THE ETHNIC STUDIES DEPARTMENT

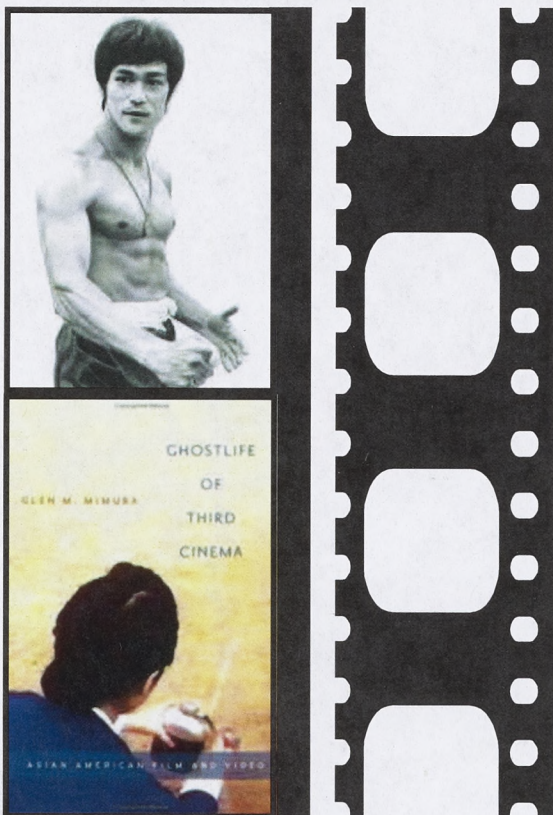

Presents

An Asian American Art of Failure? Queering Masculinity After Bruce Lee

Thursday, February 27th
3:30pm-5:00pm
RIMAC Building
4th Floor Conference Room
Reception to follow

Featuring Glen Mimura
Associate Professor, Film &
Media Studies & Asian American Studies, UC-Irvine

In the past several years, Asian American scholarly and popular discourses have 'reclaimed' the image and career of Bruce Lee, Chinese American martial arts superstar, to recuperate an Asian American masculine 'cool' from its subordinate status of oriental-ized, emasculated nerdiness. This talk traces the political-economic and media coordinates of this nerd-cool binary, producing its most spectacularized instance of 'failed' masculinity in the 2004 American Idol appearance of UC Berkeley civil engineering major, William Hung. If poor William's brief career and longer legacy exemplify Asian Americans' racialized shame, the warrior-philosopher Bruce's Asian American revival promises the possibility of therapeutic, heteronormative pride. Yet what is at stake in this disavowal of shameful nerdiness? Not surprisingly, Asian American queer media artists have most productively and creatively taken to task the nerd-cool binary. This talk therefore closes with an analysis of two experimental queer videos: J.J. Chinois (2002), Lynn Chan's 2002 drag-king parody of Bruce Lee, and Maybe Never (But I'm counting the days) (1996), Nguyen Tan Hoang's playful deconstruction of queer nerdiness.

The Grey Area: Feminism Behind Bars

Join the Women's Center for a screening of THE GREY AREA—Feminism Behind Bars. This film is an intimate look at women's issues in the criminal justice system and the unique experience of studying feminism behind bars. Through classroom discussions, a small group of inmates share their diverse experiences with motherhood, drug addiction, sexual abuse, murder, and life in prison.
