PNG COFFEE RESEARCH INSTITUTE

Attention All Coffee Farmers!

PINK DISEASE

Pink disease is caused by a fungus and has for long been considered a minor disease. Due to favourable conditions, such as prolonged wet weather, the disease has been reported to have developed to epidemic proportions, causing considerable losses in some areas.

Every coffee grower should be aware of this disease and the control measures to be taken.

SYMPTOMS

The symptoms of this disease are at first superficial, and appear as fine white threads on stems, branches or berries. The affected young twigs can later become brown and die. When the older stems are affected, the mycelial threads (fungus) change into a pale pink crust, and the fungus enters the bark and kills it. When the infection surrounds the whole stem or branch, the upper parts of the infected portion will die, causing the young beans to turn brown.

TREATMENT

1. Heavy shade and/or unpruned coffee, tend to maintain high humidity in wet seasons, favouring fungus development. Correct shade density and pruning will minimise disease infection and development.
2. Infected laterals should be cut back and burned on site, or placed in a large plastic bag and removed from the coffee to be destroyed elsewhere.

Any infection on the uprights should be cleaned and treated with copper paste (mix just enough water with copper powder to make it sticky). Where the infection has reached an advanced stage, it may be advisable to stump the tree and burn all the affected branches.

3. Pink disease also lives on, and attacks, a wide range of other plants, eg crotalaria, pigeon pea, citrus, tea, bougainvillea, tephrosia, silly oak and many ornamental plants. Therefore, it is essential to pay attention to all other plants grown in and around coffee. Should these plants be infected with Pink Disease, they must be treated and/or removed from the coffee.

Any coffee growers requiring more information should contact:
