

Media Advisory - Cognitive Science Conference at UCSD

August 2, 1979

EVENT: La Jolla Conference on Cognitive Science to be held at the University of California, San Diego

LOCATION: Mandeville Auditorium, UC San Diego

DATES: Monday, August 13-Thursday, August 16, 1979

REMARKS: The La Jolla Conference on Cognitive Science is an international gathering of scholars and researchers studying the field of cognition, the acquisition and use of intelligence by humans, animals and machines. The conference is unusual in that it brings together scholars from diverse fields such as psychology, anthropology, sociology, the computer sciences and medicine. Together they will discuss how people learn, the meaning of intelligence, what does it mean to think and if machines can be taught to think.

PROGRAM INFORMATION: Enclosed you will find a preliminary brochure about the conference. Complete conference schedules will be available from the Public Information Office, (714) 452-3120. Please ask for Paul Lowenberg or Paul West.
