

1977 Summer Session to begin June 27

June 6, 1977

The 1977 Summer Session at the University of California, San Diego will be held Monday, June 27, to Friday, August 5, with a variety of courses from dance to mathematics for students 18 and over. Most courses run for six weeks with classes scheduled from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

An organic chemistry course, which will last 11 weeks, is the equivalent of a two-quarter academic year sequence with a laboratory component. It is geared to high-school graduates with a prerequisite of two quarters of lower-division chemistry.

A four-week dance program presented by the Department of Drama will feature a dance history course and a workshop in dance forms. Guest artists will lead students through a survey of the many expressions in movement and dance.

An introduction to the oceans course for college freshmen and high-school juniors in good standing (due to enter their senior year in fall 1977) features projects based on research performed aboard Scripps Institution of Oceanography vessels.

According to a Summer Session spokesperson, the students will be exposed to the same research methods and procedures as SIO shipboard scientists. The oceans course will be team taught and geared to the special interests of the students enrolled. There are no prerequisites.

Three writing workshops are scheduled under the aegis of the Fourth College Writing Program. The workshops will help students overcome bad writing habits and learn good ones. One of the workshops is an advanced writing course for those who have completed the basic requirements.

This will be the first year that UC San Diego will be participating in UC Summer Session International, with summer programs offered at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel (July 10-August 19) and the University of Edinburgh, Scotland (July 4-August 12).

Catalogs and applications and information about requirements, fees and credits are available at the Summer Session Office, mail code: Q-028, Building 106, Matthews campus, UC San Diego, La Jolla, CA 92093, telephone, 452-4364. Deadline for registration is June 23.
