OFFICE OF HIGHER EDUCATION ANNOUNCEMENT ENROLMENT AT PAPUA NEW GUINEA'S 39 DECLARED INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION IN 2009

22nd January 2009

This announcement is intended for the general public about opportunities for college experience in the 39 declared institutions of higher education and academic and training programs on offer that are recognized by the government through the PNG Commission for Higher Education (PNGCHE). Twenty one of the institutions are also recognized by the Education Board and the Medical Board.

Declared institutions of higher education include universities and two year colleges that are either fully or partially funded by the national government through the Annual Budget Appropriations. Funding is through direct transfers to the six universities and statutory institutions, through the Office of Higher Education or through Education Department and the Health Department in case of the 21 two year colleges under the Education Board and the Medical Board.

The PNG higher education is governed by the Higher Education Act (1933 as amended 1998, 2004). The University of Papua New Guinea Act, the PNG University of Technology Act, the University of Goroka, University of Vudal, the Divine Word Institute Act, the Pacific Adventist University Act, the Maritime Training Institute Act, Legal Training Institute and the Institute for Business Studies are the statutory basis for individual higher education institutions. The Education Act defines Technical and Primary Teachers' Colleges as part of the National School Education System. It gives the Secretary of School Education authority to award certificates and diplomas. Acts defining academic prerequisites for registering technicians and professionals in the health sector include the Medical Registration Act for nurses and paramedics.

The PNG Commission for Higher Education (PNGCHE) is committed to the diversity of providers of higher education and access to opportunity. It hold in the highest regard policies and principles that guarantee open and tolerant scholarship, an exchange that is vigorously protected and defended through the national quality assurance system and academic autonomy of the faculty.

Academic freedom informs the entire academic community: the free exchange of ideas applies to students choosing a course of study, to faculty pursuing scholarly research and teaching, and to institutions admitting students, appointing faculty, and setting standards. A condition of mutual respect enables the existence of these many-faceted scholarly discourses.

The PNG higher education system, as true to its academic ideals, treats each institution as unique individuals worthy of respect, to be judged solely by their actions, intellect, character and capacity to sustain its programs. An institution of higher education does not stereotype its members; it does not permit them to be put into categories based on suspicion, ignorance, deceit or prejudice; it does not deny to any of its members the full rights of academic freedom and engagement. The PNGCHE is vigilant and in 2008 strengthened the processes of institutional establishment, accreditation, and declarations of existing institutions as universities. In 2009 it will review all course offerings it supports through the TESAS and reclassify each into four development types. And therefore given the special dedication of the governors, administrators, staff, and students of the 39 Institutions of Higher Education, government has every confidence in the continued success of its declared tertiary institutions provided hereunder:

TERTIARY EDUCATION SCHOLARSHIPS ASSISTANCE SCHEME (TESAS). The 2009 AWARDS

The TESAS policy is a financial assistance scheme to support Papua New Guinean citizens who satisfy the basic requirement of 1.6 to 4 on the National Grade Point academic Average on the grade 12 national examinations and the internal universities and two year colleges end of year assessments. It is a merit - excellence based programme.

TESAS is the policy instrument of the User Pays Policy of the state. TESAS supports student learning by subsidising accommodation, meals, utility (water/power) prescribed course materials and return travel from home of upbringing to the institution. It is not additional budget to the higher education operational and salaries budget appropriated by government on annual basis. The fund is managed by the Office of Higher Education for the TESAS scholars.

Awards

The Government Component for University students is:

1. K4,670 per student for the Academic Excellence Scheme
2. K 3,770 per student for the Higher Education Contribution Assistance Scheme
3. K525 per student for Loan for students on the HECAs who need to additional support.

Government Component for non university students is:

1. K 2.613 HECAS
2. K925 for Loan

Self Sponsoring Students can take loan of K2250 in any year.

The kina value of the TESAS Policy i.e., candidates who are satisfying the TESAS policy (1.6 - 4 GPA) is insufficient owing to rise in high GPA scores by continuing students increases and student from the fast expanding secondary school system.

To increase the benefits to as many students, the OHE did away with the AES for new intakes, non university institutions and some social sciences programmes. This allowed the increase in the number of high performing students.

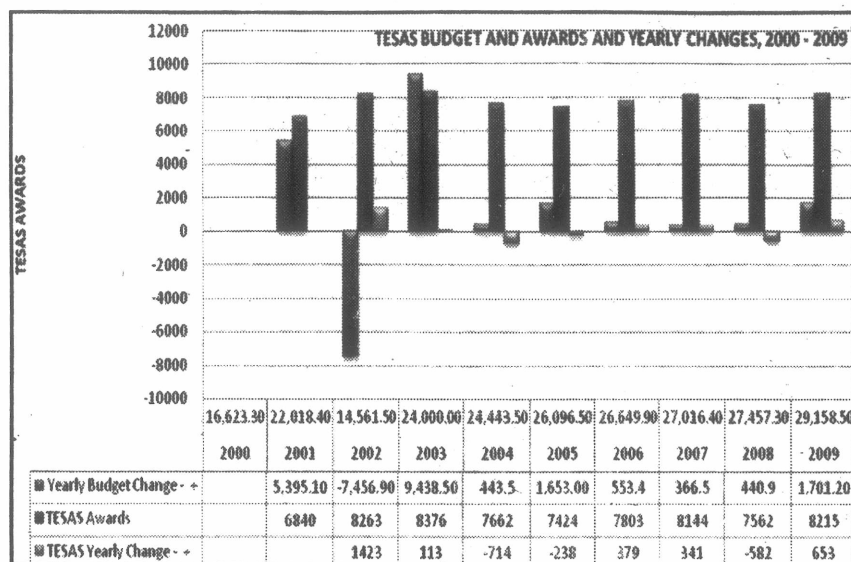

The change in awards as informed by trends over the last five years shows increases in high GPA scores above the 1.6 threshold. The following chart shows this trend.

The student population for the grade 12 school examination is centred around the mean of 2.2957 or the numerical average GPA. The spread or variation of the GPA values around the mean, or the standard deviation is 0.34426, a narrow variation.

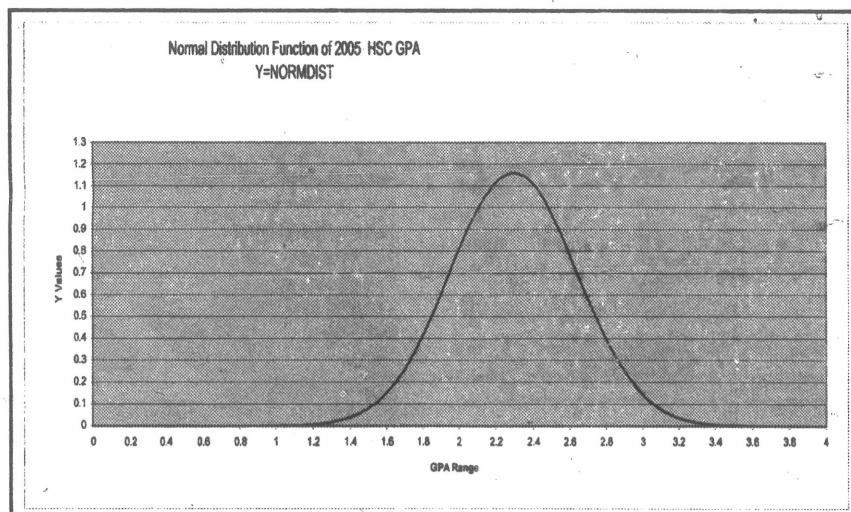

Comparatively, the standard normal distribution has a mean of zero and standard deviation of 1. This means that more data is tightly packed (or students with GPA 2.3) around the mean value of 2.3. However, with a skewness of 0.059, more GPA scores lie above the mean!

What this means is that 80% of students for one particular year scored above a GPA of 2.0, and 98% of students scored above 1.6. Therefore the TESAS award favours high performing students.

The TESAS Program has not changed for 2009. The admissions policy remains at 1.6 GPA. TESAS awards Institutions of higher education have adopted this as the minimum requirement for admission to universities and colleges. Some institutions and programs require higher GPAs. Institutions who have in the past considered GPA lower than 1.6 are reviewing their minimum entry requirements.

Some institutions have developed entry tests.

The OHE is working on a Standard Admissions Test (SAT) to bridge the gap between excellence and equity based on needs for populations from poor social economic and disadvantaged communities. SAT is expected to inform scholarship deficiencies and intellectual excellence in determining future scholarship considerations.
