President's Message

GO TEAM! And that is just what we are. A team. Everyone works so well together so that we can accomplish all the things that we do. Once again, I want to thank our vice-presidential team of Margaret Acampora, Judy Skelton and Judy Vaquier for a beautiful Fall Membership Brunch. We had 125 attendees, surely either a record or almost a record in attendance. Thanks to all of you who brought guests. And everyone was having such a wonderful time that there were still guests long after the appointed time for ending had past. Sports seems to be high on our list this year too. We have a new Interest Group for Ping Pong. And thank you to our Oceanids Team of Chancellor's Challenge Runners. We had 6 runners/walkers and several "cheer leaders" all wearing our beautiful blue Oceanids T-shirts with lettering done by Maxine Bloor. Sylvia Bal Somerville once again came in first in her division with a time of 35 minutes. I survived with a time under 45 minutes for the 3.4 mile run. Looks like I will have to do a little more conditioning if I am to truly challenge Sylvia. Chancellor Dynes was bested by 154 runners and so the student scholarship fund is a little richer. It was a fun event that we hope more Oceanids will come out and support next year, whether it be as a runner/walker or a supporter/cheer leader. A special kudos to our male Oceanid participants, Richard Somerville and Carl McIlwain.

We now look forward to the holiday season. See you at our joint Holiday Party with Friends of UCSD Healthcare on Friday, December 7 at the International Center. Carole Z.

Holiday Party

This year you will be guests of Oceanids and Friends of UCSD Healthcare!!

No money to bring, no fingerfoods to prepare. Just come and join us for Holiday cheer. Sing-along entertainment will be led by Evelyn and Sandy Lakoff. Music for dancing will also be provided. So, come and enjoy yourselves. But do not forget to call for a reservation. (See front page for all information.) Help us "decorate" a tree with food vouchers that will be distributed by the Department of Social Work to families and individuals in need at UCSD Medical Center. We invite you to bring a food voucher from a local grocer (in denominations no greater than $10); and we will convert it into a decoration for you to hang on our Food Voucher Tree. Food vouchers make a big difference to these families at Holiday times and benefit the children too.

WELCOME NEW MEMBERS!!!!

HELP! I'm drowning. P.S. I just did.

Here comes the perennial school assignment: WHAT I DID THIS SUMMER.

Well, I did plums. "What's an easy, rewarding minimal care fruit tree?" I asked my local nursery man and the answer was "a SATSUMA plum", and yes it will do in semi-shade and yes it can handle adobe soil, and yes it will still thrive with spotty watering. So OK, a few years back I paid $5.99 for a spindly unpromising bare-root Satsuma plum tree. Insuciantly I dug a wee 12-inch hole in my rock hard adobe soil. Colder weather came. You must understand it was a San Diego winter and it rained a bit. As the saying goes:

Spring comes in the summer
Summer in the fall
Fall comes in the winter
And winter not at all.

Early spring followed. "How you doing?" I asked in my best broken Japanese. It answered with a sprig of tiny white blossoms. Early summer it had set fruit: 3 plums. Actually 4 but one shriveled and fell off. I choked back a tiny oriental tear. "Good girl," I said, "you're making me very happy." Soon it was fall, which comes sometime between December and March. The tree shed its leaves, dutifully, and then it was spring again. "How you do now?" (My Japanese vocabulary is limited.) It answered with a small cloud of white blossoms. Just beautiful! I gathered my small family of one to view and admire it, after which it set 26 plums. Yum.

Spring comes in the summer,
Summer in the fall.
Fall comes in the winter,
And winter not at all.

"How's it going?" I mumbled to my SATSUMA in halting Japanese. By now the tree had more than sprigs. It had real branches, and soon turned into a lovely white cloud of blossoms. When the many petals dropped off, I had a white carpet all around. Beautiful. A lot of plums followed; too, too many to count.

And so the years passed, with every year triple and quadruple the number of plums, often breaking a branch here and there, so heavy with fruit it was. We ate plums. I gave away plums. We ate more plums. I made plum jam. We ate plums. I gave away plums. More jam. We ate plums. I made compote. I gave away more plums. I made compote. I made chutney. I made plum cake. I made fruitcake. I became a fruitcake. We ate plums. I gave away more plums. We ate plums. My family threatened to move out. I invented a new typ of cake with 95% plums and 5% batter. The verdict came back that it was not a recognizable cake; a pudding to be exact. So what's wrong with pudding? I responded by inventing a wondrously thick syrup, called pulp.

Then it was fall again. My tree once more shed its leaves. we stood to assess this wondrous tree. It had spread out wide like a super beach umbrella, but so low, that I had been forced to a crawling position to collect it's fruit. The time had come for a pruning. They have pruning instruction pamphlets at that nursery. I found that aside from dealing with plums, plums, plums, I could still read. I bowed low in my best Japanese mode and pruned my miracle tree.

The pruning was a propitious move. My SATSUMA slowed down a little come summer. We harvested a reasonable number of plums, indulging ourselves consuming the jam, chutney, relish, syrup, pulp, defrosted cakes, puddings of the previous year. "Nice going," I said to my tree. It was the millennium. Everybody understands that. I did not say it in Japanese.

The year 2001 dawned and that summer brought a deluge! Not rain, mind you. PLUMS! Plums, plums, plums, and more plums. While I have always envied the Noah family and their wondrous collection of animals, tethered, I hope to masts and railings or roaming about freely below deck, Mrs. Noah no doubt in pursuit with her scooper, her I did not envy. Ah so, plums is better, I hummed in elementary Japanese.

Plums, plums, plums, jam, jam, jam, relish, relish, relish, etc. (See above.) I gave plums away to neighbors, the mail man, friends, more friends (even those across town, as well as those living in the boonies). I secretly slipped bags of plums with my payments to the grocery check-out ladies. When I noticed that my friends and neighbors were drawing their blinds and locking their doors when they saw me approaching, I left bags of plums under their garden bushes. We ate more plums, delighted to see raccoons, rats, skunks, squirrels, birds, etc. sharing our bounty.

Noah still scanning the skies for the possible last of the pterodactyls while Mrs. Noah still wielding her shovel and about to hang out the wash (plenty of water here): a double take! Sees an Alonythectoptopotus (a precursor of our modern dove) alight on the rail. What more she groans. Before she realizes her feelings of great relief, the horde of critters in their haste to offload, sweep her along onto the muddy shore. Did she wallow?

I digress. A San Diego fall approaches. To prune or not to prune? Ah So - pronounce this as you would a sigh of either relief or premonition ----- whatever. I'm skedaddling back to bed with my covers pulled high over and beyond my head.

Interest Group Reports 2000-2001

(some-not all!!)

(Please find the information about whom to contact to join in the interest groups' schedules)

Avi Set

The Avi Set meets at eight in the morning once a month to visit a variety of bird habitats around San Diego County. Last year we found an infrequently seen Eurasian Widgeon at the Flood Control Channel and a Warbling Vireo at the Cabrillo National Monument. We have visited the Audubon Society's Silverwood Wildlife Sanctuary at different times of the year to see the variety of migrating birds which stop there. Two more of our favorite sites are Santee Lakes in Lakeside and Mission Trails Regional Park. Whether you have been a birder for some time or are a recent enthusiast, come join our congenial group.

Devilish Diners

The Devilish Diners is a relatively new interest group. We meet for lunch once a month, no set date within the month has yet been established. Look in Bear Facts for the times. We sometimes combine with other groups such as the garden group, and that has been most successful. Our purpose is to have fun and enjoy the camaraderie of each other in the group. All are welcome.

Evening Bridge

The Couples Evening Bridge Group meets at the homes of the members. With the increase in traffic on the roads on Friday nights, we decided to change the day we play to the fourth Saturday of the month. We also changed our starting time to 7:00 p.m. The hosts serve wine and cheese which contributes to the party atmosphere of the evening. There are three or four tables playing each month.

Sounding Board

The purpose of Sounding Board is to learn about San Diego and the world while enjoying lunch with friends. Subjects run from the arts to history and medicine.

We meet the first Thursday of each month in a room at the Faculty Club at 12 noon for lunch and a speaker. If you are not a Faculty Club member you can get your lunch and pay when you get back to the room. There is more Faculty Club parking now which is a help.

Many years ago Frieda Urey started Sounding Board because of her interest in politics and current matters. Then everyone brought a sandwich to her house and they had great discussions. We have vigorous discussions now too.

Some of our speakers last year were: someone from the district attorney's office who talked about what to do about fraud, a person from the UCSD Landscape and Buildings Department who explained about all the new buildings that would be going up on campus, a spokesman from RSVP, a volunteer branch of the police department, and Fred Spiess who told us about the new UCSD campus in Merced.

Wine Tasting II

This group started one year ago as a spin-off from the Wine Tasting group to initiate newcomers and all other UCSD members to the joy of wine and good food.

We usually meet once a month in the evening, at various members homes. We sample four different wines, along with bread and cheeses or with a thematic dinner, and vote for our favorites.

We are open to new members.
