UPNG students urged to be more responsible

by FAY DUEGA

VICE CHANCELLOR of the University of Papua New Guinea Joseph Sukwianomb has called on all students at the country's highest institute of learning to wake up to their standard as students.

Mr Sukwianomb said that the new students must realise that they were a special group of students selected among many others who were turned away. He also urged the students to carry more responsibility instead of aiming to gain A's only. Instead, he urged the students to also concentrate on developing their characteristics of leadership in the different fields they will be taking up.

Mr Sukwianomb also urged the students to be in their proper attire. He said students must be conscious of their personal hygiene. "There's no reason for students to complain of having no bar of soap," he said.

Meanwhile, he also said that nobody had the right to take away any person's right and determination to serve in a special way. "Students are unique because the future of PNG rests squarely on the shoulders of the few who have been selected. As such, the nation demands, and I repeat demands of you to show the same reciprocity," he said.

Mr Sukwianomb said that one cause of problems which the institute experienced was the result of students drinking alcohol on campus. "University is not another public bar," he said, adding that students should always drink in moderation.

Mr Sukwianomb also stated that since the university had its laws and boundaries, outsiders should not use the institute's grounds for their own use. "It is private property. The field (university) is not for outsiders. It is not a public bar, public beach nor a park but an institution for students to develop their personalities and academic achievements," Mr Sukwianomb said.

Meanwhile, he has warned students who enjoy seeing people suffer to ensure they do not let this happen at the university. "There will be no room for anyone who is bent on causing sufferings to others. This small band of undisciplined students must set their ways right and recover or be forced out from studies, thus causing scholarship withdrawals," Mr Sukwianomb said.

During his two weeks of touring his constituent colleges, Mr Sukwianomb impressed upon the students that the time is here for all to make their contributions. "Whether you are studying or working, it is time to serve the nation and to build it," he said.

Mr Sukwianomb's theme for this year is "The planning for the year 2000 in UPNG". He sees this year as a year of progress, consolidation and growth - laying the foundation for new initiatives and development.

Some of the projects include; • Mr Sukwianomb to direct the implementation of the UPNG Council decision to transfer the Department of Education, a department of the Faculty of Education from the Waigani campus to Goroka campus. This exercise will take five years to complete; • The vice chancellor to oversee the implementation of the merger of the College of Allied Health Science in Port Moresby with Faculty of Medicine, the actual implementation of the plan will begin in June when all functions, including staff will be transferred to UPNG; • higher education project which is expected to be funded by the Asia Development Bank.

The European Economic Community will also be funding three projects at the university. They include the extension studies building, the faculty of creative arts building and the new women's hostel.

The UPNG also intends to enforce the UPNG home ownership scheme.

Two new Fanta flavours introduced □ Coca-Cola Bottlers Port Moresby Manager, Mark Wright displaying the new flavours with the popular Fanta Orange.

COCA-COLA the manufacturer of the world's favourite orange drink 'Fanta' now has the extended edition of two new flavours, Fanta 'Pineapple' and Fanta 'Raspberry'.

The Manager of Coca-Cola Bottlers in Port Moresby, Mark Wright, said Fanta Orange, produced locally in Lae and Port Moresby has been around in Papua New Guinea since 1969 and the company is proud to widen its range by introducing two new unique refreshing flavours.

"Coca-Cola has spent over 12 months in consumer testing and the two new flavours were developed especially for Papua New Guinean taste.

"We are proud of Fanta Pineapple and Fanta Raspberry and we expect them to be equally successful as Fanta Orange. All the flavours are available throughout all centres of Papua New Guinea," Mr Wright said.

The three flavours are available in the 285 ml returnable bottles and 355 ml cans. Flavors in the bottles are produced in both Port Moresby and Lae while the 355 ml cans are produced in Lae.

Mr Wright added that they estimated a sharp increase in the market this year because they have seen that consumers have a preference for Fanta.

"Fanta's popularity, with all ages of customers is still growing and these two new flavours have been developed for them to enjoy in all situations like parties or family functions," Mr Wright said.

Reading is the key to improve general knowledge

Catholic schools aim at lifting standard

by EDDIE SAUNDERS

city and eventually throughout the country.

Fr Barry Henson of Port Moresby Archdiocese office said the objective of the Catholic Church this year is to lift the quality of students and teachers in its agency schools with an aim to meet and compete at international level as in Australia.

Fr Barry said national teachers teaching in Catholic schools will be selected on merit and sent to teach in schools in Australia that are run by the Catholic Church.

Under this program national teachers will gain a wide experience in the level of teaching in Australia which is equal to other overseas countries.

Fr Barry said there is already a teacher exchange and service program in place. The program was established this year and is arranged between the Archdiocese of Port Moresby and Rockhamton, Queensland.

Fr Barry added that under this program the Archdiocese of Rockhamton has sent a very experienced teacher and education administrator, Jim Midgley to teach at St Joseph's International Primary School in Port Moresby for a year.

Rockhamton Archdiocese is undertaking to continue training Papua New Guinean secondary school teachers and education administrators in the next five to seven years.

THE ARCHDIOCESE of Port Moresby has planned the 1993 school year with the ultimate goal of lifting the standard of education in all Catholic agency schools in the

Allocation and distribution of free education funds

INITIALLY there were mixed feelings amongst parents, boards of management, governing boards, and even provincial education boards (PEBs) in some provinces on the government's policy on free education. Many are in doubt over the government's capacity to carry out its policy and therefore have voiced their pessimism over the government's policy.

On the other hand many said the government's idea of free education is a grand one, and applauded the government's bold initiative. It is the intention of the government to maintain the confidence of the people through the Department of Education that it will carry out its policy. The Department of Education has broken down the K20.5 million for free education on the basis of the number of students expected to be enrolled in elementary, community, lower and upper secondary schools, vocational centres and College of Distance Education in each province.

Following is the breakdown of funds which have been distributed to the provinces:

Two provinces - Madang and West New Britain will receive an additional allocation of K67,200 and K27,200 respectively on top of the normal allocation. This is the result of the inclusion of grade 7 classes for the first time in seven primary schools in Madang and two in West New Britain. This is the beginning of the education reform that the government would like to carry out between now and the end of this century.

The free education funds allocated according to each level of education based on the 1993 enrollment targets, is provided as shown in the table below:

Kenya - the 1986 education reform question

This is a lesson for Papua New Guinea in all of this - the need to be cautious and not expect to be able to quickly vocationalise the educational system. Proposals should be tested, before changes are imposed on the whole educational system.

by Sheldon G. Weeks

A STRUCTURE that existed during the colonial period may return after independence. For example Kenya, under the British, had a 4-4-4 structure (four years primary, four years middle school, and four years secondary). This, at independence was altered to 7-4-2-3 (with the extra two representing lower and upper sixth form, or university preparatory classes for a three year university course).

In 1986 Kenya has established a mass education system based on an 8-4-4 structure (eight years primary, starting at six years of age, four years secondary and four years university). Since 1991, with the development of opposition politics in Kenya, the attack against the 8-4-4 systems has been mounted. The main criticism is that the promised vocational component is unattainable, and that false expectations of self-employment (informal sector jobs) have been raised.

The reform to 8-4-4 was associated with a proliferation of examinable subjects within the schools system. At the primary level, pupils at the end of grade 8, as part of implementing a 'rural orientation', were to be examined in Kiswahili, practical agriculture, crafts, home science, religious education, mathematics, science, English and social studies. The secondary schools were required to teach up to 20 subjects, and students were to be examined in 11 compulsory subjects - English, Kiswahili, mathematics, biological science, physics and chemistry, geography, history, government, religious education (including Islam) and agriculture. Additional subjects (not examined) from which students were to choose two, were physical education, social education and ethics, building and construction, wood working, drawing and design, home science, electricity and power and mechanics, music, art and design, and business education. The government now admits that it expected too much, and plans to reduce the number of subjects offered and examined. A single subject, 'technical education,' has been proposed.

The Kenyan system is also marked by a multiplicity of secondary schools that vary significantly in their financing, status, examination results and degree of community support.

The secondary system divides into four tiers, ranging from the elite, nationally supported secondary schools, to the good high schools backed by provincial governments, to 'Harambee' (self-help) and private ones.

In 1986 there were over 2400 high schools in Kenya, but only 1000 were sponsored by the government. Most of the unassisted schools, in 1986, lacked equipment and facilities. It was visionary to expect them to introduce such a wide range of courses, particularly the more expensive vocational courses.

A more modest reform which dealt only with the primary and secondary cycle might have been more successful.

With hindsight one can also see that Kenya perhaps made a mistake to "signal" to the people that there would be increased opportunity for university education by labelling the reform 8-4-4. Though an expansion of university level education has occurred, with the opening of new universities, it falls far short of providing a mass tertiary system. It was estimated that though only 10,000 school leavers competed for tertiary entrance in 1986, by 1990 the number was expected to rise to 100,000.

There is a lesson for Papua New Guinea in all of this - the need of to be cautious and not expect to be able to quickly vocationalise the educational system. Proposals should be tested, before change is imposed on the whole educational system.

Minister Baing issues warning to suspend school boards

by KONIO SENEKA

EDUCATION Minister Andrew Baing has warned that he will not hesitate to suspend school boards who fail to implement the government's policy on free education.

Mr Baing sounded this warning last week following reports of confusion by some boards especially in the National Capital over the free education policy.

He said schools in the national capital should not have any excuse as they have access to information on the new policy. Mr Baing said the national government has already made a commitment to subsidise school fees and there was no reason for students to be unnecessarily penalised.

The minister said since the current Wingti/Chan government took office on July 17, the government has moved swiftly to implement the government's policy. The government when handing down its budget last November committed K20.5million to implement this policy.

He called on commitment from education authorities as the policy will benefit everybody. The minister said the government had only one month to implement the new policy. Despite the short period given and since it was a new policy, there will always be problems.

Education Secretary Jerry Tetaga called on school authorities in the National Capital to be patient and not inconvenience the parents to pay school fees.

Cash Fund Certificates (CFCs) have been issued to all Provincial Education Boards (PEB) who will in turn distribute the money to all schools in the province.

Allocations for schools in the National Capital are now being distributed.

1993 enrolment figures

THE National Department of Education estimated that this year, more than 100,000 grade 1 students should enrolled in Community schools. This does not take into account the increasing number of children that enrolled in prep classes this year.

In Provincial High Schools, the Department expected a grade 7 enrolment of approximately 18,000 students. The estimated 18,000 grade 7's that enrolled in provincial high schools do not include the grade seven student enrolled in seven primary schools in Madang and two in West New Britain.

It is estimated that grade 7 students enrolled in these primary schools will be 600 students bringing the total grade 7 enrolment to 18,600 in 1993.

In four national high schools, 1,000 students enrolled for grade 11 classes in 1993. The two secondary school-Malala in Madang and Hoskins in West New Britain - enrolled 120 grade 11 students for the first time bringing the total grade 11 enrolment to 1120 student in 1993.

The overseas Secondary School Scholarship Scheme for students to study in Australia and New Zealand catered for 200 students this year.

From 1994 onwards, the government hopes to add grades 11 to 12 in selected provincial high schools, one in each province at a rate of three secondary schools a year.

Before the end of year 2000, the government wants to achieve the objective of each province having its own secondary school.

Education secretary advises school heads to effect government's policy

THE Secretary for Education, Jerry E. Tetaga, had advised heads of all schools that they should assist in every way possible to effect the government's Free Education Policy.

In his letter dated January 13 1993, he advised all headmasters and headmistress, of provincial high schools throughout the country to comply strictly with the Ministerial Policy Statement No. 3/91 and the Secretary's Circular No. 42/92 when determining school fees for students attending grades 7 and 8 this year.

The secretary had advised that school fees for students in grades 7 and 8 in member secondary schools will be paid in full by the national government. However, school fees for students in grades 9 to 12 will be subsidised at K150 per student.

The secretary had informed the schools that the first instalment of fees for students in Grade 7 and 8 will be made at the commencement of the 1993 school year. It will be based on K150 per student. The balance will be paid out to schools at a later date. This means that if a certain secondary school year for example, charges K400 per student tuition and boarding fee, the government will meet K150 at the start of the school for grade 7 and 8 students and the balance of K250 at a later date.

The payment of fees for students in grades 9 to 12 will also be made at the commencement of the 1993 school year. It will be based on K150 the balance to be paid will be the responsibility of the students and their parents.

The secretary strongly warned that under no circumstances should students particularly those in grades 7 and 8 be suspended from classes for non-payment of school fees.

Hard work and commitment is the key to success

□ Agnes Posong (standing) giving instructions to her students, Bernadette Tonea and Valintine Penil.

HARD work and commitment to study has given a female grade 8 dropout an opportunity to teach at the Microbase Computer System.

Agnes Posong, 21, from Soril island in Manus, was forced to leave high school in 1986 due to family problems and could not continue to complete grade 10.

In 1989, she was asked by the headmaster at Manus High School to manage the school canteen. Agnes worked for the school for two years. And in 1991 she came to Port Moresby and enrolled with the Keytyping school to do a typing course. Agnes successfully completed her course in 1992 by scoring 98 per cent in her final examination.

When Adnes completed her course, she was offered a job as a saleslady at the Duty Free Shop at Jacksons airport. However, Gabor was still interested in Agnes performance and ask her to work with Microbase Computer Systems as a teacher to teach other students in computer typing.

First pre-school for West Irianese children

by HARLYNE JOKU

FOR MANY West Irianese in Port Moresby, last Friday marked a significant achievement in their lives.

For the first time, a pre-school for young West Irianese in Hohola NO 2 was officially opened by Member for the National Capital District and Speaker of Parliament Bill Skate. Mr Skate also contributed K500 for pencils and papers.

The occasion was a positive step towards the future education of children of West Irianese who are either unemployed or self employed and earning little income to survive the costs of Port Moresby.

Unlike other pre-schools in NCD, the Cornilius Bruning Pre-School is established by the PNG Reformed Church whose membership is mostly West Irianese. The pre school aims to educate children at an early age placing strong emphasis on Christian principles.

Thirty five pupils have enrolled to begin this year and the pre-school teacher is a West Irianese, Mrs Anna Ruhukail, a qualified pre school teacher.

The occasion was described as special by outgoing chairman of the executive committee of the Church Eli Marjen.

"Special because this is a dream come true not only for me but more so, it marks a significant achievement in the life of the Reformed Church of PNG," Mr Marjen said in his welcome speech to the West Irian community present. Mr Skate and Reverend and Mrs Cornilius Bruning.

The PNG Reformed Church was officially registered on April 3, 1988. It had a humble beginning not as a Church but as a fellowship group back in 1963.

Weekly fellowships were held at Mr Marjen's residence at Hohola No 2 for the West Irianese Community in Port Moresby when they first arrived in PNG. With the assistance of the Church through Reverend Bruning, the fellowship grew in number and was finally registered.

Mr Marjen thanked Reverend Bruning and the Reformed Church of Western Australia for their continued support towards the PNG Reformed Church

He also thanked the Secretary of Education and his senior staff who assisted in the establishment of the pre-school.

Before the Speaker of Parliament, Mr Skate, officially opened the pre-school, he said he was honoured to be invited to the occasion.

Mr Skate told the West Irianese that they were part and parcel of PNG and encouraged them to seek help from him if they were in need.

"Do not feel hesitant to approach my office. I will be only too happy to assist in any way I can," he said.

Education officers who participated at the Senior Education Officers' Conference held in Lae from 7-11 September, 1992.

Managing Education Reforms into year 2000 and beyond

THE Senior Education Officers Conference (SEOC) is an annual forum promoting professional and dialogue between the National Department of Education (NDOE) and Provincial Department of Education (PDOE) administrators in Papua New Guinea.

The 1992 SEOC theme was "Managing Education Reforms into year 2000 and beyond". The conference stressed the importance of sound strategic educational reforms. The SEOC deliberated on three main areas:

(a) The resolutions of 1991 National Education Ministers Council Conference.

(b) Planning and Management strategies for Educational System Reforms and;

(c) Common administrative issues and problems affecting overall administration of the current system.

Both the keynote address by the Education Secretary and the National Education Minister's opening address highlighted that the reforms in education are timely and are in response to political, economic, social and cultural changes taking place. Our education reforms planning and management therefore should focus on:

(a) restructuring the current system as recommended by the Sector Review Report;

(b) Increasing and improving access from Prep, 1-12 grades;

(c) Improve quality of curriculum and retention rates of grades 1-12; and

(d) Facilitating greater co-operation and clear vision for the reforms among policy makers and implementors at all levels of the system.

A national task force and its subcommittees have been established to work out strategies and nature of reforms in elementary, primary, secondary, vocational, technical, teacher education, curriculum evaluation and assessment.

Both 1992 and 1993 would be reform planning periods for all provinces as well as at NDOE. The implementation of the reform by provinces would commence in 1994. However this is subject to individual provinces having the capacity and readiness to begin. The other principal requirements are availability of teachers, facilities and funds to proceed.

In 1993 Malala High and Hoskins High Schools will however commence grade 11 top up program and will be redesignated as Malala and Hoskins Secondary Schools.

All decisions of the national task force will be implemented and monitored by the National Implementation and Monitoring Committee (IMC). All provincial task forces will consult with IMC on aspects of reform.

The conference also deliberated on the subject of decentralisation and devolution of powers. It reminded the participants that:

- Decision making must involve all people whose lives are affected by the process so that they feel responsible for the consequences of those decisions.

- Power sharing promotes trust and responsibility among all participants like the bureaucrats, teachers and parents alike.

- Devolution of power to school boards and authorities should enable:

- more participation by the

PNG students headed for Australia

MORE than 500 Papua New Guinean students have left for Australia to study under two Australian Government funded programs namely the Secondary School Project and the John Crawford Scholarship Scheme.

Secondary School Student Project

At the end of January, 504 secondary students left under the Secondary School Student Project. Students under this project went to continue their senior secondary education. Of these, 201 are new students beginning their study while the other 303 students left to continue their education after taking up their scholarships in 1991 and 1992.

The 1993 intake is the largest in the history of this project.

Since the project began in 1989, 130 students have returned to PNG after studying in Australia. A large number of them have continued studying in tertiary institutions in PNG.

While the majority of the students under this project are attending boarding schools in Queensland, a small number of them have begun studying at boarding schools in northern New South Wales and the Northern Territory. Eleven students are attending day schools in Darwin and are looked after by families in homestay situations.

Students are selected each year by the national Department of Education. To be considered for the project, students indicate their interest in studying overseas on their school leaver forms which they complete at the end of Year 10.

Under the project, the Australian Government pays for all school fees, text books, uniforms, and travel cost between Australia and PNG at the beginning and end of each year of the scholarship and for the mid-year vacation. During the mid-semester vacations, camps are provided for studies and included visits to cultural sites.

The Australian Government also provides students with weekly pocket money as well as clothing allowances and full medical cover.

The project is part of Australia's Bilateral Development Cooperation Program with Papua New Guinea. In the financial year of 1992 and 93, Australia's contribution to the project will be A$7,550,000.

The Secondary School Student Project is jointly managed by the national Department of Education and the Australian International Development Assistant Bureau (AIDAB), the development cooperation agency of the Australian Government.

John Crawford Scholarship Scheme

The students who left under the Crawford Scholarship Scheme are for tertiary studies. A total of 34 Papua New Guineans left under this sponsorship.

The scholarship awardees have begun studying at undergraduate and postgraduate levels at universities and colleges in Australia. The fields of study chosen include business, economics, engineering, international relations, primary education, and policy studies.

Each scholarship has been awarded for the full length of the student's study. Under the John Crawford Scholarship Scheme, the Australian Government is paying for academic fees, a living allowance in Australia, an air fare to Australia at the beginning of the scholarship and an air fare to return to PNG at the end of studies. Half of the awardees under this scheme are female.

The successful scholarship awardees all responded to advertisements placed in the press in February 1992. Over 2,000 people responded by submitting an expression of interest to the Australian High Commission, Port Moresby. After a rigorous selection process, 34 awardees were selected. The successful awardees were advised in October 1992 that they would receive the John Crawford Scholarship Scheme scholarships.

Scholarships for study in Australia under this scheme in 1994 will again be advertised in the press. Advertisements are planned for February 1993. The scholarships for 1994 will also cover courses at Technical and Further Education (TAFE) institutions.

The John Crawford Scholarship Scheme, like the Secondary School Student Project is managed in PNG by AIDAB.

Reforms into year 2000

community and field staff to promote "ownership" in terms of;

-resources, skills and knowledge to be made readily available at the "action" level.

Under "deregulation" SEOC stressed the importance of the urgent review that is needed on teachers recruitment, promotion and reward systems to eliminate current cumbersome and costly systems prescribed by TSC Act 1982.

The SEOC also deliberated on current government's education policies which featured mainly on free education from Grade 1-8 initially and grade 9-12 subsequently and restructuring of the education system to be:

- Prep - grade 2 as elementary;
- Grades 3-8 as primary (community school);
- Grades 9-12 as secondary schools; and
- Two year vocational education to link with technical education program.

The Education Reform undertaken is a long term process and its success will be dependent on the political will to fund education adequately and the commitment of the managers to share decision-making powers right down to the school and community levels.

The challenge, in short, is to develop a better education system that would prepare PNG people for year 2000 and beyond.

Two young Bogia students leave for Australia with an aim

MORE than 500 Papua New Guinean students left for Australia late last month under the Secondary School Student Project to continue their secondary education. Among them were two students from Bogia in the Madang province, Robert Naguri, 18, and Sterling Iru, 16, from the newly built Holy Spirit High School.

The project is funded by the Australian Government.

Naguri and Iru were among seven students selected from Madang under the project. In an interview with Times of PNG before their departure, they admitted that it is their first time to travel overseas and are proud of it. However both promised that they will not take this opportunity as a holiday trip. "Before we left the village, our family held a small gathering to wish us well. They also reminded us to make use of this opportunity because we are lucky to be chosen among thousands of other students to continue our secondary education in Australia," Naguri said.

Both completed their Grade 10 examination last year and were happily enjoying their school holiday fishing and gardening in their separate villages when the news arrived. They were excited and eager to see Australia which they learned about in school and heard stories from other people. However behind this excitement, there was this feeling of confusion about what to encounter.

"Inside me I was nervous but after the orientation program, I am beginning to feel confident and am quite aware of what challenges I will face in Australia," Iru admitted before departing on Friday January 9.

Iru will attend All Souls College in Queensland and plans to continue his studies and become a surgeon.

Great achievement for Naguri

For Naguri, to be overseas for the first time under this project is a great achievement for himself and his family whose life is centred around gardening and hunting.

Being the bread winner, the whole family back at Ikemen village is supporting its only son and brother who is planning to do further studies and become a geologist after completing his secondary studies at St Gabriel's College in Cairns, Queensland.

According to the Australian High Commission, 504 PNG students travelled to Australia under this project. Of these, 201 are new students beginning study.

The Secondary School Student Project is jointly managed by the National Department of Education and the Australian Development Assistance Bureau (AIDAB), the development cooperation agency of the Australian Government.

Clarke's coaching and motivational programs receive praise

□ Students who attended John Clarke's Motivational program with their tutor John Clarke last month with guest, Bill Skate, Speaker of Parliament.

by JAMES KILA

THE MOTIVATIONAL and coaching programs for school students conducted by John Clarke in Port Moresby received praise from the Speaker of Parliament Bill Skate.

Mr Skate, who had three of his children, Anna, grade ten, Konio, grade nine and William Junior, grade five, attending Mr Clarke's motivational and coaching programs said his children benefitted greatly. He was also pleased with the changes in their attitude that he had seen.

Students from all over the country and PNG students on holidays from high schools in Australia joined with students from community schools and high schools in the National Capital District for Mr Clarke's January 1993 coaching and motivational programs.

Mr Clarke, who was a tertiary lecturer at Pacific Adventist College outside Port Moresby in 1990, started these programs in response to the needs he saw and to use his motivational talents with students of all ages.

He said motivation is vital to life and his programs are important to parents who want their children to be successful in life.

Mr Clarke said most of those students who attend his programs are children of ordinary working class Papua New Guineans.

The programs are conducted outside school time for both high school and primary students.

Some other senior leaders whose children have attended Clarke's programs are MP for Wewak Bernard Narakobi, the Electoral Commissioner, Reuben Kalulo, Sogeri students helped in publishing "Snake Road"

by RAPHAEL ELLIOT

AFTER ten years of research, Lance Taylor has finally come up with his fifth book, "Snake Road."

The launching of the book took place at the Education minister's office Andrew Baing, witnessed by two students from Sogeri National High School with their principal, senior education officers and members of the media.

This latest publication brings to ten the total number of publications made by the students of Sogeri assisted by their respective department heads over a 14 year period.

Mr Taylor has been in the country for the past ten years and has contributed much to these publications. The publication, "Snake Road" has 370 pages including 200 photographs.

Mr Taylor saw the changes in the Sogeri area and the struggle of the Koiari people and decided to write the book which necessarily does not criticise the slow progress of development in the area.

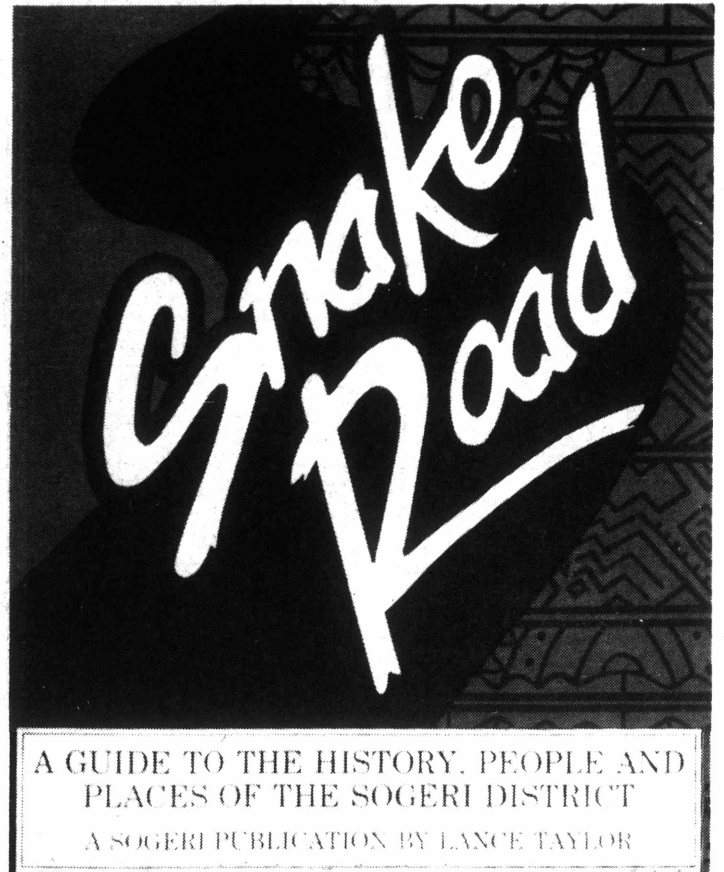

The book also mentions some of the latest existing developments such as the Sirinumu and Rouna dams. There is also a brief history about what Sogeri used to be prior to the establishment of the hospital that catered for the wounded ANGAU troops during World War II and the progress of Sogeri Secondary School as it was known then.

Other areas covered in the first part of the book are the culture and tradition of the Koiari people, happenings during the war period from 1942-1945 covering Nine Mile to the Sogeri plateau, the Musgrave river and schools around the Sogeri area.

Part two of the book features the environment and economic development projects that have taken place around the Sogeri district. As well as being a history of the area, it also serves as a guide to the people and places of the district.

Mr Taylor said 250 people from Australia, England and Papua New Guinea have con-

New school for Baimuru

MINISTER for Agriculture and Lifestock Roy Evara and newly appointed administrator of Gulf province Jacob Kairi flew into Baimuru to officially open a new community school at Inaua village on the outskirts of Baimuru station on Friday February 5.

Mr Evara said the school was one of his election promises to the people of the area and now that the school is in shape, he undertook to assist the school in whatever way possible.

Speaking to residents and public servants at Baimuru station, Mr Evara told the people to work hard for the development of the province.

One example Mr Evara gave was the revitalisation of Baimuru fish plant which has been left unattended for the past years.

Mr Evara told the people that their demands for a high school have been taken care of and the first stage development of the school will commence anytime this year.

The newly appointed administrator Mr Kairi also told the people that he will do everything in his power to bring services to them and advised public servants to cope with the changes that are to come.

tributed towards this publication, "Snake Road".

Ninety-seven year old war veteran Lt. Colonel Joseph Thorpe who was the commanding officer of the Convalescent Depot is one, also Norman Fell, headmaster of the then Sogeri Secondary School from 1950-1953 and his colleague, Neil Murray.

Mr Taylor would also like to extend his appreciation to Moia Asi, Daube Mariori and the Sogeri Expressive Arts department for their contribution in putting together this book.

School system fails in training pupils for unemployment

IN 1989 the National Research Institute was involved in a World Bank study to assess the education system in Papua New Guinea. The Ministry of Education conducted a survey throughout the nation to trace the activities of youth who had drifted back into the rural areas after six or ten years of schooling.

The Institute concentrated its study on the activities of the Grade 10 school leavers in the National Capital District. The study has now been completed and is published as "Tracer Study of Grade Ten Leavers - National Capital District," National Research Institute 1991. Below is a summary of the study.

Compiled by DARO AVEI

EDUCATION at the secondary level has expanded rapidly in the last few years.

In 1989 the number of high schools increased by 29 per cent and the number of teachers by 47 per cent. Seven hundred and five students enrolled in grade 10 studies at the beginning of 1989. The number of pupils in Grades 7 and 10 increased in 1990 by 39.9 per cent. And yet, the secondary school system did not seem to have catered adequately for their needs.

There are four clear assumptions for this:

1. Provincial high schools do not effectively prepare students to be productive in the community;
2. The curriculum taught is often irrelevant to the graduate's life;
3. There are few job opportunities after completion of high school; and
4. The situation of unemployment does not improve over time.

The Tracer study of Grade 10 leavers was undertaken to assess the impact of the secondary education on students in NCD. The objective were to:

1. Record the activities of the Grade 10's since leaving high school;
2. Determine aspects of secondary schooling found to be most useful;
3. Identify subject areas found to be least useful;
4. Identify problem areas in the secondary school system and suggest strategies for improvement; and resources, self supporting means, movements, and training and employment. The parents were questioned regarding their occupation, expectations, and their solutions to the school leaver problem.

of life?

The dominance of unemployment as a response is of concern. Why should a 1983 graduate be still unemployed in 1989? If he had been employed, how long did he last in his job and why did he stop work? Is he without activity now in 1989? Why hasn't he involved himself in some activities? How does he occupy

5. Record the views of both grade 10 leavers and their parents towards secondary schooling.

The graduates answered questions relating to school, residence, parents, birth order, uses of school learning, family livelihood, involvement in the community, financial 10 leavers interviewed were unemployed. Most seek employment for two years after leaving school, than job hopping and seeking ceases. Of the 216 students who responded to the question "What type of work do you do?" only 20 per cent were employed and four per cent were self employed.

Being unemployed means being inactive, non-resourceful, yet being alive and well physically. What are reasons for this lack of desire to work? Are schools to blame or does the problem stem from the family environment? Do the regions where these people come from show any consistency in people who are unemployed? How does it correlate with marriage and sex?

Fifteen per cent of the married males and five per cent of the married females are unemployed. There is a lot more commitment to work shown by the married than the unmar-himself daily so that he does not go hungry or be in need?

Six per cent of the grade 10 graduates that were interviewed live in their own house while fifty per cent live with their close relatives and less than 10 per cent live with others. This should show that the home environment is still strong and continues to influence the graduates, unlike in western societies where people in similar age groups tend to live independently from their families.

Graduates whose parents are unskilled workers involve themselves in self-employment, especially whose fathers are unskilled manual workers. Such situation must arise out of the necessity for the head of the family or the graduates to provide food for the family. While there are very few graduates who seek employment of their own choice, it is safe to say that these graduates come mostly ried people. In any case, a lot of grade 10 leavers who are not married are involved in employment opportunities than the married leavers who settle into only few activities.

Unemployment cuts right across the age levels with the largest group amongst the 18 to 26 age group for the males and 18 to 22 age group for the females. The survey conveys that Grade 10 graduates seek less employment as they grow older. How can our youth be unemployed and not be involved in any activity for acquiring the basic necessities from a background where their parents are both semi skilled and unskilled workers.

School do not necessarily inform their graduate on options and alternatives. The graduate must have based his actions for survival on his/her parent's experiences. The unemployed grade 10 graduate is left to the socio-economic environment to determine and fare for his own welfare. The graduate's activities are response to the lack of the basic necessities to keep alive, rather than based on the available choices which he has learnt at school.

About 63 per cent of the leavers are happy to have completed grade 10. The percentage of these unhappy (35 per cent) is too large to ignore. Most are unhappy because of the lack of opportunities available. This seems to be the overriding problem.

Usefulness of knowledge and skills gained from high school in activities

Fifty five per cent of the parents of grade 10 graduates are happy that their children have completed high school, and are living with the family, and will try to keep them occupied. Twenty five per cent would like their children to find jobs and reimburse their costs outlaid in school fees.

Sixty-one per cent of the graduates are happy that they completed high school. School seems to be a distracting factor and inhibits parents from effectively involving themselves in the training of their own children.

A number of schools had fed grade 10 graduates to NCD for a long time. Some other schools like Don Bosco and Gerehu joined in the system more recently so had not been able to feed graduates to NCD prior to 1986. Iarowari, an old school stopped feeding grade 10's into NCD in 1985. And Kwikila, another old school began feeding grade 10's only from 1986. Mount Diamond, a private school had one student interviewed on in 1988.

Factors facilitating or otherwise the utilization of knowledge and skills gained in high school

What are factors affecting the utilization of knowledge and skills gained in high school? The following were considered in this study: sex, age, where they live, what their parents do, and what their families own. The information was compared against their ability to fit into the community, why they are not able to set up projects or apply for further training or employment.

Such situation rise more out of necessity as either head of the family unit or assisting parents to provide food. While there are very few graduates who seek employment of their own choice, it is safe to say that these graduates come from a background where their parents are both semi skilled and unskilled workers.

This could have strong bearing on school as a initiative and creativity killer leaving the unemployed grade ten graduate to the socio-economic environment to determine and fare for his own welfare.

Differences between the male and female in the way they perceive their high school education and experiences

The survey interviewed 164 males and 68 females. More males involved themselves in unemployment volunteer work and self-employment while more females involved themselves in part-time training and house-wife activities.

The major involvements of the married females are house-wife activities and unemployment. For their male counterparts it is unemployment. The unmarried females are mostly involved in unemployment which their male counterparts also share together with self-employment while females tend to concentrate on getting married, their male counterparts concentrate on unemployment.

There are alot more chances of the NCD graduate finding employment than the Central rural graduate though he tries to involve himself in alot more activities.

The female is not very disgruntled that she has completed high school while her male counterpart changes his feelings after nearly every two years. More males (17 per cent) who are happy to have completed high school have their parents occupation coded as "Unskilled Workers". Over the 10 per cent of this graduates, their parents can be described as having occupation of skilled manual workers (11 per cent), and unskilled workers (22 per cent).

Correlation between father's occupation, what the graduate does and their participation in other social economic activities

From the previous paragraphs, most grade 10's do not intend to apply for further training or employment. They have applied for employment to earn a wage and support themselves or a family.

Most have parents who are into the community because, "I have lived there all my life", is the same reason why 6 per cent do not find it easy to fit in.

One can safely assume that the graduates can fit back into the community with their parents and do very little to survive. This must tell us a lot about the short comings of the education system we offer our youth in this country.

Only 30 per cent (72 cases) participate in traditional activities and 2 per cent do not. Seventy per cent of the graduates did not respond to this item in the study. Does this tells us something about the graduates and his/her expectations when leaving school and what the education system is doing to accommodate them.

Yes, 139 responses were received concerning why graduates did not set up projects. Fifty percent responded that there were no available resources followed by 19 per cent who said they were not interested. Forty per cent of the respondents did not provide any answer.

Agriculture, expressive arts and practical skills are the least useful subjects learnt at school. Yet they were rated poorly in their relevance to the current situation of the work they now do. Commerce was highly regarded as a subject that is utilised after completion of school. Does this mean that there was not enough learning about resource-making or identification in those subject areas? Eighty seven respondents applied for training mostly to further their qualifications (30 per cent) and prepare for better employment opportunities (23 per cent).

One hundred and forty five respondents did not bother applying for further training because they were either skilled or unskilled workers. Most graduates are unemployed. Furthermore most claim ability to fit back into the community.

The faathers of part-time training graduates work in both the semi skilled manual and unskilled work, and in the unemployed categories part-time employment graduates fathers tend to be large - enterprise managers as well as semi skilled manual workers.

The volunteer graduates have their parents who are either unemployed or are unskilled workers.

Finally the self-employed graduates have fathers who are high grade salary professionals, semi skilled manual workers, semi skilled workers, unskilled manual workers as well as the unemployed.

Seventeen per cent of the males who are happy about having completed high school have parents who do unskilled type of work. Only four per cent found living in town interesting. Because there are no jobs in town, some feel it is safer, easier and cheaper to be in a village.

Conclusion

Central to the issue of what grade 10 graduates do after leaving school is how to prepare them in school to fit into the community. While the schools concentrate on higher levels of schooling or employment, it fails miserably in training the pupils for unemployment. Unemployment is rife. The home environment is a factor.

The parents and the graduates do not really care. Most parents of the graduates own nothing. And owning something is not an incentive in family life. Little wonder the trade-store and chicken and other attempts at projects all fail. Being within a family is good enough. One is born into one, is temporarily removed and then returns. They are happy they had completed grade ten. So are the parents. It does not seem clear as to why the parents are happy that their children completed high school.

Seventy two per cent find it easy to fit back into the community. Not having a job is not important. In the community the activity the graduates involve themselves alot more in is traditional dancing and singsing.

Practical skills, agriculture and commerce are the least used subject in the community. Commerce is relevant for establishing a trade-store. Yet there are no resources forth coming for those who try to use their initiative. After some tries the graduate concludes that he is not qualified and loose interest. The female members take up house-wife activities while their male counterparts concentrate on being unemployed.

1,308 students registered at Unitech

THE 1993 academic year for Unitech at Lae began on Monday February 8. And the statistical information on students registration for semester one has shown that 1,308 students have registered to take up various courses offered by the university, both at Unitech campus and Vudal Agriculture College in East New Britain.

According to the records officer attached to the students affairs section, Primus Dam, 41 of the total figure (19 first years and 22 second years) are doing Bachelors of Agriculture at Vudal. Excluded are another 17 third year students who did their first and second years there under the Department of Agriculture and Livestock (P.A.L.) before the college came under the Unitech Program, last year.

Mr Dam said his office is still expecting another 30 first years and 22 second years to enroll for Vudal.

The statistical information has also shown that 448 have either enrolled or have approached the Students Affairs office to study either at Unitech and Vudal, but have not registered. Of the total registered, 389 are first years. These include school leavers (foundation years), non-school leavers (sponsored by companies, private etc) and those who matriculated from schools in PNG or overseas.

Mr Dam said the registered figures could change by next week due to students still coming in.

The bulk of the students had themselves registered, which includes paying their tuition fees, issued with ID cards and meal cards, dormitory postings, during the whole week of orientation held last week.

The orientation also allowed students to become acquainted with the general atmosphere of the campus.

The Vice Chancellor Misty Baloiloi told the students in his welcoming speech on the second day of orientation week that they should not allow hobbies, interests and other activities to take the place of their studies. "You are now committing your lives to academic studies and you must treat yourselves as grown-ups, matured and motivated people, who know why they are here, what their purposes are, to whom they are responsible and accountable," he said.

Mr Baloiloi told the students that some students in the past have valued their studies below other priorities and activities on the campus and consequently they were either suspended, expelled or just had to discontinue from their studies. He said many of these students later have literally pleaded to be given the opportunity to re-enter university to find a place among many who are competing for those limited spaces on offer every year.

Students Services Director, Allan Sako said the problem of accommodation shortage faced by the students last year had not shown symptoms of happening again this year.

Ovasuru, a victim of limited space

by EDDIE SAUNDERS

PRAIM Minister Paias Wingti when announcing the free education policy said the education of children in Papua New Guinea is a constitutional right and not a privilege. And for the first time in the history of this country, the government allocated K20.5 million to existing schools to implement its free education policy.

However with the increasing population, space at the existing schools is limited and denying the constitutional right of many children.

Young Arisa Ovasuru, 8, has been denied that right for three years now. His mother Marase has applied for a space at Coronation Primary School, National Capital District since 1991 for young Ovasuru to begin grade 1. That year Ovasuru was 6 years old, the age limit required by the Education Department for students to begin grade 1.

Marase took her son to the school for registration and was surprised to learn that her son's name was not on the enrollment list. The teachers told Marase to apply again for a space in 1992 and she did. However she and her son were again denied a space.

Early this year she showed up for the third time at Coronation Primary School with her son, who is now eight years old. Other children who are same age as Ovasuru or may be younger were enrolled while Ovasuru was again denied his right to be educated as the other children of this country.

May be next year he might be too old to begin grade 1 and he might become a victim of the school system.

The headmaster of Coronation, Tua Haro said it is just unfortunate that Arisa and others have missed out this year and there is nothing he can do to help.

EDUCATION IS NOT FREE

Dear Parents

Don't be deceived on free education
The Wingti government has misled you. The government preached free education now and everyone is talking free education.

But you must pay for your childrens education. There is no such thing as free education. The government's free education policy is a total misconception of the subsidy scheme already in existence. It is nothing new!

You must pay School Boards of Governors to manage and maintain the schools.
You must pay for your childrens school uniforms.

You must help fund construction of new classrooms and libraries.

There is nothing free. Education is also not free.

The Wingti government has deceived you.
Thank you

Advice to unlucky parents and children

This article attempts to advise those parents who will be trying to place their children for further education as a result of the above situation. The type of schooling sought this year may be aimed at wage employment or furthering their general education towards obtaining their School Certificate. Parents should be made aware of the education system in the country to help them in making their decision.

MANY parents have found themselves not so fortunate to have their children continue their education beyond grade 6 or grade 10 through the normal stream may be trying their best to find some kind of schooling for them.

The National Education System

1. The National Education System has registered member schools. Teachers teaching in these schools are trained and qualified teachers. These teachers are employed by the Teaching Service Commission.

2. (i) Member Schools (eg. Government and most Church Agency schools) registered with the National System comply with the National Curriculum approved by the National Education Board (NED).

(ii). There are registered Permitted Schools and the distinctions that can be made between Member schools and registered Permitted schools are:

(a). Most teachers teaching in registered Permitted schools are qualified teachers but are not members of the National Teaching Service (eg teachers in SDA schools). However, these schools generally use the same national curriculum used by the National Education system. Teachers teaching in permitted schools are inspected by the national inspectors and their students sit for the same national grade 6 and grade 10 Examinations like those students in the Member schools.

(b). There are also permitted schools that operate in the country that may not be using the national curriculum approved by the NEB. These schools use their own curriculum and their teachers are not inspected like teachers in the National Education System.

(c). There are private schools that are not registered with the National Education System. As such, the Education Department has no idea of the level and the standard these schools ascribe to. The department also has no idea as to the value of the qualifications and the nature of the facilities they have in their set up.

This information is important for parents because at the end of the day when the child completes his/her education, you would want to see your child given a certificate of some kind that can be honoured by employers in the public and private sector or in the academic field. Many people would argue that it should not be so but the truth is that our system of employment opportunities hinges so much on accreditation that it becomes the norm of our modern sector employment.

At the moment there are some private permitted schools which are doing very good work in the field of education and training. However, it is with the ones that are not registered with the Education Department that the concern is raised. Children that will be attending these unregistered schools are likely to face some difficulty at the end of their training with regard to employment or further studies.

The Education Act II of 1983 Section 100 (2) requires private schools to be registered and recognised after the required procedures are carried out. The Education Act gives the Minister and the Secretary for Education powers to set or approve courses taught by private education institutions. Approval for registration is granted once the institutions adhere to the standard requirements set by the government.

Many private schools have taken advantage of the situation of so many school leavers to make profit for themselves in the name of education advancement. Some private schools enter into educational training as a business venture with the objective of making profit. Often these schools do not have entry requirements as would the department because the objective is to make money.

The department believes that there are number of such private schools running in PNG without the knowledge of the Education Department. These schools are perhaps conducting courses for which there are inadequate facilities and recognized qualified staff to teach them. The department's advice to parents and students is that they should:

(i) check to make sure with the education authorities at national or provincial level on the status of the school to see if it is registered with the Education Department before enrolling children in the courses offered;

(ii) check that the qualification offered is acceptable to DOE or Labour and Employment.

If a child is not placed in a school, it would be helpful for parents to consult with appropriate education authorities and seek their advice on what would be the next possible option to take to further their children's education and training. If you are not sure what to do with your child who has finished at grade 6 than the safe thing to do would be:

(i) Help the child to continue his work through CODE to grade 10 level and sit for the grade 10 examination;

(ii) Attend vocational centre;

(iii) Attend one of the schools registered with the Department of Education to operate and conduct courses.

Secondly, if the child has finished grade 10 with poor grades, it is advisable for that child to repeat the subjects he did poorly in with CODE. After successful completion of the subjects with CODE, that child can apply to the education institution of his choice from outside as a non-school leaver to be considered by the Selection Committee.

Proposed high school for Morehead gets funding

THE proposed Morehead High School has now received fresh funds from the 1993 Fly River Provincial government budget of K355,000 for the first stage development.

This funding was revealed by the Minister for Environment and Conservation and Member for South Fly River, Parry Zeipi. Mr Zeipi said when the first draft budget was brought to him for his endorsement before it went to the National Executive Council (NEC) for approval, he rejected it. Because he said there was no money allocated for the long delayed Morehead High School and he wanted money allocated for it.

Mr Zeipi said he was pleased with the instructions he gave to the Department of Western Province for the inclusion of funds for the first stage development of the new high school in the final draft of the budget. Mr Zeipi assured the people of Morehead that he would take a personal interest in making sure that work on the new high school gets off the ground by this year in preparation for the first intake of students by 1994.

He said also that he had further discussions with the Provincial Affairs and Village Services Minister, John Nilkare, for K400,000 while at the same time the national government will play its part through the High School Support Program in 1994.

However, Mr Zeipi expressed disappointment over the missing funds which the national government had allocated in 1986/87. He said the records at the Works headquarters in Boroko show that the funds have gone missing.

Mr Zeipi said he wanted to make it clear that funds allocated for the Morehead High School are completely new funding.

Museum hosts mining and petroleum show

by DOMINIC KAKAS

WANT to see the Misima gold milling plants without going to the Milne Bay province?

The mining and petroleum industry, in conjunction with the National Museum and Art Gallery, is offering Port Moresby residents that chance through the Mining and Petroleum exhibition. The show has a scale model of the Misima gold mine and many other exhibits.

The mining and petroleum exhibition is being held at the Sir Alan Mann Gallery of the museum in Waigani, Port Moresby. The show is the first of its kind and is of vital importance in regard to educating the public on the industry. It will end in June and gives the people ample time to see the show.

The exhibition covers all aspects of the mining and petroleum industry in Papua New Guinea and includes maps, photographs, samples, equipment and scale models of the resource projects such as Kutubu and Ok Tedi, on exploration and laboratory work and on the history of the industry. There are numerous rock samples and some samples of Kutubu oil.

National Museum Director Soroi Eoe said in line with the need for proper education of the public, it was the role of the museum to help educate the people about the mining and petroleum industry, about the planning that goes into exploration, feasibility and development of the resource projects.

"Institutions such as the museum must be seen as a catalyst in that it provides the avenue and impetus for discussions on major issues, the environment and the nation so as to provide proper information within the framework of the government's policy guidelines.

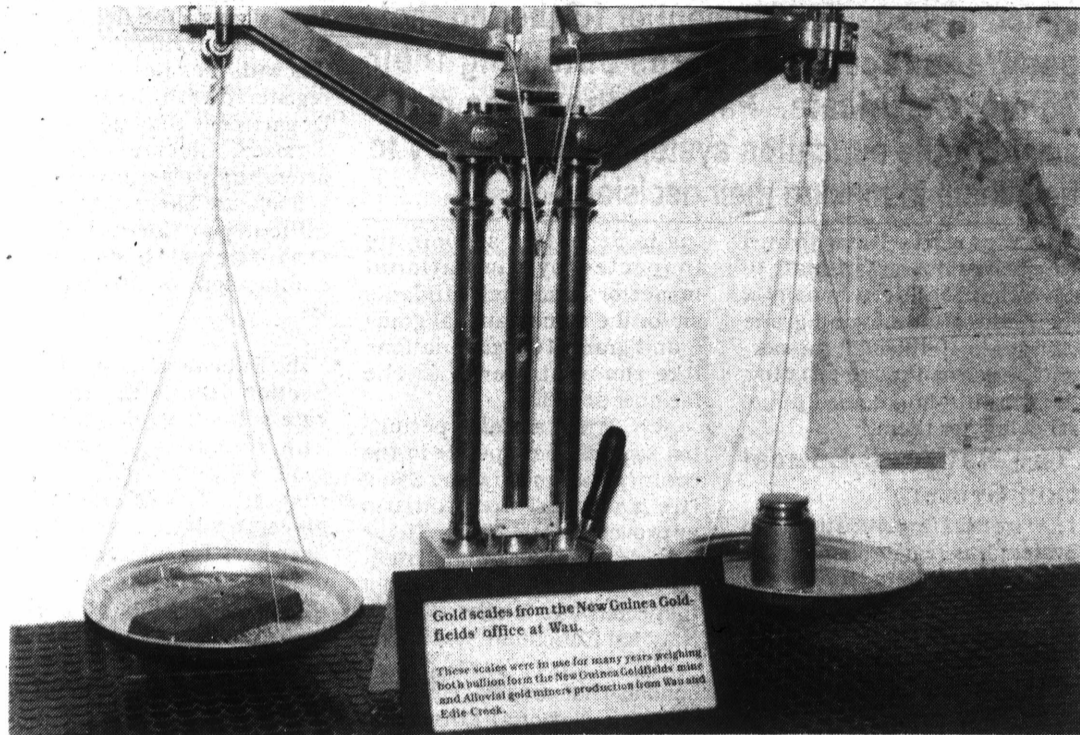

"The museum's involvement with the mining and petroleum exhibition represents a new direction for the museum. It must be seen as an active participant, both as an educational institution and as an institution which is concerned about major issues. That is not to say the museum foregoes its existing functions and responsibilities relating to culture and science. Rather, it must be seen as an active participant in the decision making process as well as developmental process of this nation and not be seen as a passive audience," Mr Eoe said.

The exhibition, since its opening in October last year, has attracted a large number of people. Over 15 organisations from the mining and petroleum industry have contributed to the show. The mining and petroleum industry comes under the umbrella of the PNG Chamber of Mines and Petroleum which has a membership of 125 in the categories of full members, associate members and services members.

The mining and petroleum industry in Papua New Guinea has developed into the nation's largest industry and its major revenue earner. This has been largely due to the rapid expansion of mining and petroleum exploration which commenced around 1984 - 1986.
