

"Mixed Bag" to be held for upcoming benefit

April 14, 1969

A "Mixed Bag" show of talent, for the benefit of the upcoming "Black Arts Rediscovered" exhibit, will be held at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 23, in Revelle Commons at the University of California, San Diego.

The benefit show will include at least eight individual musical acts and a light show. Admission is $1.50 for the general public and $1.00 for UCSD students.

"Black Arts Rediscovered" is a major exhibit of Afro-American cultural traditions co-sponsored by the La Jolla Museum of Art and UCSD and scheduled for the La Jolla Museum of Art next February. The exhibition is being organized to illustrate the development of Black Art from its African background to its subsequent influences on European art and its final emergence as a new Black Art in America.

Proceeds from the "Mixed Bag" benefit will be used to help defray the exhibition costs.

Among those scheduled to appear are C. C. Jones, who will serve as master of ceremonies; guitarists Karl Lendenmann of San Diego and Bill Freeman, a flamenco guitarist from Los Angeles; Vince Howard, an actor and singer from Los Angeles; and Bill Stewart, described as a black and blues singer.

Also appearing will be "The Fortes," "MUDD," "Moldy Figs," and "Mothers of the Pioneers." A team of boot dancers and San Diego Rocket's star Elvin Hayes are listed as possibilities on the program.
