3.1.8

To
Thomas Hall Esq;
Dear. Rec't.
John.

I take pen in hand to inform you that we are all once more got together again & are returning to our studies with proper diligence after so long an interruption. Mr Poolethwaite's Lectures are already begun, to which I dare say the Young Gentlemen will attend constantly. - I did not come here till Thursday Evening, being detain'd upon the road all Wednesday by the excessive rain, but lay at a Gentle house on Tuesday night, the confinement was not so disagreeable as it would have been at an Inn. -

It is the way of the World to presume very much upon former favors & having obtain'd one or more requests from any person officiously to have others in readiness, which we mean to ask. All that can be pleaded in behalf of such behaviour is that having found such an one ready to oblige & serve us upon former occasions, we are embolden'd to think that he will not easily reject our petition or at least that he will give us convincing reasons for so doing. - But you'll say what means this extraordinary preface? - I know then, Sir, that I am of the number of those, who having already reciev'd great indulencies from yourself & family, am yet about to ask for one more, in which, if I should have the good fortune to succeed the reflecting upon it would ever give me great pleasure. But tho' I address myself to you, I^r on this occasion, yet am I sensible that my application would have been ^{more with} greater propriety to Miss Hall herself, since it is the peculiar privilege of the Lady to appoint (perhaps you now begin to conceive at what I am driving), who shall officiate at (I had almost said) the approaching Solemnity. And far side of the truth, have I not just grounds of conjecturing that the day is not far distant, when a certain amiable young Lady means to make a very deserving & worthy Gentleman completely happy. - I was too diffident & fearful of presuming to make a personal application to Miss Hall on this subject, when I was in Foyne - but if some hapless Clergyman is not already singled out by Miss Hall I ^{you} should see no impropriety in my making such a request. be please^d, I^r to put in a word on my behalf & to assure Miss Hall that I should be truly sensible of the honor of joining her hand, wherever she thinks proper to bestow her heart. - who am, I^r yours & her most oblid Servt

Charles Moore.

Q. As I shall be in a state of disagreeable suspense till I know whether so great an honor is designed me, I beg the favor of an answer as soon as may be convenient.
