COMMUNITY: Propositions aim to target youth violence, gay marriages

By CHARLES LEVINSON

Staff Writer

RALLY:

Opponents call measure divisive

It states, "Only marriage between a man and a woman is valid or recognized in California."

Opponents of the proposition said it was discriminatory.

"The Knight Initiative isn't about marriage. It's about being divisive, discriminating," said Dolores Lesnick, president of Parents Friends and Family of Lesbians and Gays.

In states that have passed similar initiatives, gays and lesbians have seen attacks on currently existing domestic partner benefits such as hospital visitation rights, inheritance rights and adoption rights, according to M.E. Stephens, an attorney for Californians for Fairness.

"The Knight Initiative introduces government intrusion into private lives and choices," according to the Californians for Fairness Web site. "Government ought not pass laws that regulate private decisions about whom we spend our lives with."

State Sen. Peter Knight sponsored this proposition after comparable bills were rejected five times in the state legislature.

The recently created Student Alliance for Fairness and Equality held a rally in the Price Center Tuesday urging students to vote no on propositions 21 and 22 on the March 7 ballot.

Proposition 21, also known as the Juvenile Justice Initiative, is a 43-page bill sponsored by former Gov. Pete Wilson that aims to get tough on juvenile crime and gang violence.

Its opponents see it differently.

"It is not what it appears to be," Alex Landon of the ACLU said. "The reality is a drastic reduction in the civil liberties of youth and another step in the trend of incarceration rather than rehabilitation."

The March ballot measure would increase penalties for crimes committed by juveniles and gang members and would transfer from judges to prosecutors the power to decide whether juveniles are tried as adults for murder and violent sex crimes.

Janice Jordan, mayoral candidate from the Peace and Freedom party, said that the measure is not a solution to current problems.

"They are creating a system where they just put people in prison," Jordan said.

S.A.F.E. President Heather Flow said that first-year professors at UCSD earn $41,000 a year, while prison guards earn $51,000.

Since 1984, the state has added 21 new prisons and one university campus, and will need eight more prisons if Proposition 21 passes according to Emmanuelle Regis of Californians for Justice.

"This is not going to cut down on juvenile crime and this is not going to end it," Regis said.

Landon said that the juvenile crime rate has gone down 30 percent since 1993 and that "this provision does nothing to see it go down any more."

Whereas proposition 21 is 43 pages long, proposition 22, also known as the Knight Initiative, is only 14 words.

bills to overturn the UC Regents' vote to offer benefits to domestic partners and to ban homosexual adoption.

In the Aug. 19, 1999 edition of the New Times LA, Knight stated:

"The thing that I find objectionable about it [the gay lifestyle] is their sexual activity. And secondly that they're asking me to accept them and their lifestyle as normal. And it's not. I make a judgment. Yeah I think everybody should."

Lesnick disagreed.

"Discrimination against gays and lesbians is wrong," Lesnick said. "Any discrimination is wrong."

Discrimination: Muir sophomores Erin Harrel, Kari Berquist and Andy Boettcher chant "No on Knight" during Tuesday's rally.

Socials are times for the LGBTA members to get together on campus or off, in an informal setting. Some were get togethers at people's apartments, some BBQ's, and a picnic/BBQ/ bonfire at Mission Bay. They prove to be a good place for new members to get to know other club members, and for old members to meet and hang out with people they are not so familiar with. They often involve lots of food, drinks, music, and definitely a good time for all.

Aside from the immense social network that develops, the political activism, running booths, and fun meetings, perhaps what the LGBTA at UCSD is most notorious for is its DANCES. By far the biggest and best dances at UCSD, HUNDREDS of people (from all over San Diego) come to have a great time at the dances, which are held at the Stage/ Pub in the Old Student Center. People from outside UCSD are more than welcome. The dances run twice per academic quarter, from 9pm - 1am, with free food, free drinks, and NO COVER CHARGE! Tons of people pack on the dance floor, while more gather on the patio to mingle and meet new people. Friendly LGBTA members will always be stationed at the front door to answer questions, as well as check in coats and bags. The atmosphere is incredibly open and fun-filled, the music is great, the lights constantly moving, the people talking, bodies dancing-

No club can beat it!
