Warren Profs Win UCSD College Bowl

BY WILLIAM HAMILTON
Staff Writer

The Warren College team, led by Provost Lea Rudee, defeated Muir College in the final game of the first faculty College Bowl competition, 285-165 last Friday evening before an enthusiastic and vociferous crowd.

The contest, modeled after the popular General Electric College Bowl of the sixties, pitted representative faculty members from each of the four colleges against each other in a tournament designed to test general knowledge.

Questions ran the gamut from literature to physics and were designed to stump the contestants and offer the audience an opportunity to test their own knowledge.

The event was moderated by Ed Lazarus, who made his last public mark last year trying to find answers to Richard Nixon's questions as a researcher.

1979 Freshmen Both Liberal, Conservative

BY ALICE ROCKEY

— 51 percent of 1979's university freshmen feel that sex is OK if people like each other;

— more students at private universities want to be lawyers than students at public schools;

— half of the nation's students favor the legalization of marijuana, but half also "strongly agree" that homosexuality is wrong.

A picture of the nation's 1979 freshman class (this year's sophomores) as liberal, but sometimes a lot more conservative than is widely believed, emerges from an annual UCLA-Cooperative Institutional Research nationwide study of the demographics of college.

362 schools were surveyed by the program, which has been doing this sort of thing for

Congressional Vote on Registration Due Thursday

Passage Seems Certain — But Women Safe

From the Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter's draft registration plan, a loser in its first congressional test, faces critical votes this week on the program's future and whether women should be registered along with men.

The big question is whether the 54-member House Appropriations Committee will approve the money the administration needs to begin registration this summer of young men, aged 19 and 20.

On the other issue — registration of women — the verdict appears certain. The House Armed Services Personnel subcommittee is expected to fulfill the prophecy of House leaders and vote overwhelmingly Thursday against women's registration.

The outcome of the dispute over funds to register men seems less certain, however.

Last week, a subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee voted 6-6 against Carter's proposal — a sharp setback to the administration's plans.

Instead, the subcommittee approved only enough money to set up a standby system in which registration would not start until the president ordered military mobilization in an emergency.

The full committee tentatively plans to meet either Wednesday or Thursday on the issue, and administration lobbyists and allies were working furiously to overturn the subcommittee's decision.

"We will not allow the president to be embarrassed," House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, vowed last week after the subcommittee's vote. He said he was confident the full committee would reverse the subcommittee.

Rep. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., a leading proponent of registration was hopeful of a victory but cautioned that the vote would be close.

While President Carter's plan to have women register for military service appears headed for defeat in Congress, an obscure Ohio law gives the governor power to draft women anytime he sees fit.

That power goes back to 1961 when the Ohio law providing for an organized militia was changed to include all able-bodied citizens of the state instead of just able-bodied males.

The unorganized militia — which has not been used since 1862 — includes all Ohioans who are not in the organized militia.

Saxon to Warn About Possible Fee Increases

BY JOHN HONDROS

Associate News Editor

UC President David Saxon plans to send letters to all students in the university and their parents telling them tuition is likely if Proposition 9 (Jarvis II) passes in June.

Saxon is still putting together the letter, which will detail how the university plans to cope with the possible budgetary constraints, and will send it "sometime during spring quarter," according to Sara Molla, Saxon's press secretary.

New Perspectives Goal of "Hemispheres"

BY MARK SMITH

A new student-produced magazine will begin publication on campus next quarter with the goal of "shaking people up."

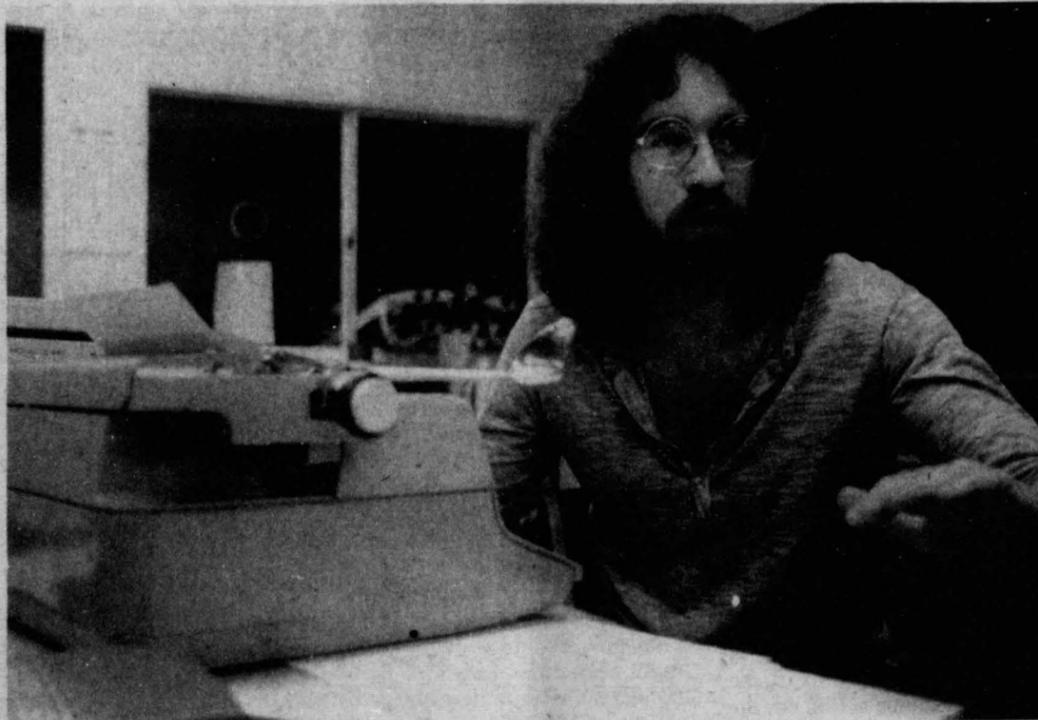

Founder-publisher Andy Caffrey, a Warren junior majoring in history, said the first issue will appear about April 1 and will include a feature on the metaphysics of Punk Rock, a history of Afghanistan and a forum of opinions on US-Soviet relations.

* Caffrey said the first issue will contain about 60 pages of illustrated articles by "volunteer" reporters.

He said the first issue will contain no color but that publication is assured by $900 funding he has received from SCURI and the AS.

"It is not a one shot deal," Caffrey said. "Presenting the first issue as a model, we will approach business, both local and national, for advertising to help sustain the magazine in the future."

The title of the magazine will be Hemispheres — expressing the essence of the Caffrey ideas.

He says he wants to stimulate readers with the global scope of human affairs, which he believes may no longer be confined within nationalistic boundaries, and to promote interplay between the logical-calculating side of the brain and the subjective, emotional and artful hemisphere.

"What we want to do," Caffrey said, "is to challenge popular presumptions so often presented today as truisms, especially within academic circles.

"In other words, we want to expose people on this campus to the wide diversity of perspectives that actually exist on vital issues before the public."

"For example, instead of reporting only the scientists' views on recombinant DNA, we will provide the views of, say, a prominent anthropologist, a Spanish literature professor and a pregnant 14-year-old.

Caffrey believes that such an eclectic approach will allow people an alternative to "blind acceptance" of certain traditional perspectives.

"It's my own personal philosophy," Caffrey said, "that the mode of thought emphasized at UCSD tends towards isolationism. The student is usually provided with only one framework, one way of looking at a certain subject. This is the sort of thought we want to get away from."

"And, with the magazine format, as opposed to that of a newspaper, there should be enough space for groups of articles regarding one given issue. By printing three articles together, readers can compare the assumptions and biases of each, and therefore, hopefully gain a more holistic view of the situation."

To Iranians, Apology Isn't Humiliating

BY WILLIAM O. BEEMAN

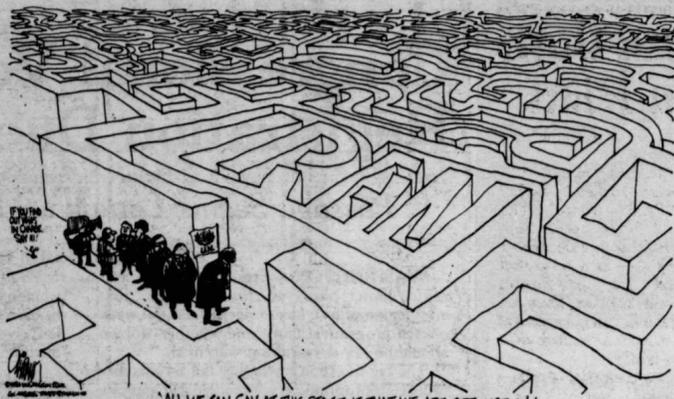

Christian doctrine has it that repentance is good for the soul. In dealing with the Islamic Republic of Iran in the present hostage crisis, President Carter may find that it is good for politics as well.

William O. Beeman, a Brown University anthropologist, spent seven of the last 10 years living and studying in Iran. He wrote this story for Pacific News Service.

As the fog begins to rise over negotiations for the release of the 50 Americans now held in the embassy, it looks more and more as though the crucial factor—the bottom line—is going to be whether Carter will apologize to Iran for past US actions in that country.

That proposal faces substantial resistance in Washington. For one thing, Carter and his advisors are reluctant to accept responsibility for the behavior of five previous administrations, three of which were Republican. Moreover, an apology would give the lie to American assertions that our Iranian policy, however misguided, has always been based on the best of intentions.

But that would simply confirm what most of the world already believes: the United States shares some blame for the excesses of the old regime. The CIA engineered the coup which placed the Shah back on the throne in 1953, and US arms made him the most powerful figure in the Persian Gulf.

The idea of an apology is not new to the diplomatic process. Treaties, for example, often include language which acknowledges past abuses in the relations between two nations. In their most extreme form—the document of surrender—they may even extract reparations, which amount to an economic apology.

There is also established precedent for a more limited apology by the US. The North Koreans required an admission that the spy ship Pueblo had violated their territorial waters in 1968 before they would release its crew.

But there is more than diplomatic language at work in this case. Iran and the United States are caught on the horns of a basic cultural misunderstanding over the meaning of an apology.

Thanks in large part to the emotional way in which the administration and the media have treated the hostage issue, Americans are prone to view it as a test of the national mettle. Instead of a diplomatic device, an apology to the Iranians is regarded as a kind of penance which runs against the American grain. We advise our sons and daughters never to apologize, never to make excuses. John Wayne and Vince Lombardi never apologized. It's something that Americans do with resentment and loathing. Red-faced and ashamed, we mumble our apologies and sink off into the dark, hating whoever it is that forces us to humiliate ourselves.

Not so in Iran. Apology there is not an ordeal of recrimination for sins committed in the past. It is a watershed in a relationship, the beginning of a new level of understanding between two parties who have been estranged. Iranians desiring to resolve old conflicts often confess to horrible things that they never did in order to prove their sincerity.

What follows such a confession is a joyful reconciliation with embraces and oaths of eternal loyalty. Afterwards, the two parties are closer than ever.

Even under the regime of the Shah, student dissidents—no matter how significant their crimes against the state—were welcomed back to Iran and totally reinstated as citizens if they would make public confession repudiating their actions. The style of their confession is worth President Carter's notice, because it suggests a formula for reconciliation that would spare us humiliation as well.

Most often, these former dissidents simply stated that they had been "led astray" by malevolent third parties—persons who were trying to harm them and their relationship with the government. This statement was usually followed by resolutions asserting that the confessor now intended to govern his life according to correct principles.

"Being led astray from the path," is a theme that Carter could probably adopt as the basis for a conciliatory move toward Iran. It would avoid the tricky issue of assigning direct responsibility for past sins. The Iranians would understand it immediately. The breach would be healed. Carter could then reassert US good faith with more credibility.

AP NEWSBRIEFS

Soviets, Chinese Both Reject Afghan Plan

Soviet and Chinese commentators reacted coldly to international proposals to create a neutral Afghanistan, but for different reasons.

A senior Soviet commentator lumped Western European appeals for Afghan neutralization together with U.S. demands for a Soviet troop pullout as "political decorations" concealing a Western plot "against peace and for a return to the cold war."

The Chinese commentary said "no one is in a position to interfere with Afghan affairs, which can be handled by the Afghan people themselves alone." It also repeated Peking's demands that the Soviets withdraw their troops from the Central Asian nation, now estimated at 75,000 men.

Radio Kabul said in a broadcast last night that the Afghan government released 112 persons arrested after anti-Soviet rioting in the capital Feb. 22-23. The broadcast, monitored in Islamabad, Pakistan, said the prisoners were released at the urging of a commission set up by Afghan President Babrak Karmal to investigate the disturbances.

The violent protests in Kabul were crushed by Soviet and Afghan troops. The Russians were sent into Afghanistan in late December and took part in a coup that replaced one pro-Soviet regime with another. They are helping the Kabul government battle the anti-communist Moslem rebels.

Moscow and Kabul claim the United States, China, Britain, Pakistan and others are arming and training the rebels. These countries have denied the charges.

A report from rebel sources in the southwestern province of Kandahar said Soviet aircraft attacked a mosque at Kherqa Mubarak, killing 50 Moslems who were mourning four relatives killed earlier in a Soviet artillery attack. There was no independent confirmation of the report.

There had been a series of apparent Soviet signals in recent days indicating the Kremlin might favor some kind of compromise to end the Afghan crisis.

Militants Free Some Hostages

BOGOTA, Colombia — Leftist militants holding the Dominican Republic Embassy freed five of their estimated 41 hostages yesterday after their negotiators met for the first time with Colombian government officials.

U.S. Ambassador Diego C. Asencio and 15 other foreign envoys were still being held and an official at the U.S. Embassy who asked not to be identified said of the leftists "They'll keep the big ones."

It was not immediately clear when the talks would resume, or if any other hostages would be released soon.

Tito Still Really Sick

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Doctors of gravely ill 87-year-old President Josip Broz Tito said yesterday his heart had weakened further in a new general deterioration of his fragile health.

The presidential medical panel said it was continuing what it called "indispensable" intensive care measures for the man who has been Yugoslavia's president for 35 years.

Tito was confined for the 51st day at the Ljubljana Clinical Center in Slovenia, suffering from heart and kidney weaknesses, pneumonia and an undescribed bleeding problem.

Ford: Reagan Cannot Win

LOS ANGELES - Former President Gerald R. Ford says that Ronald Reagan cannot win the presidency because he is too conservative and that he would himself become a candidate if offered a "broad-based" invitation from the Republican Party.

Ford said he would have to make up his mind about entering the presidential race by April Fool's Day.

Letter to the Editor

Post-War Vietnam Proves Blame Shared

Editor: Did the Committee for World Democracy actually write the reply (Daily Guardian, Feb. 26) to a previous letter questioning the fairness of the film Hearts and Minds? The tract might as well have been written under the auspices of the Vietnamese politburo. Its jingoistic presentation of facts has an odd parallel in the American cold war rhetoric of the 1950s.

The war in Vietnam cannot be realistically described as a simple struggle between right and wrong. Hearts and Minds shows well the American hypocrisy and brutality that was perpetrated upon Vietnam. But to assert that the North Vietnamese communists are blameless for this mess is sheer folly. Ho Chi Minh and his cohorts were not "freedom fighters" who believed in liberal democratic principles, as the committee implies with its quote from their Declaration of Independence. They were, in fact, hard-core Russian-backed guerrillas who wished to create a totalitarian state with themselves at its head and to foment unrest and insurrection in neighboring nations, democratic and undemocratic alike.

The proof of this lies in the recent past and the present, after the North Vietnamese took control of the south. Anyone who speaks out against government policy, or even belongs to the "wrong ethnic group, is either forcibly "re-educated," exterminated or sent out to test his luck on the high seas. Invasions of Cambodia and Laos along with Russian-inspired provocations against China have characterized Hanoi's foreign policy. The present government of Vietnam has confirmed the worst fears of the American planners who involved us in the war.

But the Committee for World Democracy seems to ignore all of the considerable faults with the present Vietnamese regime. It attacks films on Vietnam that dare to show violence perpetrated by both sides. In short, the committee rejects any viewpoint of the war that does not sanctify the small elite group of the Stalinists presently in control of most of Indochina. Indeed, the name this group has chosen seems in light of their letter to be a textbook example of doublespeak and deception.

Why Fight For System?

Editor:

If it is true that the oil companies make more money from domestic than foreign oil, I'd like to see more information on that. From what I've read the companies have argued that price-controls on domestic oil have curtailed their incentive to look for it. That's why they are spending a fortune lobbying for decontrol.

Also, a frequent apology they make for their exorbitant profits is that the big profits are made overseas, not domestically. (Thus letting us know it's o.k.—they're ripping off those foreigners, not us.) I speak only of the reported profits, not those that may be masked by "creative" bookkeeping.

When one writes, as I did, that wars should not be fought for Exxon, Chase Manhattan or someone's political ambitions, the issue goes beyond this or that oil company to the question of who or what wars are fought for. I don't think anyone can reasonably argue that our foreign policy is not controlled by a combination of the interests listed above—i.e., monopoly capitalism and the politicians who, by and large, do their bidding.

To think otherwise is to be naive to an extreme. Our policy is not designed to enhance freedom and morality—if it were we would do all we could to bring freedom to South Africa; we would not support the junta in Argentina that kills and imprisons Jews and anyone to the left of Genghis Khan; we would not have overthrown a democratic government in Chile and brought to power a junta which buries human beings alive.

The only freedom our foreign policy supports is the freedom of monopoly capital to make profits—our leaders are not so concerned that Third World peoples will fall into Communist hands as they are that those peoples will deny them the "right" to profit from Third World resources.

Another argument frequently brought up in the draft debate is that students are merely indulging a passion for 60s nostalgia. This is a rather bizarre conception that would confine social protest to one decade. In reality, there is not a single decade of US history in which significant protest cannot be found.

True, it was only in the 1960s that students became a significant part of social protest, but maybe that has something to do with the fact that only in that decade did colleges open up to more than white, upper-middle class students. In any case, this nation has a remarkably ahistorical consciousness, and the attempt to claim that social protest arose, flourished and failed forever within the span of one brief decade of human history is one of its more ridiculous manifestations.

One more point. An excellent letter to the recent issue of People's Voice pointed out what has seldom been articulated in the draft debate: that without a draft young men who have been economically coerced will serve as cannon fodder. These are poor people, a disproportionate number of them black, whose only option in a depressed economy is the military service.

It is a fact that most people do not get bothered until their own interests are threatened.

Triton catcher Jim Moffatt waits for relay in UCSD's 17-4 loss to USD earlier this season. UCSD will visit the Toreros this Tuesday in hopes of regaining their winning ways and avenging the Feb. 12th defeat.

Triton Nine Loses 2 Close Games

BY TIM LIOTTA
Sports Editor

Even though cold winter winds whipped across Olsen Field Saturday afternoon, it was the Biola College Eagles which gave the UCSD baseball team a cold slap in the face, sweeping a doubleheader from the Tritons, 2-0 and 8-6. The Tritons' record dropped to 6-4 but more alarmingly, they opened their league play at 0-2.

In the first game Triton senior Tom Nicholson and Biola's Jim Price squared off in a classic pitching duel. Through eight innings, both had three-hit shutouts to their credit. Unfortunately it was the Biola bats which woke up in the ninth nailing Nicholson for two runs.

Nicholson has been plagued by lack of support from the rest of the Triton lineup in each of his last two outings. The Tritons haven't pushed a single run across the plate and have only managed seven hits. Yet, Nicholson manages to keep the Tritons in the games, allowing only three runs and nine hits in his last 16 innings for a 2.00 ERA. For all his work, his reward is an 0-2 record.

Women's Basketball Team Loses to Teams They've Beaten Earlier in Year

BY SAMANTHA ROBY
Sports Writer

Attempting to bounce back from a loss to California Baptist College the previous Tuesday, the Triton women's basketball team was routed by the Loyola-Marymount University Lions 59-38 last Thursday.

UCSD has lacked concentration in their last two contests, missing shots, rebounds and passes. The LMU game was a very physical one with a lot of jostling inside, but the contact made no difference: the Triton's couldn't turn themselves around.

Loyola's size troubled the Tritons as they consistently outrebounded the Tritons on both the offensive and defensive boards. Their ability to work the ball inside forced UCSD into foul trouble. The Tritons trailed at half time 29-18.

The second half saw Loyola combine some fine outside shooting with the same inside penetration they enjoyed in the first half for a potent offensive attack. Things did not look so bleak last Tuesday.

The women fell to California Baptist College of Riverside at home, 66-59. The ball was dribbled, passed and turned over for about one and a half minutes before the first basket was sunk by UCSD's Jill Keene.

UCSD dominated the game in the early going: their shots were more accurate, they were hustling and outrebounding a CBC team plagued by turnovers.

The Daily Guardian Sports

With five minutes left to play in the first half, UCSD went up 25-24. Two minutes later, the Tritons lost their concentration and suddenly they went down 31-27 with 1:58 left to go in the half.

During the last three minutes of the half, CBC scored 14 points (while the Tritons were scoring three) with a barrage of outside shots. The half-time buzzer sounded with the scoreboard showing CBC-38, UCSD-30.

The teams, fairly evenly matched and relatively short, resorted mainly to the outside shots. When either team tried to drive inside, there was congestion, confusion and, most of the time, no basket.

Battle For 2nd Place Lost

Volleyball Men Displaced By Northridge in 4 Games

BY SCOTT ALLISON
Staff Writer

The men's volleyball team was foiled in their quest for second place in league competition Saturday night when they succumbed to the Cal State Northridge Matadors, three games to one.

The loss dropped the Tritons' record to 3-3. The Matadors now boast a 4-2 mark, while Hawaii remains perched atop the league with a perfect 5-0 season.

The Northridge match was a superb slugfest. It featured hitting as hard and accurate as any Triton game this season. Hal Jacobs punished the ball numerous times, and Bob Rhodes put in another consistent offensive performance. But in the end, Northridge simply took advantage of its enormous front line height and crushed the ball a few more times than UCSD.

To counter Matador height, UCSD Coach Doug Dannevik started Rick Cazares instead of Chris Wagner in game one. The strategy worked, but still the Tritons caught Northridge playing one of their better games this year. The Matadors survived a fierce Triton rally at the end of the contest and won, 18-16.

"Again, losing that first game was a critical mistake," said Dannevik. Indeed, the spikers have managed only once this year to win after spotting their opponents the first game.

The second contest was also a barnburner, but with the same results. The 15-12 Northridge win left the Tritons in a situation where they had to pull out a miraculous three game sweep of last year's NAIA champs in order to win.

And though Jacobs and Rhodes and the rest played a gutsy match, Northridge refused to buckle after being dominated by UCSD in game three. The Matadors sewed up the match with a 15-9 victory in the fourth contest.

"We still had lapses," said Dannevik, adding that he was basically pleased with his team's performance. "Their defense came on strong toward the end, and they capitalized on our errors."

"It's frustrating to lose these close ones all the time," voiced Assistant Coach Mitch Kobara. "And there's no excuse, because we have the talent."

The Tritons still have their sights set on second place in their league. But to do so would almost necessitate a victory over Hawaii when UCSD travels there in three weeks.

Not everyone is the same, thank goodness. So at Bank of America, we don't think our jobs should be either.

Fortunately, we're big enough (and progressive enough) to want college graduates with all kinds of backgrounds. Business majors, yes. But also people who are just interested in business.

Just what opportunities are we talking about?

Well, you can work with urban community leaders. Or show young entrepreneurs how to set up a new business. Or advise California's farmers on their growing concerns.

And what about opportunities for advancement?

That's up to you, of course. But when you show us you're ready to move, we'll give you the chance to prove it.

So consider Bank of America. We've got careers you can really sink your teeth into.

"Sizwe Bansi" Invitation Unprecedented

BY LYNETTE TOM
Senior Staff Writer

Sizwe Bansi Is Dead is a play that has crossed two oceans and spanned three continents. Since its first production in 1974, it has toured to England, Ireland, South Africa, and the United States, received 1974 Tony Awards for its actors/co-creators John Kani and Winston Ntshona and its playwright/director Athol Fugard, and obtained the title as New York's best Broadway play of 1975. UCSD drama graduates John Wesley Huston, Jr. and James Avery have recreated the roles played by Kani and Ntshona, while UCSD Lecturer Luther James has taken the directoral duties in the Southern California Black Repertory Theater's 1978 and 1979 productions. As a result of the latter performance, Sizwe Bansi Is Dead will travel north as an entry in the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland, considered to be one of the most notable events held on the West Coast. According to James, such a decision is unheard of.

"The festival originates its own plays and engages its own directors," he explained. "So, it's unprecedented that a play should originate from somewhere else and be invited to their repertory."

The invitation came in light of last year's engagement to the UC campuses. Among the audience at Davis was the managing director of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival.

"The managing director was so struck with the production that he decided to take the whole cast up to Oregon, of which we're very glad," said James.

Sizwe Bansi Is Dead is a candid and cold portrait of South African society, as seen through the eyes of three black men: Styles (Huston), Sizwe Bansi (Avery), and Buntu (Huston). The story of apartheid has led to Kani and students who are having the opportunity earned by their work to enter the professional theater at a prestigious cultural festival," he continued. "We're very honored to be able to bring this about, through the quality of work they could do."

Ntshona's imprisonment in their own country and Fugard's exile in Europe. By contrast, the audience reaction to the UCSD production has been, in James' words, "always riotous, with a standing ovation."

"It is noteworthy that the play started here on the campus and featured two

In addition to Sizwe Bansi Is Dead, The Island will be seen in the Oregon Shakespearean Festival. Another collaboration by Fugard, Kani and Ntshona, the play tells of the experiences of two cellmates at a political prison in South Africa. Huston and Avery will portray the characters. The two productions will alternate performances during their season from March 29 to Nov. 1.

Jazz Groups Get Together

"Le Jazz Hot," as the French call it, will sizzle in performance by UCSD jazz ensembles under the direction of Jimmy Cheatham on Wednesday, March 5 in Mandeville Auditorium.

Some people envision jazz as the "Greats," while others see it as the "Big Band Era," New Orleans Blues, or Dixieland jazz. Whatever facet of jazz it may be, the common link of all is the dedication and love of the musicians who play it. The 25 members of the UCSD Jazz Ensemble, as well as the members of the smaller jazz combos, have demonstrated the enthusiasm in previous concerts performed to full houses. They will do so again on March 5 when they perform music by such jazz masters as Duke Ellington, direction of Joseph Gyetvai.

Admission is $1 and will be contributed to the scholarship fund.

Local author Joan Lindgren will read her translations of Pablo Neruda's later poems tonight at DG Wills Bookstore at 7:30.

The UCSD New Poetry Series will present poet-author Charles Wright reading from his works Wednesday, March 12 at 4 pm in the Revelle Formal Lounge. The reading is free to the public.

Women Cagers Lose Chance at Playoffs

Hope glimmered with six and a half minutes left to play when Womack scored and then rebounded on a missed CBC basket attempt. In another 45 seconds, Keene put up another jump-shot to make the score 58-49 CBC.

The Tritons were fouled all over the court, but failed to capitalize, missing a good percentage of their free-throws. Determinedly, UCSD built up their position to the closest they had been since the first, 60-56.

With 2:30 left to play, UCSD pulled to within three points of CBC, but for all the emotion and well-executed shots, it was too little, too late. The Tritons couldn't catch CBC, and stood defeated at 66-59.

Up until Tuesday, the Tritons were tied for second in their league and appeared the Tritons fall behind after just two innings, 6-0. Tom Schwarz, who has had a tough time finding his rhythm this season, was knocked around for eight runs before handing the pitching duties over to Paul Schmuck in the fifth inning.

UCSD wouldn't roll over, though, chipping away at the Eagle lead with one run in the fourth and three more in the sixth. Pat McGovern and Bob Allen lined key singles in the sixth inning rally.

The bottom of the ninth saw the Tritons still scrapping. Scarafoni walked. Sharpe forced him at second and then Brett Sandstrom drilled a triple over the Biola rightfielder's head, later scoring on a Biola error.

headed for regionals. Their record is now 5-6 and hopes for a berth in regionals have vanished. They will probably finish third in their league.

The Tritons have been handicapped by the loss of a key starter, Wendy Nakayama, due to a leg injury. Before her injury, she had been averaging 15 points per game. It was an untimely loss for the Tritons.

UCSD hadn't played for a week prior to Tuesday's contest. Coach Judy Malone attributes their lack of motivation and concentration on the court to the loss of Nakayama coupled with the long layoff which left them cold. UCSD has previously beaten both of these teams with no problem.

The Tritons just didn't have the power to put it together last week, after Thursday's game, Malone commented, "I'm disappointed, so is the team."

The Tritons travel to USD this Tuesday in hopes of avenging a 17-4 thrashing they took at the hands of the Toreros earlier this season.

The System

Continued from page 2 but it would be pathetic if a significant number of the current protestors did not come to recognize (and do something about) the fact that the injustice and misfortune they now sense is part of a much larger and deeper problem—namely, a society which is unjust and corrupt at the core, but which can be changed.

Freshmen Present Paradox

14 years. Each received the national report and a localized report, but UCSD hasn't been surveyed since 1969, so no campus data was available.

As far as government regulations are concerned, 79 percent felt that the government is not adequately controlling pollution and 71.1 percent felt that the government is not protecting the consumer.

77.3 percent agree that inflation is our biggest domestic problem and 88.1 percent believe that the energy shortage is causing the depression.

31.4 percent of all freshmen polled agreed that they would not obey laws conflicting with their own views and 33.6 percent felt that the death penalty should be abolished. When asked by the CIRP if women should get job equality, 94.1 percent of the students agreed. But, 23 percent of the freshman population polled felt that women's activities were best confined to the home.

57.2 percent of the freshmen favored legalized abortion and 43 percent agreed that people should live together before getting married.

Closer to home, 13.5 percent felt that college grades should be abolished and 73.9 percent agreed that students should help in evaluating the faculty.

78.8 percent freshmen felt that colleges do not have the right to ban speakers, only 69.4 percent felt that colleges shouldn't regulate student publications, leaving the rest in opposition to most courts, the first amendment and traditional perceptions of the leftist student.

Depending on the field, a tenth to a fifth believe they need remedial educational help, and express dissatisfaction with their high school curriculum.

And affirmative action notwithstanding, most college students are white, middle-income and live at home.

Economics and race are tied to the survey notes. Three times as many students in black colleges for example, come from families below the poverty line as students in predominantly white schools.

Saxon Will Warn About Jarvis 2

However, she added, "President Saxon has indicated that no campuses will close as a result of these cuts."

The letter-to-be had the UC vice chancellors of student affairs scratching their heads in curiosity over its content in a systemwide meeting with the AS presidents here last week.

"We really don't have anything to say because we haven't seen the letter," Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Richard Armitage told The Daily Guardian.

The vice chancellors thus spent the quarterly meeting speculating on what effects Proposition 9 would have on the student affairs budgets, and discussing would-be budget priorities.

The vice chancellors and student representatives agreed that implementing a tuition fee would lead to an increased need for financial aid, Armitage said.

"A major question is what proportion of the fees should go toward financial aid to meet the increased costs of education. How will students become eligible? Where will the money come from? It's been coming from education fees, but will that be enough to maintain the present system and provide access to the increasing number of minority students coming to the university through this aid?" Armitage said.

They discussed the possibility of using registration fees to offset financial aid constraints, he said.

AS President Carlos Montalvo, leading students opposed to that idea, described the idea as "illegitimate...reg fees are supposed to fund student services."

Armitage said he also resists the ideas of using reg fees to support academic programs, but added, "If it's to help financial aid, maybe we'll have to."

The students and vice chancellors both admitted that clearer guidelines for reg fee used need to be established.

The student representatives at the meeting questioned how much student input would be allowed in handling budgetary decisions if Proposition 9 passes.

Warren College Wins

Lazarus is also active at Revelle College.

Some observations from the amused crowd:

— the highly-touted and perhaps overrated Revelle College squad headed by Provost Chia-Wei Woo, failed to make it to the final round, giving some to offer the theory that a Renaissance education is a worthless concept in the 20th century.

— although most of the questions were geared towards academia, there was a smattering of trivia which served the purpose of demonstrating that the University's commitment to producing educationally-well-rounded graduates has done about as much for the faculty as it has for students.

— that Muir was defeated in the final round is attributable to the fact that the arts, humanities, and social sciences were the fields of expertise of three of the four team members. Sadly, the questions asked had actual answers, which rendered their skills useless.

One must concede, however that a university professor cannot be expected to know whose picture is on the $10,000 bill, considering that UC budget cuts have made it questionable whether any faculty member will see that much money in a lifetime.
