

Enrique Hank Lopez to speak on "The Chicano and the Law"

February 2, 1973

Author and attorney Enrique Hank Lopez is scheduled to speak on "The Chicano and the Law" at 8:00 p.m. Thursday, February 8, in the International Center at the University of California, San Diego.

The talk, sponsored by the Campus Programming Board, is free and open to the public.

Lopez, Executive Director of the National Chicano Media Council located in New York City, is the author of five books and numerous articles published in such magazines as Harper's, American Heritage, Nation, Look, and Life. Among his books are "Conscience of Mexico," an anthology of Mexican literature, "My Brother Lyndon," by Sam Houston Johnson as told to Lopez, and the recently published "Wombs-Day." "Memoirs of Katherine Anne Porter," by Lopez, is scheduled for publication during 1973.

Lopez received a bachelor's degree (summa cum laude) from the University of Denver, a master's degree in economics from Harvard University, and a Juris Doctor degree from Harvard Law School. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

He served as an attorney specializing in trial work with the Los Angeles firm of Johnson, Lopez & Wolfe from 1956 to 1960 and as an attorney specializing in international law with the Mexico City firm of Moheno & Lopez from 1960 to 1966. He has served as both actor and script writer for the CBS Television series "The Verdict is Yours" and as editor and publisher of Dialogos, a Mexican literary magazine published in Mexico City.

During the Spring Quarter, 1970, Lopez served as a Regents' Professor in the Mexican-American Studies Division of the University of California, Riverside. A year later he served as a Poynter Fellow at Yale University lecturing on political and cultural problems of the Mexican-American.
