

UCSD inaugurates Graduate School of IR/PS

March 10, 1988

Media Contact: Sandra Garrett, 534-3120

UCSD INAUGURATES GRADUATE SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND PACIFIC STUDIES

The University of California, San Diego today inaugurated the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies (IR/PS) in ceremonies in the Mandeville Center Auditorium.

The first new graduate school in the University of California in over 20 years, IR/PS is the first professional school of international relations in the country to focus on the Pacific region.

Governor George Deukmejian delivered a keynote address, which discussed the importance of world markets to California business and the role IR/PS will play in research and training.

Deukmejian congratulated the UCSD officers, faculty and staff for their efforts in creating IR/PS. According to Deukmejian, "As the first of its kind in the nation, the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies will focus attention on and provide the leaders of tomorrow with a thorough understanding and knowledge of the emerging new powerhouse of the globe -- the dynamic countries on the Pacific Rim.

This outstanding new graduate program fills one of California's most compelling challenges -- to learn much more about the cultures, economies and trade practices that are the essential key to the state's future prosperity in the increasingly competitive international marketplace."

University of California President David Gardner spoke on "Competition and Cooperation in the Pacific: The Challenge for Education," addressing the future educational challenges in the Pacific region which face the University of California and the state.

According to Gardner, California's future lies with the Pacific Rim and the state has much to do in order to educate its residents about that area. To plan for both cooperation and competition in the Pacific Rim, California needs the following from education: a well-educated and well-trained workforce, trained professionals and key personnel who can function in an international context, and a citizenry that understands the international dimensions that are becoming such a powerful force in the people of California.

Harold Meyerman, president and chief executive officer, First Interstate Bank; and Lawrence Krause, UCSD professor of international relations and Pacific studies, participated in a morning panel session, moderated by Gerald Warren, editor of the San Diego Union.

The inaugural ceremony began at 11 a.m. with Deukmejian's speech and introductory remarks by UCSD Chancellor Richard Atkinson. Assemblywoman Lucy Killeq, Gardner and Peter Gourevitch, dean, Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies, made additional remarks about IR/PS.

During his remarks, Atkinson said that UCSD is pleased to be developing an institution which will provide professionals trained in international affairs dealing with the growing Pacific region, provide a center of expertise and research on the Pacific rim and be an instrument for programs on public policy. Atkinson also commented on the high-quality faculty at IR/PS who are recognized in their fields as making significant contributions to new ways of thinking about the world economy, political structures and foreign countries and cultures.

In his inaugural remarks, Gardner said, "The task of this newest of our professional schools... is to educate men and women whose vision and skill are equal to the great challenges and opportunities the Pacific century offers."

Killea, who was instrumental in the development of IR/PS through her support in the California State Assembly, spoke on the importance of the school to the state.

Gourevitch recognized Deukmejian and Gardner as two key leaders in promoting awareness of the internationalization of the State of California. According to Gourevitch, the creation of IR/PS symbolizes the growing recognition of the nation's need for an even greater understanding of its place and role in the international order of things and the growing importance of the Pacific region in that order.

Michael Useem, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts and professor of sociology, Boston University, is currently conducting a study on liberal arts and the corporate workplace. Useem participated in an afternoon panel session on that topic with Stanley Burns, president of Chase Bank of Maryland, and Gourevitch.

The IR/PS inaugural program was made possible by support from the UCSD Chancellor's Associates and the Corporate Council on the Liberal Arts.

UCSD GRADUATE SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND PACIFIC STUDIES INAUGURATION, SPEAKER BIOGRAPHIES

Richard C. Atkinson came to the University of California, San Diego as chancellor on July 1, 1980. From 1975 to 1980 he served as director of the National Science Foundation. Prior to 1975, Atkinson was on the faculty of Stanford University for 20 years. He has been elected president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and he has been elected to membership in the National Academy of Sciences, American Philosophical Society, American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the Institute of Medicine. Atkinson has been awarded honorary doctor of science degrees by 10 American universities and holds honorary memberships in several foreign societies and academies.

Stanley Burns is president of Chase Bank of Maryland, part of the Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. He was previously Eastern regional executive of the commercial sector of the Chase Manhattan Bank. He managed Chase's acquisition in Maryland of the three savings and loan associations which formed the base for the Chase Bank of Maryland. Burns is involved in a variety of commercial banking activities, including corporate banking and real estate finance. He received a bachelor's degree in political science from Duke University, and is currently enrolled in the master of liberal arts program at Johns Hopkins University. Burns is coauthor of a recently published book, Educating Managers.

Governor George Deukmejian was sworn into office as Governor of California in 1983, and was reelected to a second term in 1986 by one of the largest vote margins in state history. Deukmejian assumed the duties of chief executive after a 20-year career as a legislator and attorney general. He was raised in upstate New York and graduated from Siena College and St. John's University School of Law.

David P. Gardner is the 15th president of the University of California, a position he has held since 1983. Prior to this he chaired a national commission on higher education, to which he was appointed by Secretary of Education T. H. Bell. Gardner served for 10 years as president of the University of Utah, and held various academic and administrative posts within the University of California system. Gardner received bachelor's degrees in political science, history and geography from Brigham Young University, and master's and Ph.D. degrees from the University of California at Berkeley.

Peter A. Gourevitch was chosen as the first dean of the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at the University of California, San Diego in July 1986. He chaired the UCSD Senate's Planning and Steering Committees which prepared the academic foundation for IR/PS. Gourevitch, whose research includes international relations and comparative politics, joined the UCSD faculty in 1979 and was chair of the department of political science. He earned his Ph.D. from Harvard University and served on the faculties of Harvard University and McGill University. He is a member of the Task Force on International Competitiveness, the Western Governor's Association, and the Committee on International Relations Exchange between the United States and the People's Republic of China.

Assemblywoman Lucy Killea is serving her third term in the California State Assembly representing diverse areas of the City of San Diego. She is the chairwoman of the new Assembly Committee on International Trade and Intergovernmental Relations for the State of California. She is also the Assembly's representative to the California World Trade Commission and recently served on the State Task Force on California-Mexico Relations. Killea received bachelor's and master's degrees in history and a Ph.D. in Latin American Studies from UCSD.

Lawrence B. Krause is professor of international relations and Pacific studies at IR/PS. Krause came to the IR/PS faculty from the Brookings Institution, where he was a senior fellow since 1963. He was previously a member of the senior staff for the Council of Economic Advisers, a consultant to the State Department and on the faculty at Yale University. He is one of the nation's most known scholars on the economies of Asia. Krause holds a Ph.D. in economics from Harvard University.

Harold Meyerman is president and chief executive officer of First Interstate Bank, Ltd. He also serves as a member of First Interstate Bancorp's managing committee. Meyerman was formerly executive vice president of Limited, and general manager of Capital Markets Group and the International Banking Group. Prior to joining First Interstate Bank in 1983, Meyerman was a senior vice president and head of the Europe Group of the World Corporate Department of Bankers Trust Company. He is executive director of the Japan Western United States Association (JWA), and trustee of the United States Council for International Business. Meyerman received a business degree and a degree in law from the University of British Columbia.

Frank Stanton, chairman of the corporate council on the Liberal Arts, which is providing support for the inauguration of IR/PS, is president emeritus of CBS, Inc. Stanton was chief operating officer of CBS from 1946 until his retirement in 1973. A graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University and Ohio State University, he was the founding chairman of the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences and a former chairman of the Rand Corporation.

Michael Useem is associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Boston University. He is currently conducting a study of liberal arts and the corporate workplace, jointly sponsored by the Corporate Council on the Liberal Arts and the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities. A graduate of the University of Michigan (B.S.) and Harvard University (M.A. and Ph.D.) he has written numerous articles and books on topics of business management and education.

Mary Lindenstein Walshok is associate vice chancellor for extended studies and public service and associate adjunct professor in the department of sociology at the University of California, San Diego. Under her leadership University Extension at UCSD has grown to serve over 35,000 students annually. After teaching in the state university system she came to UCSD Extension as director of women's programs and has held a variety of administrative positions since then. Walshok has been a Kellogg Foundation National Fellow. She received a bachelor's degree in sociology from Pomona College and master's and Ph.D. degrees from Indiana University.

Gerald L. Warren is editor of the San Diego Union, a position he has held since 1975. From 1969 to 1975 he was deputy press secretary to the president in the Nixon and Ford administrations. Born in Nebraska, Warren graduated from the University of Nebraska with a bachelor's degree in journalism. He began his career with the San Diego Union immediately after this, serving as a reporter, the city editor, and assistant managing editor of the paper prior to his White House experience.

(March 10, 1988)