

Four UCSD winners of Guggenheim fellowships

April 22, 1985

The Guggenheim Memorial Foundation has awarded four University of California, San Diego faculty members with fellowships. The University of California faculty members this year won a total of 29 Guggenheim Fellowships.

A total of 270 awards for proposed studies, totaling $5.4 million, were given to individuals and to faculty members at institutions throughout the United States and Canada. The average grant this year is $20,000.

The four UCSD winners are Henry E. Allison, professor of philosophy, for his study on Kant's theory of freedom; J. William Helton, Jr., professor of mathematics, for his study on functional analysis in electrical engineering; Benetta Washington Jules-Rosette, professor of sociology, for her study on technology and social change in Africa; and Kristin Luker, associate professor of sociology, for a history of the sex education movement in America, 1880-1980.

The fellowships are awarded "on the basis of demonstrated accomplishment in the past and strong promise for the future," according to announcements by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. This year's winners were chosen from among 3,548 applicants.
