P/NP Deadline Change To Take Effect Next Fall

Edson will continue to press for Spring Quarter policy implementation

By Sheryl Wolcott
Staff Writer

The Academic Senate's Committee on Educational Policy (CEP) voted last Monday to postpone the implementation of the new deadline for students to register for classes on a Pass/Not Pass (P/NP) basis until Fall Quarter 1991. The new deadline will coincide with the deadline to withdraw from a class without a "W" grade.

The Academic Senate approved the deadline extension by a majority at its Feb. 26 meeting.

Under the new policy, the P/NP grading option deadline will be extended from the second week of the quarter to the fourth week.

According to the CEP, implementation has been postponed because the previous P/NP deadline has already been printed in publications such as the Schedule of Classes.

Associate Registrar Sally Hickok-Broxton confirmed that the deadline extension would not take effect until fall.

"All of the publications currently out carried the information [of a second week deadline], and [CEP] didn't know how to get the information out campus-wide," she explained.

"It was not very efficient administratively," said CEP Chair Richard Madsen. "We didn't think it was an important enough issue to rush it."

Madsen noted that some CEP members supported a Spring Quarter implementation.

Hickok-Broxton also acknowledged that the Registrar's Office would have been able to implement a fourth week P/NP deadline by Spring Quarter.

She added, "It wasn't our decision; it was the CEP's decision."

The new policy was established after Madsen, acting on behalf of the CEP, urged the Academic Senate to extend the deadline.

Madsen felt that moving the deadline back would encourage students to complete a course on a P/NP basis instead of dropping the class if they believed they would receive a poor grade.

Global Warming Might be a Matter of Nylon and N₂O

UCSD chemists find that nylon production may also deplete ozone layer

By Stephanie Simon
Guardian Reporter

Two UCSD professors recently published a study showing that a by-product of nylon production is a major source of atmospheric "laughing gas," a possible danger to the environment.

An anesthetic commonly used by dentists, "laughing gas" is made up of nitrogen and oxygen in the compound nitrous oxide (N₂O). Scientists say that N₂O can cause problems in the atmosphere, including ozone depletion and contribution to the Greenhouse Effect.

"Most N₂O comes from natural biological sources on the Earth, such as algae and bacteria, but lately there has been concern over increasing levels. Manufacturing became a suspect," said William Trogler, co-author of the study.

"The amount of N₂O produced in this industrial process [nylon production] is such that it could be perturbing the amount present in the atmosphere," Trogler said. "And since N₂O is a catalyst for ozone depletion, it seems like some attention should be paid to this. So we published that in Science."

The study that appeared in the Feb. 22 issue of Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, was written by Trogler and a UCSD colleague, Mark Thiemens.

The article has attracted the attention of news media, including CNN, the Wall Street Journal, and the New York Times.

Trogler sees the most important outcome of the publicity surrounding the study as the increased attention to possible industrial sources of N₂O.

Once in the atmosphere, N₂O reacts with oxygen to make nitric oxide (NO), a catalyst for ozone depletion.

The main function of ozone in the stratosphere is to absorb high-energy ultraviolet light. Without the ozone layer, the Earth would be bombarded by increased radiation, a major cause of skin cancer and a threat to plant growth.

The Greenhouse Effect, also known as global warming, is caused by gases in the atmosphere that absorb infrared radiation.

The predicted results of the Greenhouse Effect are the melting of the polar ice caps and the possible failure of plants to adapt to climatic changes.

Evidence of global warming is provided by increased levels of carbon dioxide (CO₂), which also absorbs radiation, in the atmosphere.

Although there is less N₂O in the atmosphere than CO₂, Trogler said that N₂O absorbs infrared radiation more readily than does CO₂. It has been estimated that in the future, N₂O could contribute as much as 10 percent to global warming.

Nitrous oxide from nylon manufacturing is a "previously unrecognized and potentially significant source," Trogler said.

The inspiration for the study had its origin last spring, while Trogler was giving a lecture to his Chemistry 6C class on atmospheric chemistry.

Being an inorganic, rather than atmospheric, chemist, Trogler consulted his colleague, Thiemens, for more information on the subject to share with his class. Thiemens is an atmospheric chemist.

A study published in 1981 by UCSD Professor R.F. Weiss in the Journal of Geophysical Research suggested that the overall concentration of N₂O in the atmosphere was increasing at a rate

MacDonald Appointed Director of Environmental Policy Studies for IGCC

Gordon MacDonald, former vice president and chief scientist of the MITRE Corporation, has been appointed director of Environmental Policy Studies for the University of California's Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (IGCC), headquartered at UCSD.

MacDonald has also been appointed to the faculty of the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies (IR/PS) at UCSD.

"Gordon MacDonald is one of the world's leading authorities on global climate change. He will be responsible for developing and implementing a new program of environmental studies for IGCC, an important component of IGCC's agenda of changing international security concerns in the post-Cold War era," said John Ruggie, director of IGCC and professor at IR/PS.

MacDonald has served Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, and Eisenhower in dealing with environmental, space, and defense issues.

His credentials include his appointment in 1970 by President Nixon to lead the negotiating team on the U.S.—U.S.S.R. environmental agreement signed by both heads of state in 1972.

He is currently serving on the State Department's Advisory Committee on Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs.

He is also continuing his work as senior advisor for the country's national security agencies on acid rain, climate control, and new methods of signal processing.

The Associated Students are soliciting applicants to run for elected offices. The filing deadline is April 1. There is no filing during finals week or during the spring break.

The times for filing are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the A.S. Office on the third floor of the Price Center. Positions available include A.S. president, vice presidents, commissioners, and sophomore, junior, and senior senators for Muir, Revelle, Third, Warren, and Fifth colleges.

Prominent Theologian Hans Küng To Speak at UCSD on March 15

Controversial Catholic theologian Hans Küng will speak on "No Peace Among Nations Without Peace Among the Religions" at 8 p.m. on March 15 in the Price Center ballroom.

His visit is sponsored by the Eugene Burke C.S.P. Lectureship on Religion and Society and highlights the opening of the new Religious Studies Program at UCSD. The lecture is free.

Küng, who teaches at the University of Tübingen in Germany, has faced controversy for his prolific writings on a broad range of topics affecting Christianity. Most prominent among his book titles is On Being a Christian, published in 1976.

In the 1980s his interest turned toward world religions. This is reflected in book titles such as Christianity and the World Religions. Küng's latest book is Reforming the Church Today.

of about 0.2 percent each year. Since N₂O is a stable chemical with a half-life of 150 years, it can remain in the atmosphere for centuries.

Because of this, the new information triggered concern among atmospheric scientists.

In June, Trogler attended a National Science Foundation workshop regarding chemical processes that produce unviable industrial by-products.

At the workshop, a chemist from Monsanto Chemical Company addressed the issue of N₂O.

"Someone from Monsanto was talking about how chemists should find uses for N₂O, because much of it is a by-product in the synthesis of adipic acid, which is a monomer used to make nylon, a polymer used in clothing, carpet fiber, and tire cord — a very large volume polymer," Trogler said.

"I wondered if the amount of N₂O by-product could be contributing to atmospheric conditions. So I came back and talked to [Thiemens], and we looked up adipic acid industrial output. We went in the lab and simulated the industrial reaction, and showed that you get one molecule of N₂O for every molecule of adipic acid, which is then used to make nylon," he continued.

"It was sort of an off-the-wall idea that we both thought was interesting enough to follow-up on," he concluded.

Trogler and Thiemens showed that man-made N₂O is slightly lighter than natural N₂O, so it would be possible to distinguish the source of the chemical in the atmosphere.

They also calculated that nylon manufacturing may be responsible for 10 percent of the increase in atmospheric N₂O.

Some scientists speculate that fertilizers and the burning of biomass, such as trees, might be responsible for part of the remaining 90 percent, but this theory has yet to be proven.

Recently, Trogler said, an article in the magazine Nature claimed that the contribution of biomass burning to atmospheric N₂O is less important than previously thought.

Trogler and Thiemens' study took place over the summer and continued into October.

"The experiments we did actually were relatively simple. It was really mostly piecing together information — sort of serendipity. It's a case where teaching helped research, rather than the other way around," Trogler explained.

"This study is an example of relatively simple chemistry that can have a consequence on the global climate. It was more the fact that, because [N₂O] was a by-product, [it] didn't show up on any of the tables that the atmospheric chemists would have looked for. N₂O isn't a product — it's worthless, really," Trogler said.

"Given the amount of nylon production each year, that corresponds roughly to one and a half billion pounds of N₂O per year emitted by this source," he explained.

"Now, some companies, like Monsanto, [have] established controls for that, even though it's not required, because N₂O is not toxic — that's why it has such a long residence time in the atmosphere. It is also used as a non-toxic propellant for canned whipping cream," Trogler said.

Currently, Trogler is looking at some other ideas that he and Thiemens have on other possible sources of N₂O.

He continues his work on campus, while Thiemens is currently in Europe on a sabbatical research fellowship.

Edson said he has already discussed the option of mailing the extension out with the grades with Registrar Ronald Bowker. According to Edson, Bowker supported the idea.

Edson added that he will try to discuss the issue at today's Academic Senate meeting, but the item is not currently on the agenda.

equivalent to a C- or better in order to receive a "P" grade.

According to Associated Students President John Edson, waiting until Fall Quarter to implement the policy will cause confusion among students and create problems.

He cited the fact that several students contacted their deans this quarter, trying to drop classes because they believed that the policy had already gone into effect.

The information could be distributed to students when the grades are mailed at the beginning of next quarter, Edson explained. He added that the Associated Students would provide additional funds to help advertise the change.

CULTURAL DIVERSITY

Diversity Requirement is Encouraging

The recent decision by Warren College administrators to implement a new cultural diversity requirement in the college general education curriculum is clearly a step in the right direction. Warren College becomes the third college at UCSD to alter its general education requirements in the last year. Both Revelle and Third College implemented new changes in their general education requirements, placing particular emphasis on the study of cultural diversity. Like Revelle College's American Cultures requirement, Warren's new requirement is designed to enhance student awareness and appreciation of cultural diversity in America.

The best part about the creation of these new requirements is the fact that they were initiated by individual colleges within each colleges' unique educational philosophies. It would be wrong to force all undergraduates at UCSD under one blanket cultural studies requirement. Instead, each college is finding its own way to teach its students about other cultures.

Additionally, college faculty must be commended for the way they went about adding these requirements to their curricula. Rather than adding more required courses, the Revelle College faculty substituted American Cultures for one quarter of Revelle's social science requirement. Warren College faculty came up with another, equally appealing solution — courses within a student's major or area of concentration may also be used to fulfill the Cultural Diversity requirement.

Not only is it encouraging to see that UCSD's general education requirements are keeping up with the needs of our multi-cultural society, but it is gratifying that each individual college is being allowed to follow its own philosophy. Perhaps best of all is that undergraduates, already hard pressed to graduate in less than five years, won't be burdened by even more required courses.

UNIVERSITY CENTER BOARD

Student Accountability Above All Else

The recent decision by the University Center Board (UCB) to change the election procedure for its chair to allow graduate students to hold the position is a positive step. The change will allow greater representation for a portion of the student body which has traditionally been brushed to the side. Like their undergraduate counterparts, all graduate students are required to pay a University Center fee. According to UCB Chair Nick Long, the UCB collects almost $300,000 from graduate students, which amounts to approximately 10 percent of the board's $3.3 million annual operating budget. Based on this, Long and others believed it would be in the interest of fairness to create a way in which grad students could hold the chair position. Under the old system, the UCB Chair was elected solely by the undergraduate student body in the campus-wide A.S. elections. Under the new system, the chairman will be elected by the UCB.

The UCB's primary function is to manage the University Center, which includes the Price Center and the Student Center. It is essentially a non-political entity. The recent policy change came under a great deal of fire by the A.S. council, which argued that it was losing its control over the board. The A.S., being an extremely political body, should have no direct control over the UCB. A strong A.S. influence in the UCB will only serve to bring political debate where it is neither required nor welcomed.

However, the idea that the UCB chair will be elected by a board of appointees is problematic. The importance of the UCB's duties, in addition to the sheer enormity of its operating budget, makes it imperative that the board have some accountability to the student body. Direct election of the chairman is the best way to ensure that accountability.

The UCB should look into ways of holding a special election for its chairman which will be open to all students. Such a special election may become necessary when a RIMAC committee chair is created. Both positions should be kept away from A.S. authority, remain as non-political as possible, and — above all — remain directly accountable to the student body.

COMMENTARY

A New Fascism on the Rise

■ The cries from those who support political correctness are a simple cover for the rise of leftist totalitarianism

By Greg Dixon
 Associate Opinion Editor

Americans like to believe that our nation is an example to the world of what it is to be a free people. Freedom was, and is, the essential foundation of all major political movements in modern America — a fundamental truth. All people should be allowed to freely express themselves.

In America, conservatives have a reputation for attempting to apply "community standards" which abridge the rights of offensive groups to speak and print their ideas. These groups have been largely kept at bay by those on the left who defend freedom of expression from its enemies.

Yet, now we see many of these same defenders of liberty raising a challenge of their own to the freedom of speech. They now seek to threaten to curtail speech from the left. Theirs is the threat of the "politically correct."

Political correctness (also known as PC) is the liberals' equivalent to community standards. In essence, PC is an attempt to limit what people can say and how they can say it.

Advocates of PC claim to have the highest of goals, but they seek to achieve these goals through a liberal version of totalitarianism. Reminiscent of Orwellian Newspeak, PC would force the use of neutral wordings in all documents. Not just gender or racially neutral words, but words neutral in totality.

The goal of this is to eradicate what proponents of PC claim is a rule of bourgeois white males. They claim that language reinforces oppressive governance. By using words such as "manhole cover," we evil, white males seek to oppress others into some form of subservience. The word should be "personhole cover," and then everyone could live in harmony.

While this is only one example, it is typical of the absurdity of PC. There is absolutely nothing to support the claim that using words such as manhole cover, makes women (or anyone else, for that matter) feel oppressed. The claim of subliminal oppression has no concrete support.

Unfortunately, proponents of PC are a very vocal minority. Their efforts to reform our language into some new, politically correct form of Newspeak are nothing short of a fascism from the left. While the goals may be noble, the means are dangerous.

Yet many American colleges and universities have taken steps to implement this liberal Newspeak. Some schools (UCSD included) have in-place "hate speech" policies designed to prevent people from using "unacceptable" language. Yet, the definitions of "unacceptable" are various and unclear.

On Feb. 11, 1991, a Brown University student was expelled for using the word "nigger" while he was drunk, and then calling a person a "faggot" when he told him to shut up. For two words, this student was ejected from his university, all in the name of societal fairness. While there is no defense for the actions of the student, expulsion with censure is excessive punishment.

The London Economist listed a number of politically correct subjects and words. These included, "Malcolm X," "multi-cultural" curricula, and "diversity in all things." Among non-politically correct subjects were, "buying petrol from Exxon, dead white European male thinkers, fraternities, and sororities."

While the goals of PC are admirable, they prevent the expression of ideas which do not fit a particular group's definition of "acceptable."

PC is a concept which is inimical to freedom. It seeks to limit individual expression and free speech in the same manner as Jesse Helms, only in the name of an oppressed minority instead of the "moral majority."

The major problem with PC is that it is entirely dependent on the goals of those who implement it. If Jesse Helms could administer a PC regulation, everyone from Afro-centrist groups to the Democratic party would probably find it tough to be politically correct. On the other hand, Jesse Jackson would probably limit everyone from the Young Republicans to the business lobby.

Even with these problems, there are more to follow. There are many unanswered questions about PC. Who decides its limits? Do we include inconsiderate jokes? Maybe even inappropriately directed laughter?

If you think it will never go that far, it already has. The University of Connecticut already lists both of those as actions forbidden to students, on or off campus, and being guilty of either is an act punishable by expulsion from the university with censure.

Compulsory PC must be eliminated from those places where it exists and prevented from taking root in places where it has not yet reached. It is a fine concept for those who wish to use it voluntarily. To make it compulsory, however, reeks of totalitarianism.

Seeking a Purpose in Learning

By Sangeeta Mehta
 Associate Features Editor

I dropped by my academic advisor a few weeks ago intending to get a petition form. The advisor gave it to me — along with half a dozen flyers on career planning. "Maybe these will help you, dear," she said.

Suddenly, similar conversations came flooding back. "You're an adult now..." "I'm surprised you aren't worried yet..." "You really ought to start thinking..."

I considered the advice — that I should start planning for my future. After all, I'm in my third year of college, and I don't yet have a career goal in mind.

But lately, instead of trying to figure out a response to "What are you going to be?" I'm working on an answer to another:

What's the hurry?

As long as I can remember, people have been questioning my future plans. Early in grade school, one of my teachers asked the class about our potential professions. The only problem was that none of us really knew what the word "profession" meant.

Later on, I made my decision — I was going to be a tap dancing instructor. Not that I had any great love for tap dancing. I wasn't even very good. But they asked, so I was prepared.

Luckily, I never pursued that goal. Ten years later, I'm realizing that it was a bit narrow-minded to even have one at that time.

According to most people, I should, however, have an alternative plan now. I'm not saying that I never think about it. It's just that, right now, I figure I will use my undergraduate education for what it should be used for — learning.

After all, there are courses in economics, and European Jewry. There are seminars on the limitations to human performance, and the archaeology of the Maya.

The more I think about it, the more I realize that I'll never really have another opportunity to hear about such topics. Maybe none of this will be useful for whatever career I enter.

But I, like most people, already know a lot of the "practical" things about life — I know to share everything, and to play fair.

I know to learn some and think some, and draw and sing and dance and play and work some. Like Robert Fulghum, I learned all that in kindergarten. After I finish a degree or two, I know that I'll have to land a real job. But no matter what I do, my college education will have already made me "rich."

A while back, I read an article that compared college to a buffet table with good food. Everything is laid out and available to you, the columnist said. You can take what you want. All you need is an appetite.

College — a buffet? Maybe that explains why I'm always so hungry.

TG Beer Ban Uproar Shows Larger Problem

■ A.S. beer money can be better spent and students can do without

By Greg Knauss
 Staff Writer

In Brave New World, Aldous Huxley's novel about a future dystopia, the government kept its citizens sedate and easily controlled by the free public distribution of a tranquilizer called soma.

At UCSD, the government kept its citizens sedate and easily controlled by the free public distribution of a tranquilizer called beer. Now that that distribution has ended, those citizens are acting up.

Often called a "UCSD tradition," the serving of free beer at the bi-monthly TG stretches back to early in the school's history. But on Jan. 17 of this year, that practice became illegal.

The California Department of Alcohol Beverage Control (ABC), responding to a petition by Police Chief John Anderson, noted that serving alcohol on campus, where non-students could receive it, was a violation of state law. The Associated Students thus suspended the practice, beginning with the Feb. 1 TG.

As a student over 21 years old I think, perhaps surprisingly, that the removal of free beer from TGs is a good thing.

While the legality of UCSD's open bar is probably what will keep the question open, it actually has very little to do with the issues that should be discussed.

Free beer should not be offered at TGs because it is not the place of an institution of learning to buy alcohol for its off-age students — nor is it the place of the rest of the student body to pay for it.

The outcry that resulted when the ABC outlawed beer at the TGs demonstrates the depth of the first problem. People openly declared free beer a tradition and prophetically stated that the TGs would die without the presence of booze.

But if this is the case — and given the relaxation on Friday afternoons, to hear music, and to socialize. None of these activities inherently involve alcohol.

The fact that students associate "TG" with "free beer" demonstrates how far the event has strayed from its original intention, both in reality and in student perception.

Additionally, the beer budget for the TGs consumes an astonishing amount of student activity money, hugely disproportionate to the number of students it serves. Even if every student over 21 years of age attended the TGs — something that has never happened and never will — the cost cannot be justified in terms of dollars spent per student served.

One of the reasons that UCSD has so few on-campus events is because a good portion of the money allocated for such events is swallowed up by the TG beer budget.

This, despite the fact that only a small — even insignificant — portion of the student body can enjoy the service. No other UC campus offers bi-monthly booze to its students.

A solution, of course, is to charge for the beer served. Given the attendance at the beer-less TGs, UCSD students apparently need alcohol to lure them to school events.

By charging a dime a cup, much cheaper than any off-campus source, the school could not only remove itself from the slightly surreal role of beer-buyer for its students, but replenish the activities budget and increase TG attendance as well.

Of course, the sale of alcohol requires an alcohol license, something that the A.S., as a student organization, cannot obtain. That's the reason beer was banned in the first place.

But there are many ways around this restriction, among them farming the event out to an off-campus, student-controlled company.

Bring beer back to the TGs, but bring common sense back as well. The university owes its students many things, but free booze is not one of them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Gulf War Fought the Wrong Enemy

Editor:

I fail to see why we as a nation are so proud of the slaughter in the Gulf. Why did we gleefully applaud the shocking incessant bombing of Iraqi civilians for over a month and the gratuitous slaughter of a defeated and fleeing army when a cease fire was clearly in order.

How pathetic that we are so sick and insecure a nation that in order to feel good about ourselves we were willing to send 500,000 of our young people to fight and possibly die in a senseless war 8,000 miles from our shores.

As in Grenada, Libya, and Panama, this newly demonized enemy was no match for our massive military might. So much for our "bravery."

We were also happy to sacrifice, without a moment's hesitation, hundreds and thousands of "their" lives to prove that we are no longer "wimps." We have finally found something we can do well. Kill.

According to Tony Coelho, a former member of the House of Representatives, this war was just what we needed to give us a sense of achievement, since "we've been in such a downer for so long, it looked like we couldn't get anything done in the world." And how about the Veterans of Foreign Wars commander who boasted: "Once people see how well things like this can turn out, I think people will be willing to do more of them."

Our bombing of Iraqi cities and the destruction of their water supplies has created a health crisis of shocking proportions.

According to UNICEF, millions of lives, most of them children's, will be lost to cholera and malnutrition unless water supplies, food stocks, and medical services are restored immediately. Bombing civilians is a war crime. What will our government do to save these innocent victims of our "precision" warfare?

The irony, of course, is that we in the U.S. will also become victims of our own madness. The brutalization of our own people should give us pause. An army doctor, recently quoted in the press, had learned to hate and dehumanize Saddam Hussein to such an extent, that he wanted to do "open heart surgery on Hussein without anesthesia."

The chickens will come home to roost. One billion dollars a day on deployment in the Persian Gulf — not counting the cost of the weapons — is money stolen from urgent domestic needs.

Our economy is in a crisis with no resources for health care, education, housing, jobs, etc. Our cities are crumbling. The real needs of our people are not being met. We don't need to look for outside enemies to defeat.

The real enemy is injustice, hunger, ignorance, poverty, and despair. Militarism is not the answer, it is the problem.

Some Students Question Necessity and Motivation Of 'Cabbage' Illustration

Editor:

We are appalled and disgusted by the overt racist illustration depicting three "Mexican" men brandishing vegetables. ("The Cabbage Revolution," Feb. 25).

Was that illustration really necessary? The illustration depicted three of the most common stereotypes of Chicanos and Mexicanos, the "Frito Bandito," the "Farmworker," and the "Hoodlum."

The Chicano-Mexicano community has worked hard at getting rid of negative images in the media. They have also fought a long battle against Frito-Lay and its "Frito Bandito" image. I would like to know where the illustrator got his ideas of what Mexicanos look like. When was the last time you saw a Mexican or conversed with one?

We, Mexicanos, are not all peons, farmworkers, or hoodlums. We don't all wear sombreros, sarapes, or guaraches. We, like the rest of society, are in every profession, and we come in different colors, shapes, and sizes.

We realize that you have the right to print and say whatever you want, that's why you publish such stupidity like this commentary at the expense of the Chicano and Mexicano community.

But know that we will not let you get away with it. Be more responsible with your portrayal of Chicanos and Mexicanos.

A word of advice to the drunken weekend activist who wrote the commentary: If you are really concerned about the harassment and abuse of Mexicanos at the border, you can take a stand against the racist Republican organization "Light Up the Border Movement," or against all the atrocities that occur at the border every day.

Sober up and smell the shit that is happening around you and at UCSD.

Hello, boys and girls. Can you say LAPD? That seems to stand for Let's Attack and Pummel Darkies. How come we don't have more black cops in black neighborhoods?

BLACK & WHITE CARTOONS OF COLOR

Papa, what statue is that a picture of?

Well, son, it is a statue to welcome immigrants to America. It inspired a poet names Emma Lazarus to write, "...give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses, yearning to be free, the wretched refuse of your teeming shores. Send the homeless, tempest-tossed to me, I lift my lamp beside the golden door."

Hold it! I beg to differ. America welcomes immigrants... so long as they're from Europe, and not south of the border. The border gestapo, freeway checkpoints, and shit for pay is the welcoming committee for them.

Disabled Students Hit the Slopes

By Julie Puzon
Senior Staff Writer

I picked up a handful of snow and packed it together as I looked down the powdery-white mountain below. Rising above Big Bear Lake were other snow-capped mountains, and below were the outlines of small houses. I took in a deep breath as I surveyed the scene.

"Ready kiddo?" one of my ski instructors asked.

"Yep," I responded, eager yet apprehensive.

And with a push I was off. I knew that somewhere down below all this splendor, my wheelchair waited patiently. But that didn't matter. For the first time in my life I was skiing.

Like some of the others in the Disabled Student Union (DSU) who went on the ski retreat last weekend, I didn't know what to expect as I went down the slope. Of the nine members who attended, five of us had never been skiing before. One of these first-timers was Russ Allen, Third College junior.

"All of us were going up there with certain disabilities and I was scared for everybody and myself because... [of] the possibility of falling down and breaking bones... especially... [since] both my legs are bad," he said.

Before he went skiing, Allen's only image of the sport was from sports programs.

"My image of the skier is 'The Wide World of Sports,' where you see this guy... flopping around after he took a fall. That's always been my image of what happens to you when you ski. Now I feel like I've caught the bug. I want to go again," Allen said.

Due to an automobile accident, Allen lost the use of his left hand, and the only adaptation he required was a special glove to help him grip the ski poles.

Skiing, according to Director of the California Handicapped Ski School at Bear Mountain Keile Malkewitz, is one of the most adaptable sports.

"Gravity pulls everyone downhill at the same rate," Malkewitz said. All they need are the proper aids, she added.

For some, adaptation for skiing wasn't a matter of equipment, but of the staff members of the ski school. Revelle freshman Eric Rothhaar has a visual impairment, and was therefore aided by a guide.

"Once on the slopes, my guide tried to instruct me. I had already had some experience, so he basically guided me down the mountain... and I skied," he said.

Other members, such as Traci Powell, a Warren junior, required more elaborate equipment to ski. With weakened muscles from Freidrich's Ataxia, a degenerative neurological disease, Powell used what is called a sit-ski.

"It's kind of like a big tube," she said. The sled-like device has her sitting down with her legs stretched and completely covered. Under the covers were several pads and straps to hold her in place.

"I felt really closed up... It felt like half of me couldn't move. I was only using my arms. [I] felt kind of locked in," Powell said.

Although she was securely fastened to the sit-ski, she still felt free as she glided down the slopes.

"I felt really exuberated, enthusiastic, alive. I was skiing. I felt like I was on top of the world," Powell said.

This enthusiasm was noticed by the instructors of the ski school. Malkewitz commented on the DSU's attitude.

"The group was really supportive of each other... They had a great time and so did I," she said.

Having a good time was a large part of the DSU retreat, but Powell, the organizer of the retreat, explained other reasons for the trip.

"This retreat was important for the cohesiveness of our organization. [Big Bear provided] a nice atmosphere for a retreat... I had been skiing for the first time earlier this quarter, and it was such a great experience that I thought everyone [in the DSU] should do it," she said.

"It was time for all the members [of the DSU] — the old members and the new members — to get to know one another better and to discuss what goals and objectives they would like to set for the DSU in the coming year," said Robbie Gimblett, DSU facilitator and outreach assistant for UCSD's Disabled Student Services.

"The retreat presented a number of unexpected challenges [for the DSU]," Gimblett said. "And because they were unexpected, it called for a good deal of flexibility on the part of each member and myself as their advisor... it opened up the opportunity to learn new things about the environment and about each other on the slopes."

To Allen, the DSU retreat and skiing experience was an eye-opening adventure.

"I didn't realize they had such a thing like sit-skis... It created an awareness within our group," he said.

DANCE

of the crowd came in before the cover charge began.

"We're not even in this to make money," Choi said. As long as we break even, I'll be happy."

"Two bucks is not that much compared to the $10 to $15 cover charges at most of the nightclubs in Los Angeles," Kim said.

According to Choi, "We're kind of caught in a Catch-22 doing things on campus. We're trying to appeal to an age 18 and above audience, and a 21 and over audience. When we do an 18 and above audience, we lose a lot of money — in terms of making our money back at the bars because they're too young to drink. If we go for the 21 and over, a crowd that can hit the bars, then we'll lose 90 percent of this campus because the majority of undergraduates here aren't 21."

"We have to do something about it. There's a hook somewhere and we just haven't found that hook yet but we're working on it and it should be coming along pretty soon," he said.

Although Eargasm's stint at the pizza pub did not bring in loads of cash, the dance brought together many students from different backgrounds.

Getting the different groups on campus together is part of Eargasm's plan of spreading the underground nightclub scene to UCSD.

"When I was a freshman, I was kind of disappointed that UCSD didn't have that kind of infrastructure for this type of an all-campus event. As far as I can say, and not to sound racist, the TGs are a mono-ethnic event. The TGs are the only prime musical social event at UCSD that involves everybody — it's not a college limited event. I want to do something that would bring an alternative atmosphere to UCSD," Kim said.

"If you look at it, I'm killing four birds with one stone," he continued. "I'm trying to provide an all-campus event for UCSD, and get our school up to date on the music scene. I want to provide an area where every racial group on campus can come together and not feel excluded because dance music is not white, black, or hispanic music. I'm also providing a nightclub atmosphere on-campus so people won't have to drive down to TJ."

"There's a little bit in it for me because I want to the experience of starting my own business, but mainly I want to provide a service that I wish existed when I was a freshman."

Clad in a nightclub outfit of baggy, denim overalls with a loose white shirt, Revelle student Gonz Garay commented on the dance while taking a break from the infectious music.

"It's really positive. The music is good, and everybody's nice. I don't understand why they don't do it more often. At Columbia and other East Coast campuses, there's always somewhere to go every night," he said.

At least for one night, UCSD's hard-core fans of House and hip-hop music had a chance to meet people with the same interests.

"I love it — the beat of the music. It's in me," Revelle student Katherine Bates said.

According to Kim, "People who like to dance don't really drink that much. Everyone that I know who's dance-oriented only drinks water. It's a pretty clean trend because you can't dance that well when you're on something."

With the current rise of the House music and hip-hop dance scene, it's hard to ignore the D-word — disco.

"Disco used to be a word shunned by everybody," Choi said. "I'm with it. It's a neat thing and it's coming back. Except now it's gotten a lot more complicated bass beats on the background, and there's a lot of talent out there in disco records. It's about time in the '90s to [get] back into the disco scene."

"Some people don't really care for it because, maybe, when they were young they weren't into it in the first place. I was really into disco when I was young. I used to listen to Sean Cassidy, the Bee Gees, everything on RS Soul Labels," Choi recalled. "To me, disco never died. Now it's making more of a comeback. I like disco but I never said anything when people mentioned disco."

But in general, House music and hip-hop are just as unmentionable as disco at UCSD. Kim noted that a lot of people "are in the closet as rap music fans. There's a stigma attached to the whole music where they feel like, 'Oh, I'm listening to this type of music. I should be listening to 91X.' That's just one of the stereotypes that have to be overcome."

Looking back at the event the next day, Dave stated that UCSD needs to have something like this more often.

"Considering our thing was on a Wednesday night, I think it was pretty receptive. I mean, this is like our ninth week of school and people are studying. If it was on a Friday night in the fourth week of [the quarter], I think there would have been a humongous turnout. We probably had 200 people who came in and out and some of the people had to go out and study," Dave said.

What's getting a lot of talk is the group's quirky name: Eargasm. Kim explained that "Steve came up with it. To a degree it's what we're striving for — that sensory explosion."

"With me, when I hear a really good song it's like 'Fuck, this is really hip.' Like 'I Don't Know Anybody Else' by Black Box and 'Another Sleepless Night' by Shawn Christopher — those two songs are incredible. It puts me in a kind of euphoric state and when I'm dancing to it, it's more of a rush. It is like an orgasm or an eargasm. What's so cool is that it's so healthy for you: just you, the music, and the dance floor," Kim added.

International Film Series a Hidden Treasure at UCSD

◆ Some of the best international films are presented each year as part of the series, and should be taken advantage of

By Amy Knoke
Staff Writer

So you think that international travel is expensive? Well, think again, because for a limited time, you can visit 10 foreign countries for a mere $25. Hold on, though, before you start dropping classes and looking for a kennel for the dog — relax a bit, because you won't need a travel agency for this trip.

In fact, the only requirements are that you keep your Tuesday nights open and that you make it to the Mandeville Auditorium before the other 700 people waiting in line to attend the Sixth Annual International Style Foreign Film Festival.

Of course, the series pass, which costs $25, doesn't come close to getting your body out of the U.S., but it will enable your mind to escape into the culture, people, and languages of several countries, including Turkey, China, India, and Austria. However, if you're thinking that this is a National Geographic series or somebody's snapshots from last summer's vacation, go another 180 degrees and there you'll find the Style Series.

Ruth Baily, artistic director for the series, is adamant about these films being the best that a country will produce — and that unfortunately, they may be seen in only a select group of theaters, destined to end up in the backs of mail-order catalogs.

Baily doesn't spend much time going through U.S. distributors when putting the series together. The truth is that Baily and the Style Series coordinator, Corey Eubanks, are constantly following up on calls from all over the world, as they attempt to track down films they hope the audience will appreciate.

"It's like playing detective a lot of the time," Baily said. "You start with a title and you know what country it came from, and frequently you have no idea who's got it."

One trick that Baily said worked magnificently was the sending of a promotional packet to every country's consulate that she could find. This sort of communication benefits both the quality of the UCSD series and the foreign countries' film industry.

According to Baily, since the foreign consulate will want to promote its film industry, it will send over the best film that has been produced in the country. Thus, audiences in the U.S. will spread the word of noteworthy foreign films and increase the demand of their production.

Although some consulates' responses were enthusiastic, Baily often heard nothing from others, such as Ireland, Africa, and Latin America and surrounding regions that she said are "grossly underrepresented in the international scene, but it's not because they don't have the films."

While focusing almost entirely on obtaining superb films, Baily and Eubanks would also like to see the Style Series take on a few more dimensions. One dimension that Baily feels would directly benefit the UCSD students would be to have more professionals visit the campus.

She believes that a perfect scenario of this idea, would be to have two well-established and two up-and-coming Japanese film directors at UCSD for a week of seminars and workshops.

"Students don't get enough access to working professionals in this country, let alone in other countries," Baily said. Baily would also like to see the film series integrated into classrooms. Although she has received considerable assistance from some departments, Baily feels that "this series is more than just providing a useful service in an era where the arts are not getting a lot of support."

One aspect that Eubanks and Baily definitely do not want the Style Series to take on is that of presenting awards. "I don't think we'll ever be in the position to [give film awards]," Baily said, "because we want to be able to remain selective and to be able to choose things that we are all confident are really worth showing."

Turned off by the huge commercial film festivals of Los Angeles and New York, where everything from the very good to the very poor gets shown, Baily would rather keep this series smaller. "Once it becomes real big and commercial," Baily said, "then we've lost our freedom to pick and choose."

The ability of the staff to hold out for the very best will hopefully affect San Diego as a whole and not just the individuals who attend the films.

Eubanks, who is aware that San Diego is not known for its interest in foreign film and is also more aware that U.S. distributors are not as open to working with San Diego as they are with Los Angeles, would like to see a growth in the series' reputation.

Although the series is doing exceptionally well in attendance, Eubanks would also like to see the film series become more respected within the film festival circuit. The series may be well on its way to doing just that. With exceptional features such as Taiwanese director Hou Hsiao-Hsien's acclaimed "City of Sadness," Austria's "Requiem for Dominic" by director Robert Dornheim (a Golden Globe Nominee for Best Foreign Film), and France's "La Femme Nikita," a story of a woman whose second chance at life is more violent and disturbing than the one she was forced to give up.

The Sixth Annual International Style Foreign Film Festival could possibly be one of the finest sources of entertainment found in San Diego County. All films are professional ventures. All have been released within the last three years, some have won awards and all are critically acclaimed... and admission is only four dollars.

Just think, for four dollars you could be fortunate enough to experience one of the international film community's best productions. But unfortunately, that one night may be the only chance to see it.

"THE MODERN HEART (and housing)": Corruption in the Post-Reagan Years

By Michael Schwartz
Senior Staff Writer

During the now infamous Reagan years, federal funding for government housing programs decreased by 80 percent. A whole new population of people disenfranchised from society now roam the streets. More and more people are without a home, a necessity that most of us take for granted.

"If I knew the solution to the problem, I would be a social worker," graduate playwright Kelly Easton mused. Rather than attempt such a massive task, Easton presents the problem for the public's perusal in her new play, "THE MODERN HEART (and housing)," playing this week in the Warren Theatre.

"I'm interested in how the institution works on the individual. The bureaucracy is so impossible and frustrating, especially the government," remarked Easton.

The production is directed by graduate student James Peck, director of the recent staging of "The Castle." This marks the second collaboration between Easton and Peck, who teamed up on last year's "Ordinary Objects."

"The play shows a great deal of empathy for people on the street, and there's a clear condemnation of government administration. There's also empathy for the people who work in the office. Although they do immoral things, they're also victimized," Peck commented.

The action of the play centers around Jeanine, a widow with six children. She is continuously unable to find a place where she belongs. Linda, another character, is a quirky, offbeat woman who has run up all her credit cards and is working in the housing office to pay them off. She is a free spirit getting crushed and absorbed by the system. The succinctly named Vile is the son of a powerful politician, in charge of the office. Although corrupt, he is a wildly creative person who doesn't belong in a housing office. These characters intertwine with others, and among themselves, in a web of unfulfilled relationships and hopes.

Not just concerned with the logistics of government housing, the play looks at the corruption of all individuals in today's society.

"The machine we live in corrupts our hearts and makes it very difficult for us to have any connection with someone else. The play is very much about longing and loneliness," Peck said.

The Peculiar World of Mummenschanz Mime/Mask

By Christina Huizar
Associate A&E Editor

Plastic trashbags, vacuum tubes, and enormous potatoes move noisily across the stage. There are no visible arms or legs, or any other body parts to suggest that human beings are maneuvering the objects. Welcome to the world of Mummenschanz.

Mummenschanz is a three-member mime/mask troupe that has been delighting the crowds of adults and children for the past 20 years. Thomas Prattki, actor and mime of Mummenschanz spoke of the group's peculiar angle in mime. "Normally if we are talking of mime we have in mind this classical picture of a mime with the white face, Marcel Marceau. What Mummenschanz is doing is completely different. We are going more in the direction of mask play, dance and puppetry."

Mummenschanz does not use music or any other spoken dialogue. They don't need to. Mummenschanz relies on the noises of their costumes and masks, for example, plastic bags chafing upon one another, and the unspoken dialogue they create between themselves and the audience. "What we have is body music. There is a certain music in the costumes and their sound. We also try and get in contact with the audience. We use everyday materials, toilet paper, plastic, foam, or whatever. The idea is to give all these everyday materials a certain value. We are living in a society where we throw so many things away. I know I do. So to pick up all these materials, to work with them, and to give them human feeling, to try and make them alive on stage is what we do," says Prattki.

Mummenschanz comes from the word "mumen" meaning game or play and "shanz" meaning chance. The mime/mask troupe was created by Andres Bossard, Bernie Schurch, and Floriana Frassetto, who are all from Switzerland, over 20 years ago. Since then Mummenschanz has celebrated a Broadway success and passed their masks through eight casts. The current cast is in its third year of a world tour. The cast of six include people from five different countries. They insist communication isn't difficult between all the different languages and have become a very tightly knit family.

At the Spreckles Theatre, Mummenschanz will perform "The Best of Mummenschanz," vignettes from the two original programs that have become classics of the Mummenschanz oddness. Prattki explains, "What is most important is that this is a show not just for adults or not just for children but for both of them. What we really try is to give everybody a chance to go one more time into their childhood."

important games on the schedule.

"Any time you beat a Division III team that's ranked in the top 10 nationally, you're in good shape," he said.

Flanagan (1-2), who went the distance for the first time this year, consistently quieted any major threats posed by Methodist.

"I thought he pitched especially well in the ninth inning," Yates said. "Ryan didn't mess around. He came right at them and threw a lot of strikes. His control was great for the whole game."

Princeton and North Carolina State.

• Almost-guaranteed-to-flop-and-disappoint: North Carolina, Syracuse, and Arizona.

• Who-would've-thought-at-the-beginning-of-the-year-that-they-would-be-seeded-eighth: Georgetown.

• Sacrificial Lamb: Montana. Joe's namesake plays-UNLV in the first round. Good night...

• Biggest Question Mark: LSU. If Shaquille O'Neal plays, the Tigers could go all the way. If he doesn't, they lose to Connecticut in the first round.

• Most outrageous statistic: Seven Big East teams made the tournament. And this after last year's outstanding performance...

• Elsewhere, Jim Palmer is making a comeback. So is Goose Gossage. For that matter, so are Matt Keough and Steve Howe. Just so long as Erik Estrada doesn't make a comeback. "ChiPs II: Paunch and John Return" would be too much.

• Why do people listen to Jack Clark? He alienated San Francisco. He ticked off St. Louis. He pissed off New York. And now he's crucifying San Diego, specifically Tony Gwynn. Clark has the credibility of Spiro Agnew and the mind of Ronald Reagan. The man who, one year ago, said that he was ecstatic to get out of the American League, is now playing in Boston. They don't get more American than Beantown. Remember the 13 colonies? Why? Why? Why ask why? Sorry.

• The Houston Astros? Yikes.

Inaba, behind what she called "smart play," blistered Patty Yoo 6-0, 6-1. Nicholas, meanwhile, dispatched Christie Cannon 6-2, 6-4 behind a barrage of steady ground strokes.

Friday afternoon also witnessed the return of freshman Nancine Hayden to the Tritons' rotation.

Recovering from both a back injury and an ulcer, Hayden, playing in the number six spot, relied on a dominating serve to knock off Michele Velli 6-3, 6-3.

The only loss of the afternoon for UCSD came in the number three singles spot, where Monica Davis blasted Janet Whalen 6-1, 6-2.

After the match, LaPlante noted that Davis appeared to be the 49ers best player, despite playing in the number three spot.

"I'm not sure who my number one player is so I rotate my top three players every match," said Long Beach State Head Coach Michelle Archuleta.

UCSD quickly dismissed the 49ers in doubles as well. Inaba and Whalen whipped Yoo and Jennifer Saulsbury 6-1, 6-3 at number one doubles.

At number two doubles, Amanda Lynch and Hayden dumped Davis and Velli 6-0, 6-2.

Catherine Yim and Nicole House had the most difficult time of the Tritons' doubles teams, going to three sets to beat Cannon and Kathy Loyd 6-7, 6-3, 6-0 at number three doubles.

"I think overall we played very well, and while this is not really significant for the playoffs, I think we really needed this win," LaPlante said.

meters in 12.04 seconds and then blasted through the 200 meters in 25.24, almost two seconds in front of teammate and second-place finisher Michelle Milledge.
Washington and Milledge also teamed up as part of the 4x100 relay team which tore up the track in a national-meet qualifying time of 48.49 seconds.
Washington, who has already qualified for the NCAA championships, remains cautious about looking too far ahead.

"I just want to make nationals and do well in them. Otherwise, I just want to run my best and take one meet at a time," she said.
Another force for the women was Shannon Quigley, a double winner in the shot put and the discus.
The discus belonged to the Tritons as they claimed the top three places.
Quigley's toss of 163'2" was good enough for first as well as a new school record.

Other first-place finishers included Denise McFayden, Diane Fritz, Vicki Dunckley, Bobbie Octavo, and Susan Christy.
On the men's side, Scott Sargeant led the way as a triple winner in the hammer, shot put, and discus.
"I'm really happy with my throws today, but it's still early in the season so I'm still looking at them with a lot of improvement in mind," Sargeant said.
Also for UCSD, Mark Yuen won the 1500 with a time of 4:01.22.
Gus Hsu finished third in the 200 at 23.08 and tied for second place in the 100 with teammate J.J. Cisneros in a time of 11.42 seconds.
In every field event, with the exception of the long and triple jumps, the men won or placed second.
"I was real pleased today," Head Coach Mark Stanforth said. "Our problem now is that we have a few people hurt. If we could get those people healthy, and keep the balance we had today, we'll be competitive in this league."

M. HOOP

Despite the disastrous start, the Tritons did manage to mount something of a comeback, slowly chipping away at the Cardinals lead and narrowing the margin to 11 at the half.
The Tritons sliced the lead to eight early in the second half, but then the roof caved in on their season. A string of fouls, including a technical on McNeill, and missed opportunities allowed Otterbein to extend its lead to as much as 16 before settling into the 13-point win.
Tim Rapp, despite being listed as questionable before the game, led UCSD with 37 points and six rebounds and was named to the All-Tournament team.
"He did a super job," Marshall said. "He worked his tail off all week to get ready for this game."
Rick Batt added 21 points and five rebounds, and Chris Moore came off the bench with 10 points and six rebounds.
"We got great play inside from Rick," Marshall said. "He played excellent post defense."

Marshall said that despite the early blows, the Tritons managed to execute their game plan.
"We tore them apart inside," he said. "We wanted to make sure that when we got the ball, we were pounding it inside."
Despite an abundance of inside shots, the Tritons shot just 45 percent from the field. Otterbein, the nation's leader in field-goal percentage, shot 56 percent from the floor.
While UCSD pulled down 32 rebounds on the night, Marshall admitted that the Tritons did have some problems grabbing long rebounds, which gave Otterbein second and third shot opportunities. The Tritons' problems extended to the free throw line, where they shot a mere 58 percent.
"If we make those free throws, [we're] right back in the game," Marshall said.
Still, he had nothing but praise for the way his team performed.
"They showed incredible poise and character," Marshall said. "It was just not our night. It was [Otterbein's]."

March 5, 1991
AN OPEN LETTER ON ACADEMIC FREEDOM AT UCSD
TO: Marjorie C. Caserio
Vice Chancellor-Academic Affairs

On January 28, a memo from your office and signed by Academic Chair Douglas Smith regarding class cancellations and classroom discussions in response to the Middle East War was sent to department chairs, ORU directors, and program coordinators. The memo contained the following statement:
"The circumstances of war in the Middle East, while deeply disturbing, do not give individual faculty or teaching assistants authority to cancel classes or to change the subject matter of courses at will. That authority rests with the Chancellor."
It has been brought to the Union's attention that many of our members find this statement to be implicitly coercive and an attack on academic freedom. The Union also believes it to be a misinterpretation of the APM and PPM sections cited to substantiate your policy statement.

APM 015 Professional Rights of Faculty
1. free inquiry, and exchange of ideas;
2. the right to present controversial material relevant to a course of instruction;
3. enjoyment of constitutionally protected freedom of expression;

PPM 100-7 Responsibilities of Faculty Members
The instructor in a course is responsible:
1. For conducting the course in conformity with the format and content of the course description as approved by the Senate but with freedom within appropriate limits to select and present the material in the way he deems best.

We encourage educators at UCSD to make the subject of the Middle East War and its ongoing repercussions relevant to curricula. To preclude the possibility of allowing students to discuss the relationship between subjects they study and the world they live in goes against the very nature of the educational enterprise. We would be remiss in our duties as educators if we allowed this to happen, and the integrity of the institution as a whole would be negatively affected.
The current environment of uncritical support for the war is dependent on the U.S. government and media limiting the public's access to information. An attempt by the University administration to extend the informational vacuum to our academic community further limits students' views of the crisis. In keeping with the principles of higher education, it is now crucial to provide students the opportunity to discuss the Gulf War and its aftermath openly so that they may achieve a broader understanding.
We also encourage the UCSD Academic Senate to follow the lead of other UC Academic Senates by passing a resolution to support the discussion of the war in classrooms by making the war relevant to ongoing curricula.

SPORTS NOTES

Volleyball Downs Anteaters in Three

The UCSD men's volleyball team came off age Saturday night by upsetting UC Irvine in straight games 17-15, 15-10, 15-11.
"All the pieces came together," Head Coach "Digger" Graybill said.
"Every game we were behind, but we persevered," he added, referring to the numerous deficits UCSD had to overcome.
UCI, coming off its own upset of CSU Northridge, appeared to take UCSD lightly.
Lamson Lam and Gerry Goldstein led the Tritons in kills, with 17 and 16 respectively, but Graybill saved his most lavish attack for the Tritons' game in the middle.
"Our middle attack was just about unstoppable," Graybill said, citing freshman Bruce Williams' phenomenal hitting percentage. Graybill also noted the play of Brent Couture and Lawrence Werner.
The key in the crucial third game was the setting of John Lee. The beneficiary of some good passing, Lee was able to create numerous scoring opportunities. UCSD had four players in double figures in kills on the night.

The victory over Irvine, along with Friday night's 15-8, 15-3, 17-15 win over La Verne, secured UCSD (7-8 overall, 6-2 in conference) a spot in the nation's top 20.
— Joel Kurzman

MEN'S LACROSSE

The UCSD men's lacrosse team is reeling after losing its last two conference games, both on the road. After falling to Arizona two weeks ago, the Tritons (5-5, 2-2 in conference) were trounced by Whittier on Wednesday 28-10.
Whittier's Brian Pollack led the Poets with eight goals in the lopsided win. Sven Haynie and Jake Azevedo paced the Tritons with three goals apiece.
"No comment," said several team members who wished to remain anonymous. One added that the Tritons were looking forward to finding themselves over the spring break.
— Doug Shaddle

WOMEN'S LACROSSE

The UCSD women's lacrosse team traveled to Claremont to defeat the Stags 11-9 Saturday afternoon.

Janny Chayevet led the Tritons with four goals, while Deekla Marshall added three goals and one assist.
Gretchen Rubel and Sharon Leibowitz each scored twice. Rubel also contributed an assist.
"I think it was a well matched game," Marshall said. "We should have played a little better than we did."
UCSD upped its record to 5-1.

MEN'S CREW

The UCSD men's crew won two of three races at UC Irvine, losing only the junior varsity race on Saturday.
The varsity eight defeated the Anteaters in a time of 6:09, three seconds ahead of UCI.
The novice eight raced to a first-place finish on the 2,000 meter course with a time of 6:22. The Anteaters finished in a time of 6:30.
The Tritons' junior varsity boat lost by just one second, finishing in a time of 6:21.
The race marked the first time that UCSD has ever beaten UC Irvine.

something going offensively for him," Yates said.

UCSD, which had eight hits, had trouble with the two Elizabethtown pitchers. The Tritons did pose a minor threat in the first inning, when Erik Aldridge and Louie Diaz both got on base and advanced on a wild pitch. But, with no outs and runners in scoring position, the offense stranded Aldridge and Diaz.

The Tritons struck out 11 times on the day, while walking only twice.

Shortstop Doran Yount remained hot, going 2 for 3 and tallying the only Triton RBI, a run-scoring sacrifice fly.

In the second game of the tourney, the Tritons crucified Juniata pitching as they banged out 15 runs on 15 hits en route to a 15-4 win. Defensively, however, UCSD had five errors on the day.

Rich Tomolonis (1-1) started, striking out eight, walking four, and surrendering only four hits in his first complete game of the year.

Aldridge took it upon himself to get things going for UCSD early, as he sent the first pitch of the game over the right-field fence for his first home run of the season.

Of the four games that UCSD played this weekend, Friday's game against La Verne was by far the most important. But the Leopards prevailed 8-7 in 10 innings.

Behind the pitching of junior Bryan Thomason and a five-run sixth inning, UCSD overcame an early 4-1 deficit, to surge in front 6-4. But the ninth inning marked one of the most frustrating innings in Yates' 10-year tenure at UCSD.

With the score 7-6 in favor of UCSD, the Leopards had runners at first and third with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning. Yates, who had thoughts of bringing in freshman Kurt Luhrsen to relieve Thomason, decided to leave the game in the hands of the more experienced Thomason.

"Kurt was ready to go," Yates said. "We stayed with Bryan, though, because he had more experience, and he wanted the ball."

Some heavily disputed balls-and-strikes calls on consecutive batters, however, subsequently loaded the bases and then brought in the tying run.

Yates, who was ejected for arguing the second walk, was not pleased with the umpire's calls.

"It was absolutely ridiculous," he said.

Yates was especially displeased with the second walk after Thomason had gone ahead 1-2, and then lost the batter on three straight balls.

"I went nuts," Yates said.

"[Catcher Anthony] Sanchez didn't move his glove. He just dropped his head in disbelief and questioned the umpire. I came roaring out of the dugout and he 'thumbed' me. We felt so helpless — they weren't going to swing, and the ump wasn't calling any strikes."

Luhrsen relieved Thomason and got the final out of the inning with the help of centerfielder Ernie Isola's diving catch.

In the bottom of the tenth, however, Luhrsen (0-1) surrendered a game-winning double.

Saturday, with Yates sidelined due to a one-game suspension, sophomore Ryan Flanagan ignored all distractions of the night before and hurled the Tritons to a 5-3 win over Methodist.

Yates considered this home game, not part of the La Verne tournament, to be one of the more See BASEBALL, Page 14 us the game."

Sophomore Kim Stutzman took the loss.

Friday was only slightly better. The Tritons again came out flat in the opener, but this time they escaped with a 1-0 win.

UCSD managed to make the meager lead hold up despite missing three starters at the beginning of the game. The second game, however, was a different story.

"We came out hitting," Jarrell said, noting that Azusa had switched to a much slower pitcher.

UCSD picked up nine hits in the second game. First baseman Pam Harnack led UCSD with two hits and one RBI.

Dianna Moreno picked up wins in both ends of the doubleheader, getting relief help from Stutzman and Kathy Fogg.

DISSERTATION WORKSHOPS

Most doctoral students (64-91%), after completing their course work, remain with a dissertation pending completion indefinitely. Among these ABDs (All-But-the-Dissertation) are generally found the brightest and most creative candidates. Addressing those elements involved in delaying completion, the workshop guides participants, from beginning to following through and completion, particularly after years of inactivity and regardless of where they are in the process.

BITS & PIECES / PETER KO

Lebanon, Spiro, And Erik Estrada

JUST A FEW NOTES:
• If ever there was a case for getting rid of polls, the NCAA Division III men's basketball tournament is it. First, none of the four teams ranked on top when the regular-season ended made it to the round of eight.

Hamilton, the top-ranked and undefeated team that was not allowed to participate in the tournament because of conference restrictions, lost in the first-round of its conference (ECAC) tournament. Hope was eliminated in its first tournament game. And Salem State and UCSD both fell in the round of 16.

If this were Division I, NCAA Executive Director Dick Schultz would be slamming his Louis Vuitton briefcase against someone's head and screaming, "What the Hell happened?"

SECOND, IT'S apparent that the polls mean absolutely nothing as far as the NCAA is concerned.

UCSD was ranked fourth, and Otterbein was ranked seventh, yet the Tritons play on Otterbein's court? A neutral court would have been fine, but given the financial seat belt Division III finds itself in, the NCAA can't afford to designate neutral sites. So, instead of rectifying the situation and doing it correctly (i.e. rewarding the higher-ranked team with home-court privileges), they send UCSD to Westerville, Ohio. They might as well have sent the Tritons to Lebanon, Pennsylvania.

And being the home team is not a minor advantage. Our abacus points out that in nearly 70 percent of the Division III tournament games, the home team has won.

ON THE Division I tournament:

- Why is UCLA playing in the East Region and Seton Hall in the West? Will someone please hand the selection committee a copy of Rand-McNally and a map to geography class.

- Why do Towson State, Coastal Carolina, and St. Francis (PA) sound like someone UCSD, not UNLV, should be playing?

- Pre-tournament favorites: UNLV, Arkansas, Indiana, and Ohio State.

- Pre-tournament darkhorses:

■ Tritons fall behind by 24 in the first five minutes and never recover; Otterbein wins 108-95

By Ken Perlman

All good things must come to an end. The UCSD men's basketball team found this out the hard way Friday night as it fell to Otterbein 108-95 in the third round of the NCAA Division III tournament.

The loss ended the best season in the program's history. It was also UCSD's first loss to a Division III opponent this year.

The beginning of the game was UCSD's worst nightmare, as the Tritons were sent reeling to a 30-6 deficit in the first five minutes. Otterbein's James Bradley led the charge, blistering the nets for 22 of the Cardinals' first 23 points.

"Everything he threw up was going in," UCSD Head Coach Tom Marshall said.

Bradley, who finished with 43 points, hit from everywhere on the court. Marshall tried to counter by guarding him with 6'8" Gordon McNeill, but Bradley calmly rattled off a series of off-balance three pointers that would have made Larry Bird nervous.

Baseball Gets Back on Track

■ UCSD splits four games against Division III opponents, including 5-3 win over Methodist

By Rex Grayner
Staff Writer

After stunning Division I USD last Tuesday, the UCSD baseball team hoped its momentum would carry it through the La Verne Tournament in perhaps the Tritons' most crucial weekend of the 1991 season. When the dust had settled, the Tritons (5-10) had come out even as they edged two of their four Division III opponents.

"We could have swept the weekend easily," Head Coach Lyle Yates said. "The two losses were one-run ballgames that we didn't capitalize upon when there were opportunities to win."

On Thursday, the Tritons opened the four-team Division III tournament with 25th-ranked Elizabethtown. Brent Hansen took the mound and responded with a performance that perhaps deserved a win, but some difficulty in the first inning proved to be his undoing in the Tritons' 2-1 loss.

Hansen (2-3), who struck out 12 and walked just one, allowed both runs in the first inning, but shut out Elizabethtown for the remainder of the game to post his third complete game.

"Brent threw exceptionally well. It's a shame we couldn't get

Softball Sweeps Azusa, Falls to Regis

By Heather Holtzclaw
Associate Sports Editor

After more than a week without playing a game, it would seem that the UCSD softball team would have jumped on its first opponent.

Maybe the second. The Tritons fell 4-2 to Regis College on Thursday, but swept Azusa Pacific 1-0 and 6-2 on Friday.

"We came out real flat [on Thursday]," Head Coach Melissa Jarrell said. "It was really consistent with the way we practiced all week."

"I was really disappointed on Thursday. I don't think we were there mentally." Jarrell had said earlier in the week that she expected the Tritons to sweep the weekend, a likelihood which looked all the more promising when Regis asked to play only one game of the scheduled doubleheader because of a lack of pitchers. But it was not to be.

"The game on Thursday was terrible," Jarrell said. "Basically, we had one really bad inning. We made a couple of errors that cost

Track Dominates Five-Way Meet

By Greg Wrenn
Guardian Reporter

The Tritons are not good hosts. In fact, the UCSD track and field team can be downright rude. The women were especially impolite, blowing away second-place Pomona-Pitzer 119-37. The men slid by runner-up Claremont 88.5-81.

Leading the UCSD women Saturday, who failed to place a first- or second-place finisher in only one event, was Erica Washington, who ran to victory in the 100

Women's Tennis Swamps 49ers

■ Tritons roll past Division I Long Beach State with 8-1 win

By Srinath Sanda
Staff Writer

UCSD women's tennis Head Coach Liz LaPlante was a bit unsure going into Friday's matchup against Long Beach State.

Perhaps the Tritons, who had suffered a hard 9-0 loss to Western Michigan last week, were a bit unsure of themselves as well.

But whatever uncertainties existed were quickly brushed under the rug as UCSD defeated Long Beach State 8-1.

The Long Beach State that came to UCSD was clearly not the same group that had dominated the Tritons in the past.

This, coupled with last week's loss, made the match against the 49ers, in LaPlante's words, a "tell-me" outing. The Tritons did not disappoint.

Robyn Inaba and Carla Nicholas, the Tritons' number one and two players, both won easily in singles.
