Iran willing to release hostages

Parliament sets down four demands for release of captives

By the Associated Press

The Iranian Parliament, in a major step toward ending a stalemate that has kept the world in crisis for a year, voted yesterday to free the 52 American hostages if the United States meets four conditions set down by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and a parliamentary committee.

It was the most promising development in the US-Iranian confrontation in the 365 days since the seizure of the US Embassy in Tehran. But the Iranian proposal, calling for US concessions on complex financial matters, was fraught with potential difficulties.

President Carter, at a White House news briefing, said the Parliament's terms "appear to offer a positive basis" for negotiating the hostages' freedom, but he could not predict when that might come. He said his administration is pursuing the matter through diplomatic channels and any resolution of the crisis must be in keeping with America's honor and vital interests.

"I know that all Americans will want their return to be on a proper basis which is worthy of the suffering and sacrifice the hostages have endured," he said.

The president said any solution would have to be in "full accord" with the laws and the Constitution of the United States, a possible reference to the complexities involved in meeting the Iranian conditions.

Carter also declared that Tuesday's presidential election will not affect his decisions in response to the Parliament's action.

In New York, United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said there was now a better chance than ever for resolving the dispute. He said he telephoned both Washington and Tehran and offered his help in making the next step.

The Iranians said the United States must fulfill all of the terms — not simply signal its acceptance of them. Groups of hostages then would be freed in phases as each condition is met, they said. The Parliament appeared to have hardened in at least one key aspect the position set down by Khomeini when he listed the conditions.

Tehran radio said the Parliament's position was that "America's procrastination can prevent their release and lead to their trial as alleged spies."

Although the language approved by the Majlis does not mention trials, it does say the hostages would be turned over to the "judicial system" if the conditions were not met. When Khomeini first set down the conditions Sept. 12, US officials were encouraged by the omission of any reference to trials.

American officials yesterday declined comment on the Parliament's refinement, saying they were awaiting an official translation of the conditions.

Carter stops campaign to assess Iran hostage crisis

WASHINGTON AP — President Carter said yesterday evening that new Iranian terms could point toward freedom for the 52 American hostages, and promised that his decisions will not be swayed by the election two days away. Republican Ronald Reagan sought crucial Ohio votes, saying that his campaign stages were not the time or the place "for me to be addressing such a sensitive matter."

An so an old question — The Iranian imprisonment of Americans — loomed anew over the final hours of the tense, close contest for the White House.

Carter's nationally televised statement was guarded as to the prospects for a hostage release. "I wish I could predict when the hostages will return," he said. "I cannot."

"But whether our hostages come home before or after the election, and regardless of the outcome of the election, the Iranian government and the world community will find our country, its people and the leaders of both political parties united in desiring the early and safe return of the hostages ... on a basis that preserves our national honor and our national integrity."

Carter said the terms set early Sunday by the Iranian Parliament "appear to offer a positive basis" for achieving those objectives. He did not say whether or not those terms would be accepted by the administration. That decision was left open, at least until election eve.

"We are within two days of an important national election," Carter said. "Let me assure you that my decisions on this crucial matter will not be affected by the calendar."

Reagan, in Cincinnati, was silent on Carter's speech. There's no reason to comment," he said. "I'm not going to comment on it."

Republican vice presidential nominee George Bush said earlier the hostage developments would not affect the outcome of Tuesday's election.

After two Cabinet Room conferences with his senior advisers, Carter left until election eve — or later — his answer on a hostage-release agreement.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said he had "no basis to expect" that the captives would be freed before Election Day. He said the administration still is assessing information on the conditions fixed by the Iranians.

"No one should for a moment labor under the misapprehensions that the timing of the American election will in any way affect the positions of the American government," Powell said. "They will be the same on Monday as on Wednesday."

Powell added that the administration does not want to foster unjustified optimism or expectations that the hostages will soon be free.

And the White House arranged a renewal of Carter's campaign travels, Powell saying that "if the situation permits," the president will make planned election eve appearances in Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, California, Oregon and Washington.

Campaigning in Marietta, Ohio, Reagan said, "This is not the time or the place for me to be addressing such a sensitive matter."

SBPC chair Sabo endorses Carter-Mondale for re-election

BY PETER MORTENSEN
News Editor

UC Student Body Presidents Council Chairperson Linda Sabo and UCLA undergraduate president Fred Gaines announced their endorsement yesterday for the re-election of President Jimmy Carter.

"President Carter is the only choice for students," Sabo, a UCSD student, said. In Congress, Anderson has consistently opposed critical education votes. And we all remember how adversely the University of California was affected by the disastrous cutbacks during Reagan's administration.

Sabo argued that Reagan "damaged" UC operations during his term as California governor.

"He created the educational fee — a 'fee without purpose.'" She explained that Reagan created the fee first and later found a use for it.

She also cited Reagan's ideological belief that "government should not provide many basic services," including such university-related functions as financial aid and child care.

But she also noted that Reagan kept a heavy hand on the UC curriculum during his tenure as California governor.

Reagan would not allow public instruction on communism and abortion and "supported the purge of former UCSD professor Herbert Marcuse and Black activist Angela Davis," a graduate student of Marcuse's.

Sabo said that although "some of Anderson's present philosophy is very good, in a lot of ways, he strikes me as a born-again progressive."

"A vote for Anderson at this point is a vote for Reagan," she said.

"It's not just a matter of the next four years," Sabo said. "There are possibly five openings on the Supreme Court that could be influenced by this election — that's 20 or 30 years down the line."

Gaines is vice chairperson of the SBPC. Sabo is a former UCSD Associated Students commissioner of external affairs.

key figure in the US-Iranian confrontation, said he hoped "The whole thing" could be over in one week. But he said it was "physically impossible" for the Americans to be freed by Tuesday, Election Day.

The Carter administration has indicated a willingness to discuss the long-awaited Iranian demands. But there was no immediate word from Washington about whether and how the conditions might be met.

When news of the Parliament's action flashed back to the United States at about 4 am, EST yesterday, President Carter broke off a campaign tour in Chicago and flew to Washington, where he conferred with Vice President Walter Mondale, National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brezinski and other aides at the White House.

"Until we see the fine print or understand more clearly the fine print, we cannot see precisely the limits within which we are being asked to act," Secretary of State Edmund Muskie said later on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

The decision came as Iran struggled into the seventh week of war with neighboring Iraq. The Iranians' presumed need for American spare parts for their US-made military equipment was believed to be a major factor in their action now on the hostage question.

The Iranian news agency Pars said the Parliament, with 200 of its 228 members present for the stormy session, voted by a "decisive majority" to approve the four conditions for the hostages' release recommended by a seven-member select committee. The action had been expected for the past week.

According to an unofficial Pars translation of the committee report, Iran is demanding that the United States:

- Make a "firm commitment to avoid all direct or indirect political and military interference" in Iran's affairs.

- Release an estimated $8 billion in Iranian government assets in US banks that were frozen by Carter's executive order last Nov. 14.

- "Cancel and annul" all financial claims against the Iranian government in US courts. It says the US government must guarantee that it, not Iran, will pay any damages awarded in such lawsuits.

- Officially recognize the right of the Iranian government to the deceased shah's wealth and that of his close relatives. Iran also demands that the US president "take all legal and administrative actions necessary to transfer these properties to Iran."

The four basic conditions were set out in September by Khomeini, the Moslem clergyman who led Iran's revolution against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The first condition can be met easily, but each of the other three may present legal problems for the Carter administration.

ASSOCIATED PRESS NEWS BRIEFS

Iraq mounts attack, minister is captured

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iraq mounted an attack on the major Iranian oil refinery city of Abadan yesterday and reported its troops captured Iranian Oil Minister Mohammed Jawad Baqir Tunguyan in a separate ambush.

The official Iraqi news agency said Tunguyan was captured last Friday in an ambush by "special Iraqi patrols" and taken to the Iraqi capital of Baghdad. It gave no other details. The 30-year-old minister took office about two months ago.

The capture of the minister, his deputy and another official was confirmed by the office of Iranian Prime Minister Mohammed Ali Rajai in a broadcast on Tehran Radio.

"The government is honored to find its officials ambushed alongside the people while safeguarding the glorious revolution," the statement said.

Ice Capades tomorrow at the arena

Kicking off a new decade with "The '80s on Ice!," Ice Capades combines some of the finest skating talents in America with hilarious ice comedians when this year's extravaganza opens tomorrow at the San Diego Sports Arena.

Highlighting the fun-filled show "Let's Celebrate" is Freddie Trenkler, on hand to prove that he is "The World's Greatest Clown on Ice." Trenkler's Chaplinesque figure has brought a special brand of humor to audiences since 1940, when he appeared in the first Ice Capades show in Atlantic City.

Ice Capades presents champions on ice with star Charlie Tickner, US World Champion and the first American male figure skater to capture an Olympic medal since 1968, and special guest stars Ludmila Belousova and Oleg Protopopov, twice Olympic and four-times World Pair champions.

Other outstanding champions include US Silver Medalists Gail and Frank, Australian Champion Sharon Burley and Canadian Ice Dance Champions Lorna Wighton and John Dowding. Additional stars include Dawn Wagner, Valerie McBroom and pair skaters Jodi and Tony.

Audiences will see David Kirby's classic style, the dynamic artistry of Michael Shinniman and newcomer to the Ice Capades "Mr. Debonaire" — Brad Doud.

Auditions for ice show to be held on Friday

If ice skating's your thing, it could lead to a career with the world-famous Ice Capades. The traveling show's coaches and scouts are constantly searching for new skating talent for the chorus line, comedy and specialty acts. Although it is not necessary to be a gold medalist to become a member of the Ice Capades, you should be a skater of superior merit, with a knowledge of the basic spins and jumps of a figure skater.

Local skaters are invited to audition after the Friday performance at approximately 10:30 pm at the San Diego Sports Arena. Skaters must be at least 17 years old (if under 18 you must be accompanied by a parent) and have their own skating equipment. Roxanne, Ice Capades Performance Director, and the Ice Capades coaching staff will judge the auditions.

BY PETER MORTENSEN
 News Editor

Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and Libertarian presidential candidate Ed Clark will wind their campaigns down in San Diego late today, the last day to campaign before tomorrow's general election.

Reagan will speak to an expected large crowd gathered in the J.C. Penney's parking lot in the Fashion Valley Shopping Center. Clark plans a cocktail reception with supporters at the Stardust Hotel in Hotel Circle.

President Jimmy Carter, beleaguered by uncertainty surrounding the release of the Iranian hostages, may stop in Los Angeles today during a whirlwind tour of the western states. But Carter announced yesterday that he may suspend his campaign trip to devote his full attention to the hostage situation.

Independent presidential candidate John Anderson made his final California appearance Saturday during a whistle-stop tour between San Jose and San Francisco.

Reagan's appearance, scheduled for 5 pm, will be highlighted by entertainment from the Osmond Family, Blood Sweat and Tears and possibly Bob Hope.

Clark's reception, scheduled for 6 pm, will be followed by a news conference during which he will "summarize the issues and his campaign," according to a Clark campaign worker.

were frozen by a stroke of Carter's pen last November, it may be a problem to "unfreeze" all of them as simply, since courts could decide to use them to pay off claims by US banks and other concerns against the Iranian government.

The Carter administration also has no legal power to "annul" those lawsuits, as demanded in the third condition.

As for the final condition, there is little Carter can do to directly "transfer" Pahlavi wealth to Iran. Again it is a matter for the courts. The Iranians had previously hinted they might be satisfied if the United States provided information that would help them in their court actions to recover the Pahlavi money.
