DEI
Requirement

Fulfill your Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion requirement with a Latin American Studies class!

LATI 10 Reading North by South: Latin American Studies and the US Liberation Movements

The purpose of this class is to study the multilayered relations between Latin American Studies and US Liberation movements, particularly Third World movements, the Chicano Movement, the Black Liberation Movement, the Indigenous Movement, Human Rights activism, and Trans-border activism.

In this class students will be exposed to a more nuanced and rich understanding of social movements, identity formation, and political culture on both sides of the hemisphere. Without disregarding relations of domination between the US government and Latin American states, the class will focus on the often ignored dialogue between social activists, academics, and other members of civil society that occur "from below" on both sides of the border.

Check out this course!
