged with a loss in the opener as the Tritons fell, 2-1.

In the second game, the Tritons (22-7) were led offensively by Kathy Fogg, Dianna Moreno, and Pam Harnack, who each collected two hits.

UCSD is currently ranked second in the West and fourth in the country.

Men's Tennis

The Tritons won all three doubles matches, breaking a 3-3 tie and giving them a 6-3 victory over Division I Loyola Marymount.

The Tritons, ranked fourth nationally in Division III, is a good bet to make the 10-team National Tournament. Their only loss came against UC Santa Cruz, ranked second.

Women's Tennis

Despite pouncing the majority of their Division III competition this year, the Tritons continue to have trouble with Pomona-Pitzer. Saturday, the Tritons fell to the Division III Sagehens for the second time this year, as losses at the number one and two doubles spots for the Tritons gave Pomona-Pitzer the 5-4 victory. Yesterday, the Tritons rebounded to thrash Claremont-Mudd 8-1, a team that had lost 5-4 to Pomona-Pitzer in a previous match.

Last Monday, despite Christine Behrens' top-seeded defeat at the hands of nationally top-ranked Carolyn Bodart 6-2, 6-4, the Tritons trounced Menlo College 8-1.

UCSD is 11-4 and is ranked second on the West Coast.

Crew

The UCSD men's and women's crew teams found no relief from the heat Saturday as Loyola Marymount University burned the Tritons, winning six out of nine races.

The Triton women went two-for-five on the day, with both victories coming from the novice boats. Varsity heavyweights finished seven seconds behind Loyola with a time of 7:23.2, while the varsity lightweights came up short, crossing at 7:12.7.

The men's team had an even tougher outing. The varsity heavyweight boat made contact with the Loyola boat 500 meters into the race, but regrouped and beat Loyola to the finish with a time of 5:45.

Loyola, however, protested the race and was successful, stripping the Tritons of the victory.

Loyola continued to punish UCSD, sinking the varsity lightweight and the novice A boats.

team came from the novice lightweight shell, finishing at 6:07.4.

UCSD faces USD and SDSU in the San Diego City Championships Saturday, April 15 at 7 a.m. on Mission Bay.

Track and Field

At the Cal State Northridge Invitational this weekend, the women's 4 X 100 relay team broke the school record by nearly a full second with a 51.14 finish.

Bobbie Octavo, with a javelin throw of 114'4" also set a new record, marking the 16th different event a Triton track and field record has been surpassed this season.

For the men, Will Sensen-derfer earned a third place finish in the shot with a throw of 43'10 1/2".

Lacrosse

The Tritons won their ninth game of the year without a defeat as they pounded Arizona State Sunday afternoon, 17-7.

Ed Cheng scored five goals to lead the Tritons, while Juan Millan scored three and both Ezra Felker and John Rentz-pas contributed two apiece.

UCSD led 8-4 at the half, and coasted to the victory over the top-ranked Division I Sun Devils.

Baseball

After throwing eight full innings, a "tired" Morgan (according to Yates) surrendered three hits before giving way to Fessia, who pitched to three batters before closing the door.

Baseball notes ... The Triton pitching staff suffered a severe blow this week when grades came out, as both Rick Rupkey (ERA leader) and Daryn Martin were declared academically ineligible. In addition, pitcher Denny Kubinski is injured ... The second victory over CSUSB marked a personal accomplishment of a sort for Yates — it was his 400th career victory as a baseball coach.

Babylon

Continued from page 33 ever dies down, Steve Garvey does have a future in politics. He's already proven he's a player in a league with John Tower and Gary Hart, and he's even mastered

The saddest case is that of Pete Rose, the one with the most to lose and the least perspective on baseball's priority in one's life. In one interview he attempted to make the point that because he was Pete Rose and that the Reds play in a stadium located on Pete

Rose Way, that an investigation of his activities was unfair and unthinkable — that the institution of Pete Rose was somehow beyond the legal restrictions of regular citizens. This friend to touts and bookies can rattle off every scratch single and the date on which he hit it, yet he didn't read the section in baseball's rule book that prohibits gambling and unsavory associations.

Hell, Pete Rose is right. He is the game — and he's facing a year's suspension.

The era of the role model is decidedly over. It's almost 1990, and baseball's returned to a new turn of the century — with a cast of colorful characters like Swinger Boggs, Stevie Two-Face, and Charlie the Hustler.

CORRECTION

In the article entitled "Padres Outfielder John Kruk Tries to Shake Off Bad Season and The FBI" (Guardian, April 3), quotation marks were placed around the words "That is, if the FBI doesn't get in the way" in the last paragraph. These were not the words of Kruk; rather, they were the opinion of the Guardian writer, and the quotation marks should have been omitted. The Guardian regrets this error.

PHIL'S ANALYSIS ... This one's too close to call, so I'm going to go with the obvious choice: Maynard Dimmesdale as a write-in candidate for re-election. I knew he'd be a winner when he claimed that one of his particular goals as president was to "... get with the administration ... and start expressing alternative ideas. Like the football team" (Guardian, April 11, 1988). With the plans already down for the new billion-dollar football complex and the top high school players from all over the state knocking down doors to come here, Dimmesdale has done it all. Perhaps more out of deep respect and reverence than anything else, Phil recommends that you ...

The Promenade in Pacific Beach, with its giant palms and Mediterranean-style architecture, is an attraction in its own right . . . yet it also happens to have a number of fine restaurants, snack bars, and fashion sportswear shops.

It's a great place for dining, shopping or just relaxing and socializing during a beach outing.
