"Justice in Palestine" Week

May 06 - 09 | 6:00 PM

We stand at the forefront of the Palestinian plight. We have a moral responsibility to educate ourselves on the history of an illegal occupation. It is with this intention, that we embark on learning about the current struggle of the Palestinian people. While uncovering these difficult realities, we do not forget that the Palestinian people have rich stories, heritage, and life. They continue to bring all this and more to a land that has been otherwise misrepresented by the media, political leaders, and in our own history books.

SDSU Body Pride Project

We are recruiting participants for our body acceptance program to investigate different approaches to improve body image among adult sexual minority men (i.e., men who identify as gay, bisexual, or sexually attracted to men).

Following a brief phone screener, you will also be asked to complete an initial assessment in the lab to determine eligibility. Eligible participants will then be invited to complete one of two 2-session group-based body image acceptance programs, which have shown to be effective in improving body image. Following the group sessions, you will be asked to
