Why Asian American Studies at UCSD?

There are several compelling reasons for initiating a modest but coherently formulated Asian American Studies Program at UCSD.

First and foremost is the increasing interest among Asian American students, staff and faculty in establishing such a program to systematically promote teaching and interdisciplinary research on the experience of Asians in the United States. As the number of Asian American students and faculty rises each year on the San Diego campus, there is a growing demand for a legitimate and organized study of their history, community and culture in the U.S. The Department of History first recognized such a need and offered an upper division course in Spring 1983 and again in 1987 taught by visiting Associate Professor L. Ling-chi Wang from the Berkeley campus. In the interim, Provost John Stewart of Muir College, through the Council of Provosts, committed 0.5 FTE each year for three years to conduct an experimental course on contemporary issues in the Asian American community. It was taught in Spring 1986 by Professor James Lin through the Muir Contemporary Issues Program. The same 0.5 FTE will be used in 1987-88 to bring Professor Sucheng Chan of UC Santa Cruz to teach two history courses in Winter 1988. In spite of the sporadic and limited nature of these course offerings, the response to them from Asian American students, staff and faculty has been consistently favorable, demonstrating convincingly both the need and the interest in such an intellectual endeavor on a more regular basis on the UCSD campus.

Secondly, California, which has been the social, political and cultural center of the Asian American population since the Gold Rush era, has been experiencing an accelerated increase in its Asian population in the past decade as a result of the massive influx of ### immigrants and refugees from East and Southeast Asian countries. Some of them are investors from Pacific Rim nations who are attracted by the favorable investment climate that California has to offer. With the passage of the 1965 Immigration and Nationality Act, which finally abolished the discriminatory racial quota for immigrants from Asian countries which led to a resurgence of immigration, and the emergence of new economic and political relations between the U.S. and East Asia since the 1970s, both have substantially increased in visibility, influence and vulnerability of the Asian American population on the one hand, and has created, in the process, new and lasting ties (infrastructures) between Asian American communities in California and the nations of East and Southeast Asia, on the other hand, thereby putting California in a position uniquely advantageous in its long-term trade and cultural relations with Asian countries.

Yet, both American society in general and the academic community in particular remain largely ignorant of, and ill-prepared to relate to the Asian Americans in their midst. Many recognized only the tremendous trade potential in East Asia and took steps toward exploiting it. The establishment of the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies (IR/PS) at UCSD is in fact a partial recognition of this glaring deficiency and a concrete step toward addressing the need. Others, however, see the new demographic trend and emerging trade with East Asia with increasing alarm and resentment. In spite of the civil rights gains since the 1960s, racist stereotypes of Asian Americans, some argue, have resurfaced. The proliferation of anti-Asian violence, documented last year by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and California Attorney-General John Van de Kemp, and the discriminatory admissions practices against the rising numbers of college-bound Asian American applicants at the elite universities across the nation in recent years, which have been reported widely in the national media, are strong and painful reminders of how little we know about this population which has been with us since the Gold Rush, and how Asian Americans continue to this date to be viewed and treated not as Americans, but as foreigners.

An Asian American Studies Program at UCSD, while it will not solve all the problems, will be the first meaningful step toward achieving a better understanding of Asian Americans. It will also be the logical beginning in an effort to understand and work with countries in East and Southeast Asia, from whence Asian Americans originated.

Thirdly, in the last 18 years, Asian American Studies has emerged from a previously non-existent academic area of study to become an intellectually exciting, interdisciplinary field of study, drawing scholars from most of the disciplines in both the social sciences and the humanities and opening new and challenging horizons and areas for legitimate scholarly inquiries. For example, Sucheng Chan's recent book, This Bittersweet Soil: The Chinese in California Agriculture, 1860-1910, sheds light on the history of California's agriculture, and Shih-shan Henry Tsai's China and the Overseas Chinese in the U.S., 1868–1911 provides a hitherto ignored dimension of Chinese American history and U.S.-China relations. Peter Kwong's Chinatown, N.Y.: Labor and Politics, 1930-1950 and Illsoo Kim's New Urban Immigrants: The Korean Community in New York introduce new perspectives into the study of the American immigrant experience and illuminate the internal political and social dynamics of two Asian American communities in New York. Elaine H. Kim demonstrates the variety and richness of long-neglected Asian American literature in her book, Asian American Literature: an Introduction to the Writings and their Social Context. Not only has Asian American Studies added new insights into the age-old issue of race in American society, it has also generated new perspectives and new areas of research in America's continuing search for a more just and equal society. Lastly, the proposed Asian American Studies Program will greatly strengthen and diversify the curriculum offerings at UCSD. UCSD is the only UC campus currently without regular courses in Asian American Studies. With UCSD spearheading the development of Pacific Rim Studies and pioneering a new curriculum with global orientation in the #### new Fifth College, on the one hand, and the new systemwide mandate to integrate Ethnic Studies content into the undergraduate curriculum, as recommended by a Universitywide Academic Senate resolution and the Smelser Report, on the other hand, the proposed Asian American Studies program will not only add new perspectives and approaches to studies of the Pacific Rim and world cultures but will also fill in the missing component—Asian American Studies— in the UCSD Ethnic Studies curriculum. In fact, the proposed interdisciplinary program will stimulate cooperation among departments in the social sciences and the humanities and will enhance and enrich the course offerings in such programs as Chinese and Japanese Studies, Women's Studies, Urban Studies, IR/PS, etc.

The Minor Program in Asian American Studies

There are several models of Asian American Studies currently in use within the UC system. UC Irvine and UC Santa Cruz offer regular but unordinated courses in Asian American Studies taught by permanent faculty in different departments. UC Santa Barbara and UC Davis have regular Asian American Studies programs permanently established in traditional departments with tenured faculty. UC Los Angeles offers a variety of courses through regular Asian American Studies faculty appointed to different departments. In addition it has an M.A. degree program in Asian American Studies and operates a fully staffed research center with a publication arm. UC Berkeley has by far the most comprehensive Asian American Studies program at both the graduate and undergraduate levels, with a Ph.D. program run by ladder rank faculty in an autonomous department.

What is proposed here for UCSD is a Minor Program in Asian American Studies designed to fit the unique academic environment of this campus. In fact, it is fashioned after such interdisciplinary programs as the Chinese Studies Program, Women's Studies Program and Urban Studies Program.

Working directly under the Advisory Committee for Asian American Courses, it is proposed that the program be housed administratively in a college to be designated or negotiated, possibly Third or Fifth College, in the 1987-88 academic year.

The core curriculum initially will consist of three courses: two history courses (one lower division and one upper division) and a lower division course on contemporary Asian American communities. These courses should be designed in such a way that they can be used by students in different programs and colleges to meet some of their requirements.

The core courses will be supplemented by two types of approved courses offered through various cooperating departments and programs. The Advisory Committee for Asian American Courses shall review and approve these courses. The following list represents possible courses for review and approval by the committee:

Type I: Depending on the availability of personnel and resources, the first type consists of upper division courses with Asian American content. For example, > Asian American Literature Asian American Women Asian American Family and Personality Chinese Writers in the U.S. Asian American Art and Culture Research in the Asian American Community Health and Mental Health in the Asian American Community Asian Americans and the Law.

Several faculty members in different departments in the social sciences and humanities have already expressed strong interest and willingness to offer some of the courses mentioned here, including Professors Wai-Lim Yip, Masao Miyoshi, William Tay and Lisa Lowe in Comparative Literature.

- Type II: This type includes upper division courses in three related areas of study currently offered through several departments on campus:
  - a. History, cultures and societies of East and Southeast Asian nations: e.g., History 181 Chinese Thought and Society

History 182 Modern Chinese Revolution

Lit/Gen 150 Chinese Literature in Trans.

Soc 188B Chinese Society

Comparative Literature of Imperialism, Internal Colonialism

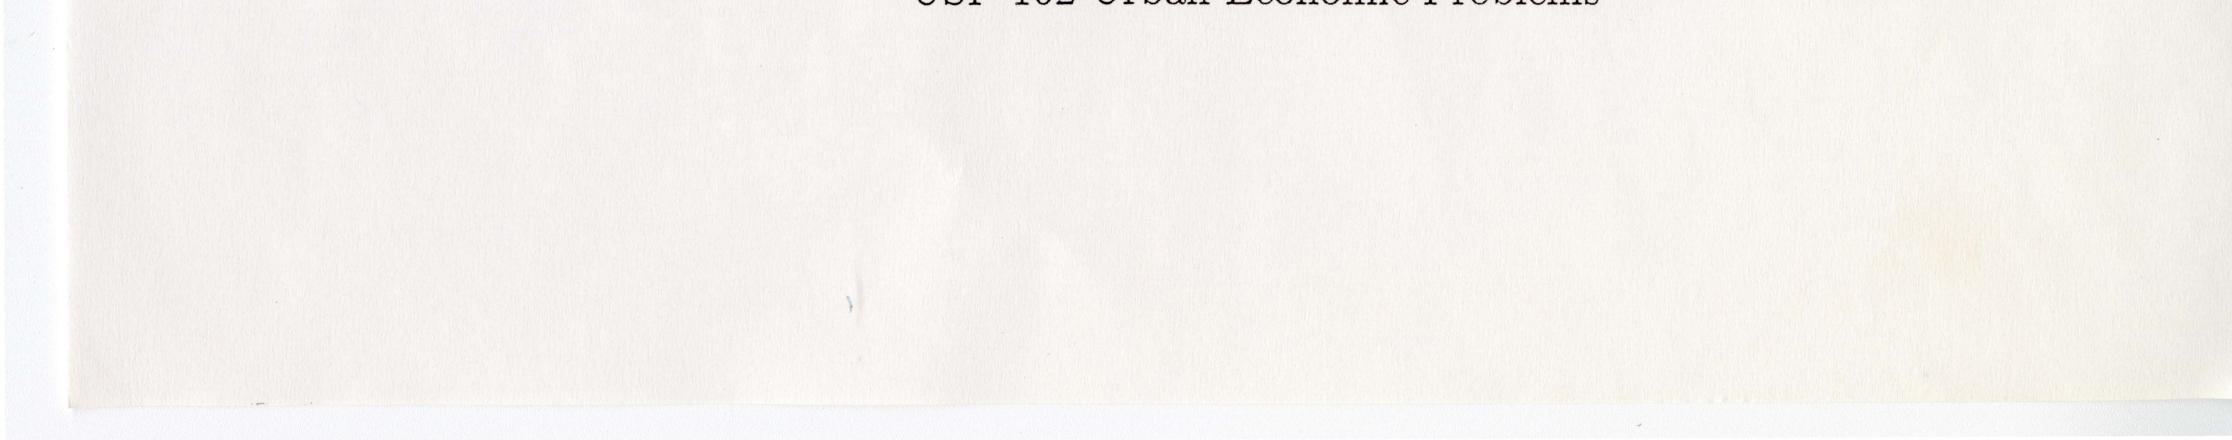

7

History 169 American Foreign Policy

Pol. Sci 142A United States Foreign Policy

c. Racial minorities or race relations in the U.S.: e.g., Chicano Studies 132 La Chicana Lit/En 180 Chicano Literature in English Span/Lit Ethnic Literature in the U.S. History 159 Afro-American History Drama 141 Modern Black Drama Drama 142 Chicano Dramatic Literature Pol Sci 104B Civil Rights & Const. Lib. Pol Sci 166F Inequality and Public Policy Soc 151 Comp. Race and Ethnic Relations Music 127A Music of Black Americans USP 102 Urban Economic Problems

Several professors in the above listed departments have likewise indicated their willingness to support the Asian American Studies Minor Program. Indeed, some have even expressed interest in developing courses related to the Minor, for example, Professors James Rauch and Lakshi K. Raut of the Economics Department.

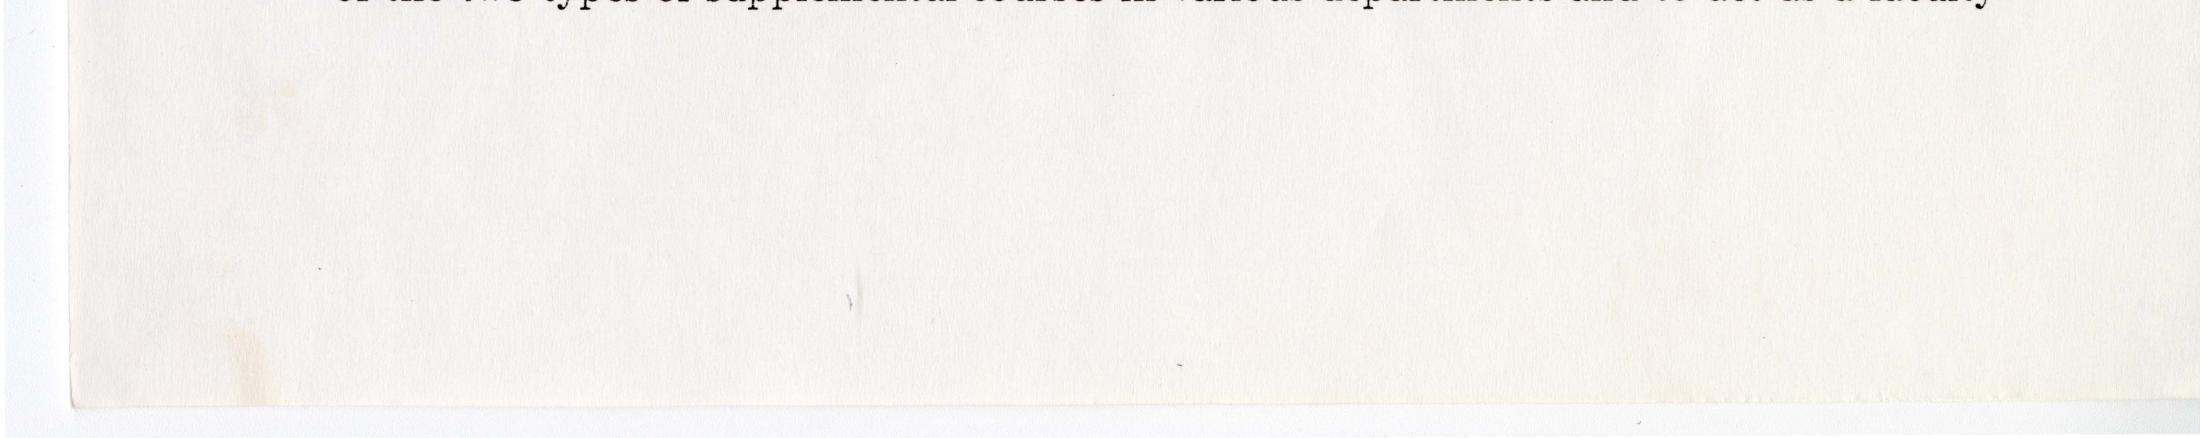

The Minor, open to undergraduates in all colleges, consists of six courses, four of which must be upper division, selected from the approved list. Students enrolled in the Minor Program are expected to take the three courses in the core curriculum and to choose the remaining upper division courses so that at least one will be from each of the two types of supplementary courses mentioned above. When the program is implemented, we hope the colleges will accept these courses to fulfill their general education requirements.

To assist students in making their course selection, a student advisor will be designated by the Advisory Committee for Asian American Courses. In addition, UCSD should make every effort to recruit a professional student counselor with knowledge and understanding of Asian American culture and history to work with the large number of Asian American students at UCSD.

Implementation

Working closely with Vice Chancellor Harold Ticho, the existing Advisory Committee for Asian American Courses shall oversee the implementation of the proposed Minor Program.

The first step is to have the proposed Minor Program in Asian American Studies approved by the appropriate committees of the Academic Senate and by the administration. Once the program is approved, the most effective way to carry it out is to recruit and appoint a tenured faculty, preferably in the History Department, not only to take charge of teaching the core courses, but also to coordinate the gradual and orderly development of the two types of supplemental courses in various departments and to act as a faculty adviser to students. In other words, this person is to devote initially half-time to teaching and half-time to program development and student advising.

Recruitment for such a person should begin immediately. The appointment should take effect in the academic year 1988-1989.

To help develop a few of the Type I supplemental courses, the program needs a 0.5 non-recurrent FTE each year for at least three years to be used exclusively to recruit and appoint part-time lecturers through different departments and programs. It is possible some of these courses eventually will become regular courses taught by permanent faculty in these departments. In the interim, the 0.5 FTE is essential to the development of these new courses. Occasionally, part of this 0.5 FTE could be used also to invite distinguished guest speakers and scholars or to sponsor campus-wide cultural events or public lectures.

Course Description:

10 --- 't

This course is a comparative history of Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Asian Indian, and Filipino immigrants and their descendants and of Vietnamese, Kampuchean, and Laotian refugees in the United States from 1848 to the present. Topics include developments in the Asian countries of origin that led to emigration, settlement and employment patterns in the western United States in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, the social structure of Asian immigrant communities, women and families, different kinds of anti-Asian hostility and efforts by Asian Americans to cope with them, problems faced by the American-born generations, the World War II internment of Japanese Americans, renewed immigration after 1965, the influx of refugees after 1975, and important contemporary issues affecting Asian Americans.

Course Requirements:

1) One paper of about 15 pages, typed, double-spaced, due on February 22, 1988. (No extensions will be granted.)

Attention! It is important that you attend every lecture and every film showing, because they will contain a great deal of information that is not found in the readings. At the same time, the readings contain information that will not be covered in the lectures. Films will be shown on Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. in HSS 2250 (Muir campus) as a lab requirement. They will last one and a half to two hours; discussions afterwards will be optional, depending on whether the audience wants to talk about the films.

University of California, San Diego History 191C Asian American History through Biography and Fiction Winter, 1988, Wednesday, 7:00-9:45 p.m., HSS 6008, Muir Campus Sucheng Chan, Visiting Professor of History

Course Objectives:

Much of Asian American history is presented as a faceless and anonymous tale. To counteract such a tendency, students in this colloquium will read autobiographies, biographies, novels, and short stories by and about Asian Americans to explore important events and themes in Asian American history.

Course Requirements:

1) Read nine books. You may either read the required text listed for each week, or a substitute from the recommended reading list. (It is important that you understand this is a heavy reading course; if you would rather take a lecture course, enroll in History 191, TuTh 8:30-9:50, AP&M 2113, Muir campus, instead of this colloquium.)

2) Give five oral presentations during the quarter, according to a schedule to be worked out during the first class meeting.

3) Write a paper approximately 25 pages long based on the readings, due the last day of classes. (There will be no final exam for this course.)

4) Attend the weekly evening film series starting January 12, the second week of classes: Tuesday, 7 p.m., HSS 2250, Muir campus.

Topics and Readings:

Week I: Introduction to the Course (no readings)

Weeks II-IV: The Immigrant Experience

"Comparative History of Asian Experience in America"

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines the experiences of the major Asian groups in the U. S. from a comparative perspective, using race and class as major tools of analysis. The Asian American groups covered include Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Pilipino and Indochinese. In addition, we will analyze the impact of US-Asian relations, Asian nationalism and motherland politics on the various Asian communities in the U.S.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

The primary objectives of this course are: 1) to examine the similarities and dissimilarities among the experiences of the major Asian groups in the U.S., 2) to familiarize students with the literature on Asian American history, 3) to assess critically the various approaches to Asian American history, and 4) to develop basic skills in original research.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

I. Course Objectives.

2 7

The major objective of this course is to provide students with a sound historical and theoretical basis in their understanding of Asian Americans, their adjustment, identity, and the emerging new status in the American society. A secondary objective is to provide students with an opportunity to integrate their various intellectual perspectives with existential and phenomenological concerns in comparative studies of human behavior. Because of the limitation of research materials, emphasis will be given to Asian American subgroups where reading materials are available.

II. Basic reading texts.

Stanford Lyman, Chinese Americans, Random House, 1974 William Petersen, Japanese Americans, Random House, 1971 Stanley Sue and N. N. Wagner, Asian Americans, Science & Behavior Books, 1973

III. Requirements.

Students are required to read assigned materials before each meeting. The responsible instructor will not repeat such materials but will bring out some highlights for classroom discussions. Lectures will be limited to the first hour of the  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hour class with remainder of the time to discuss each of the points in thelecture and in the assigned reading materials.

It is expected that a class project, a term paper,or a written examination will serve as formal grading assignments in addition to classroom participation.

Dear James Lin,

I am writing to you in your capacity as chairman of the Asian American Studies Program Committee, in order to express my great interest in, and support of, the establishment of Asian American Studies at UC San Diego. As the composition and academic interests of the UC student body changes, it is necessary for the campus to respond to our students' requests for a variety of developing subject matters and areas of study. I am hopeful that UC San Diego may choose to join the many other universities -- in California and across the country -- who have established, and continued to support, cross-disciplinary Asian American Studies departments and programs.

In my opinion, the proposal for the implementation of an Asian American Studies Program at UCSD, written by Ling-Chee Wang, is well tailored to the structure and organization of our particular departments and colleges, and to the availability of existing faculty and resources. It would be a great initial step for all interested persons in the university to have this proposal accepted; but further, the success of the program could be insured if the proposed FTEs were allocated to the program, and if a ladder-rank FTE could be suitably housed in one of the departments.

As an Assistant Professor in the department of Literature, I would like to demonstrate my support for the success of Asian American Studies by offering to contribute to the curriculum; I intend to develop and teach a course in Asian American Literature during the academic year, 1988–89. Although my background and publication record is in French and British Literature, not in the field of Asian American Studies, I am committed to doing research in order to educate myself to teach this greatly needed addition to the curriculum. Further, as one of the few Chinese-Americans on the faculty at UCSD, I can offer to students one experience of being an Asian American in the university and academic community.

I understand that over the years, in the absence of a program, you have recruited faculty to teach Asian American Studies, and have even taught a course yourself. You have also been a much appreciated advisor and faculty resource for the Asian students on campus. Please permit me to thank you for the depth of your commitment, and for the time you have spent working towards establishing the program.

Richard C. Atkinson Matthews Administrative & Academic Complex Q-005

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I am writing to endorse and support the proposal for an Asian American Studies Program on the UCSD campus. This program is "past due" in light of the unequivocal evidence of its need which has been discussed for at least a decade by both faculty members, students, and community leaders. A small Asian American Studies Program is a start in the right direction to recognize Asian Americans as an important segment of our community, their historical significance in this country, and the impact of new generations continually contributing to the quality of life for all Americans.

An Asian American Studies Program on campus will attract many Asian American students as in the past when courses were offered for a quarter at a time. It will give students an opportunity to take courses that have meaningfulness in their lives through history, literature, arts, and contemporary issues, which are now not available. Asian American students seem to matriculate through UCSD without much time spent on integrating who they are and who will they become. Courses in Asian American studies and a minor in the field would fill a void for students who, in preparation for future careers also require a grounding in their history, identity and sensibilities.

As active members of the Asian American community, my wife Amy and I are keenly aware of the need to continue strengthening ties between the University and the community. An Asian American Studies Program can serve to meet this need with its leadership, scholarship and teaching.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

With this letter, I would like to express my strong support of the proposal for A Minor in Asian American Studies submitted by the Chancellor's Advisory Committee for Asian American Courses. Courses that provide intellectual inquiries into the role of minorities in the making of this nation in its past, present and future are an important part of a college education. It prepares an individual to appreciate not only the diversities within this nation but also its international linkage. Among the UCSD programs for minority studies, the Asian American studies has been totally absent. It is critical that such a program be established as soon as possible. The proposed program on Asian American studies, though modest, is a well prepared program tailored not only to partially fulfill this great need in our program in minority studies but also to enhance the existing UCSD interdisciplinary program on minority studies. I strongly support this proposal and request its implementation at the earliest possible time. and a minor in the field would fill a wold for students who, in and content and the standard of boat spectreboulting east?

The enthusiastic response among both students at members of the community at large to the lecture series in Asian American Studies currently being offered at UCSD is a clear indication that an ongoing program would be enormously successful. We already know that changes in the demographic characteristics of the state will continue to result in increases in Asian American enrollment at all UC campuses. We also know that there is gorwing interest in the field - each year, at least two thousand students enroll in the Asian American Studies courses we offer at Berkeley, and there has been a great deal of research and publication activity in the field during the past decade. Given the cultural diversity of the student populations on our campuses and in the communities we serve, and given the increased awareness of the need for interdisciplinary program development efforts, UC San Diego, it seems to me, could benefit immensely from joining the other UC campuses that already provide offerings in Asian American Studies.

Sincerely,

To Professor James Lin and UCSD Provost,

Contemporary Issues in Asian American Studies has been one of the few enlightening classes that I have taken here at UC San Diego. Its issues has broaden my awareness, views and education greatly, and has been an incredible experience just to be part of the class.

I would like very much to see many more types of these classes offered and continued, "I feel very strongly that this class would not only benefit the student, but also the college itself for its recognizing its diversity in issues and education.

The organization and structure for this class has played an important factor in its quality and excellence.

I have never been so overwhelmed with a class before that has this type of quality and concernment of learning for the students by the professor. This class personally has helped me understand much more about life, people, and feelings in general. I hope that you will have the same oppertunity to experience a class like this as I have had.

and the second second state of the second second

I am a regular extra-curricular attendee of the Asian -American Studies class, a pilot course being offered by the Contemporary Issues Dept. of UCSD. I have attended various lectures and have listened to numerous speakers which the class presented in the past weeks of its experimental stage, and I will continue to do so, I am drawn by the commendable presentations I have witnessed and the laudable speakers I have heard in the class. As an Asian-American, my regular attendance of this class has enhanced my understanding of my ethnicity. Attending the class has enabled me to gain a tremendous pool of information concerning Asian Americans in this country. Various lecturers and speakers have exposed me to the struggles, pitfalls and triumphs of Asian Americans in their attempt to gain recognition in this country. Also, the class has helped me acquire greater confidence in myself because I was made aware of the numerous Asian Americans who have successfully crossed the barriers of poverty, language deficiency, racial discrimination, and societal and governmental hostilities, and emerged triumphant in their respective fields of endeavor. My attendance in the class has also helped me find an outlet by which I could channel ideas. The class has enabled me to interact with other Asian Americans and thus, gain a greater understanding of their needs, interests and other concerns. It has also stirred in me, the urge to cultivate my potentials to their fullest extent, through the encouragement of the various speakers who have posed a challenge to each and everyone in the class to strive for excellence. This challenge has encouraged me to try and emulate the speakers, all of whom have been successful in their fields also. I have greatly benefitted from my attendance in the Asian . American Studies class. Countless more will do so if the course is made into a permanent, quarterly offering, or better yet, an Asian American Studies department established here at UCSD.

Sincerely yours

May 2, 1986

To Professor James Lin and the Council Provosts,

I am writing in regards to the Asian-American studies class presently being offered and as that you would keep it in the curriculem. For the first time ever UC San Diego is offering a class on contemporary Asian issues and I believe it has been an excellent learning experience for all involved.

a start and a start and a start and Asians have been in this country for over a hundred years and need to take a look at what they have accomplished as well as to see where they are headed. Asians in America are not the exact same as Asians in their native countries and people must become aware of the differences, both Asians themselves as well as other races.

To my knowledge, UC Davis, UCLA, and Berkeley have had Asian Studies programs since the late sixties and I think the time is right for UC San Diego to follow suit.

I urge you, Council Provosts and Prof. Lin, to keep this program in the curriculem. I have learned a great deal from the class and I know many more will too, as longas this class is not dropped.

Thank You.

Sincegely,

May 1, 1986

Dear Professor Lin and Council of Provosts:

I am writing in regards to the Asian American Studies course being hosted by the Contemporary Issues Program this quarter. Attending this course has been a personally as well as intellectually gratifying experience.

The formath of a speaker series has provided an interdisciplinary as well as multi-topic inquiry and analysis of Asian American issues. Many of the speakers have expertise in various forms of academia and professions. For example, a lawyer, a poet, a sociologist, an international affairs specialist and a writer have lectured so far. These individuals are more than just knowledgeable people; they are important positive role models. Each speaker has demonstrated the achievements Asian Americans have made. As an Asian American, these people and their accomplishments are a means for facilitating my own awareness and pride. They inspire me to pursue untapped dreams and higher goals.

Asian American Studies also gives me a greater understanding and cultural appreciation of the contributions and history of Asian Americans in the United States of America. This academic validation and recognition is important because it encourages pride and optimism in being culturally versatile. Many may argue that an area or group study such as Asian American studies promotes separatism or an intellectual ghetto. However, this course has addressed the issue of how an ethnic minority group relates and interacts with a dominant one.

In summary, Asian American Studies 1) provides academic validation, 2) encourages cultural pride and versatility for both minority and dominant groups, 3) presents positivie role models and 4) promotes the acceptance and awareness of diversity in the world. There are many more benefits.

I strongly urge the continuance and growth of Asian American Studies courses. It is an exciting topic to Asian Americans as well as many other groups. Also, it would complement any Asian Studies i.e. Chinese Studies or Japanese Studies, and the forthcoming Graduate School of Pacific Rim Studies and International Studies

Thank you for your consideration.

Dear Professor Lin and Council of Provosts:

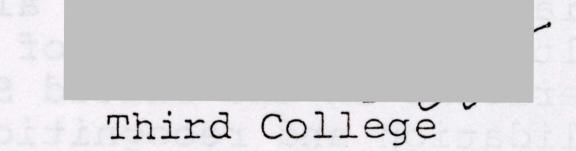

Preserver in

As a student of the Asian American studies course currently sponsored by Contemporary Issues I find it necessary to respond on behalf of the class.

Not ony does the class enable other ethnic groups to incorporate the plight of the Asian American to their own personal experience, but it also allows them to udnerstand themselves better which in turn enables them to understand the Asian Americans.

The lecture series provides each student with a different and diverse perspective which gives each student the opportunity to broaden their scope about the plight of Asian Americans throughout history as well as develop an understanding about the unique cultural needs of classically defined "minority" groups. To put it simply, the class is informative and enlightening. I highly recommend more courses of this type.

A concerned student, argue that an area or group study such as Asian American shudtes promotes separatism or an intellectual ghetto. However, this course has addressed the issue of how an ethnic minority group relates and interacts with a dominant one.

In summary, Asian American Studies 1) provides academic valadation, 2) encourages cultural pride and versatility for both minority and dominant groups, 3) presents positivis role models and 4) promotes the acceptance and awareness of diversity in the world. There are many more benefits.

I strangly urge the continuance and growth of Asian American Studies courses. It is an exciting topic to Asian Americans as well as many other groups. Asian American! What is our Asian and Pacific Islander peoples have been an integral part of the development of the United States since the mid-1800's: The lives of Chinese workers were taken in order to make the first transcontinental railroad a reality; Japanese American fisherman helped to lay the basis for the West Coast fishing industry; Pilipino and Korean farmworkers transformed wastelands into agricultural riches; stolen Hawaiian lands provide for military bases and sugar cane profits. Yet, to this day, except for grassroots efforts by Asian and Pacific Islander students and communities to establish Asian American Studies (AAS), this history continues to be denied to us by our present educational system. UCSD is no exception: We do not have an Asian American Studies program here.

With the rapid growth and development of Asian and Pacific Islander Americans in the U.S., this inaccurate picture can only lead to confusion and conflict. How can America move forward if our education is false? How can we hope to address the problems in the Asian and Pacific Islander American communities if the major intellectual institutions such as UCSD continue to behave as though we do not even exist?

The newly-formed Asian American Studies Committee (AASC) has begun to help build a campaign to establish AAS as a permanent fixture within the UCSD curricula. We feel that Asians and Pacific Islanders, African Americans, Chicanos/Latinos and Native Americans have a claim to U.S. history---our story.

We want an education that addresses our concerns, but to make this happen, we must join together as one. We need your help to spread the word about AAS, to publish a bulletin to inform our supporters of the latest developments in the campaign, and to reach out and organize people from all corners of the campus and communities. If you want to do something that is fun, rewarding and just plain righteous, JOIN THE ASIAN AMERICAN STUDIES COMMITTEE!

ASIAN AMERICAN STUDIES: A SECOND LOOK by Suong Tuyet Nguyen

The first day of class started in the spring quarter on 1986. The friendly face of mathematics professor, Jim Lin stared at the suprisingly crowded classroom. Over sixty students attended the class of supposedly limited capacity of fifty. what is it like being an Asian American? What is our identity? How do we fit in with other Americans that live in the united States? This Asian American studies class attempts to answer these questions that puzzle the minds of many Asian Americans. Syllabi were handed out on the firs5t day. Upcoming events were unexpectedly full of guest lecturers. Among the guests, Minoru Yasui, the well-knowned Japanese American lawyer, talked about the internment of Japanese Americans during WWII. Charito Planas, the Fili-pino activist, plans to talk about the current situation in the Phillipines and also about the notorious Ferdinand Marcos. Lawson Inada, Asian American poet and writer, is an example of an Asian American who can succeed in fields other than math and science. An addition of nine other guests, including a Vietnamese professor from UCLA Pham Cao Duong, and Congressman Mineta from San Jose, will have spoken to the class by the end of this quarter. The feeling among the students who attended this class is unlike that of most classes. Over 90% of the students in the class are Asian Americans. Sharing a common identity-Asian American identity- draws the students closer together. Jim Lin and the multitude of guest lecturers will hopefully give Asian American students a better understanding of their identity, not only as Asian Americans, but as Japanese Aericans, Chinese Americans, Vietnamese americans, Filipino American, and Korean Americans as well. To others who are not of asian descent, hopefully they will understand how different each Asian is from another. We are not just a group of asian americans, we are individuals who are Asian and proud of it!!!

RE: Letter in support of Asian American Studies as a permanent class in U.C.S.D.

The fact is that Asians and Pacific peoples comprise a significant number on the UCSD campus. Yet, the curriculum at UCSD does not provide an academic atmosphere that serves Asian/Pacific students.

As a student in a "pilot course" for Asian American studies, I feel on the one hand, elated and enthused that the class has become reality but on the other hand, it is not a permanent "nail" within the UCSD institution. Just by the attendance alone of 50-60 Asian students, should signal anyone that there is a need for Asian American studies which provides a rich identity, culture and history to Asian/Pacific students that's lost in the "mainstream" textbooks and media. There is just so much in our cultures (due to our diversity) that many different couses can be taught on the particularities which is too numerous to list at this time.

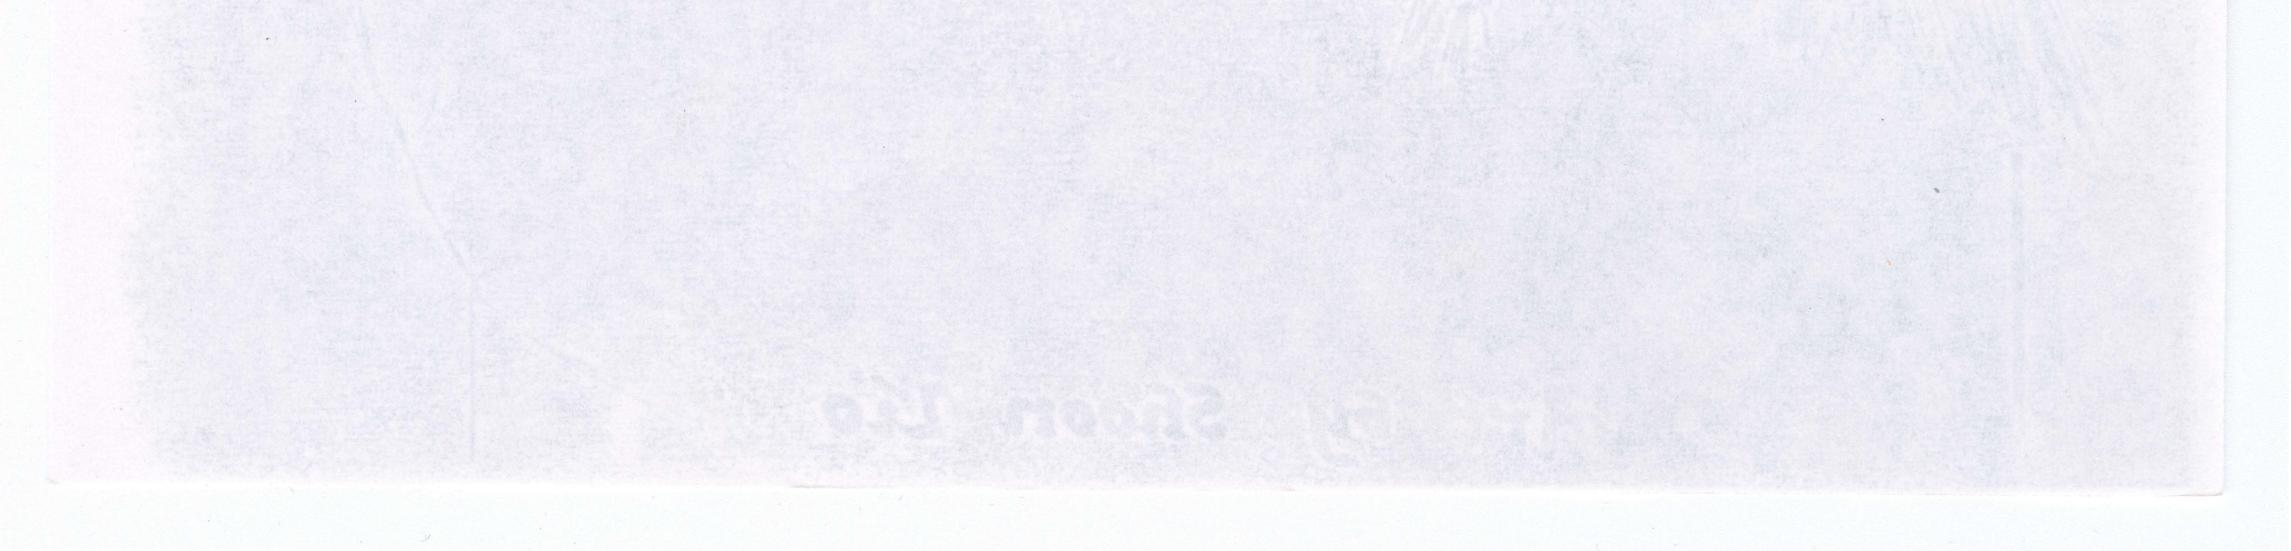

However, as a student and Samoan on this campus I can relate to the lost Third World student who may be isolated because there's so few of them or there is no classes that addresses their issues. In essence, an Asian American Studies class can help to "lessen the isolation" of Asian/Pacific students and feel more at ease on campus that looks at Third World students negatively anyhow.

Therefore, I urge the Council of Provosts to really look at the facts before them, the support of not only the students for this class and the support of the Asian/Pacific community to insure that an Asian American Studies course become permanent and is a mainstay within the University of California, San Diego.

Yours in Friendship,

Dear Members of the Policy Review Committee,

November 5, 1987

PROF. JAMES LIN, CHAIR ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR ASIAN AMERICAN COURSES

I am writing to support the proposal for an Asian-American Studies program at UCSD.

A competent university education must offer students an opportunity to examine their lives as well as their potential. With the growing number of Asian-American students on this campus and an increasing interest in the Pacific Rim countries, it is timely and proper that a coherent set of courses be available to meet our students' needs as well as that of the general community.

I personally endorse the establishment of an Asian-American Studies program because the experience of my daughter attested to the need. She became interested in learning more about her cultural heritage, and took scattered courses in Chinese language and literature because a systematic course of study was not available at her college. While the classes were intellectually stimulating, she confessed that her overall reaction was that as a fifth generation Californian, she felt more like a "banana" because she had difficulty relating her "American" upbringing with her Chinese heritage. I believe she would have been able to achieve greater closure to her learning experience if she was able to learn about the Asian experience in America. Therefore, I support an Asian-American Studies program so that students will have such an opportunity for learning.

October 28, 1987

Dear Members of the Policy Review Committee,

The Pan Asian Staff Association strongly urges your approval of proposals to establish an Asian American Studies program at UCSD.

The Pan Asian Staff Association is a relatively new organization at UCSD, having been formed in Spring 1986. Our membership of approxamately one hundred fifty includes staff persons from a range of departments and positions both on the La Jolla campus, SIO and at the Medical Center. The active concern that we have with the development of Asian American Studies is consistent with our efforts to improve the lives of all Asian and Pacific Islanders at UCSD.

An Asian American Studies program would be a welcome addition to the diversity of our university. Complimenting and exceeding the scope of existing fields of study, such as Chinese Studies and the new Graduate School for Pacific Rim Studies, Asian American Studies would address the many domestic social, cultural, economic and political questions facing Asians and Pacific Islanders. With a population of over five million in the U.S., our communities have an increasingly important role to play in the future of this country.

The history of our peoples is a rich one. It also represents an important, exciting and necessary field of research. Other U.C. campuses, such as Berkeley and UCLA have recognized this by establishing programs in Asian American Studies. There is no reason why our efforts cannot produce the same.

With Sincerity, Taiji Miyagawa Chairperson, Pan Asřan Staff Association

Dear Professor Lin,

Dr. John Stewart Provost, Muir College C-006

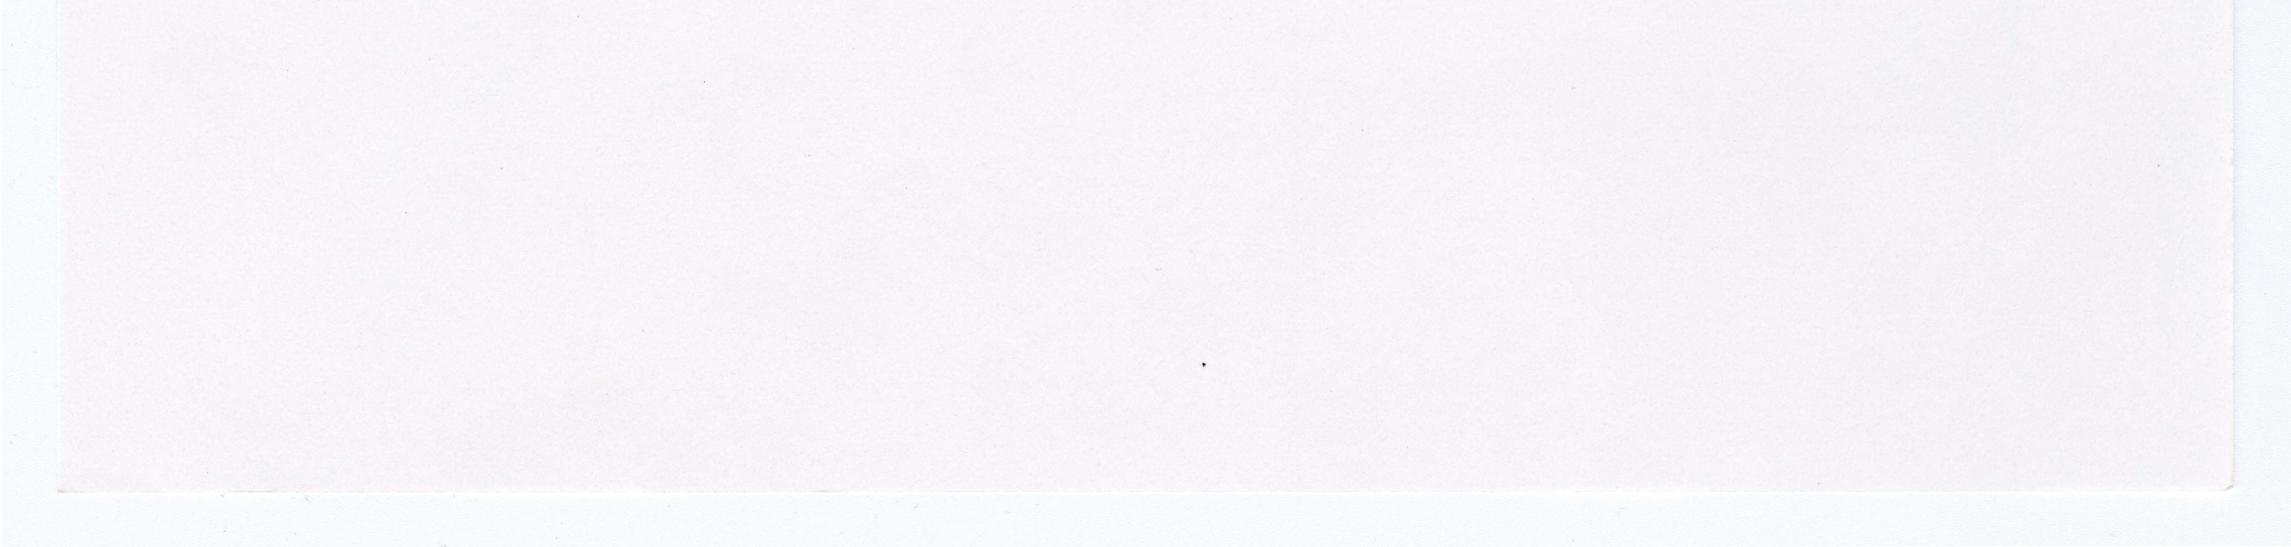

Dear Dr. Stewart:

I am an Asian staff personnel here at the University of California, San Diego. I would like to thank the Muir Interdisciplinary Studies Program for sponsoring the Asian American Studies course this Spring Quarter 1986. The lecturers, as well as the people they mentioned in their lectures have given me the encouragement I need to pursue my aspirations. I am sure the students and other attendees feel that same way too. The effect of the lectures on the class has been a lifetime experience.

A program that will enable the Campus student and staff community to learn more about Asian Americans - their background, achievements and unique experiences - will be welcome with enthusiasm. I share the feelings of the general Asian/Pacific community that such a program should continue on a permanent basis. I strongly support efforts to hire a full-time, permanent faculty person to teach Asian American Studies at UCSD.

Dear Professor Lin,

As an alumnus and now employee of UCSD, I was overjoyed to hear that a class was being offered this quarter that focused on issues concerning the Asian-American community. I have felt that the UCSD curriculum had been somewhat lacking in this area, considering the growing Asian population within the University. It seems that the current extension class has been very well received and attended.

So far, I have had the opportunity to attend but one lecture. The topic was one which I am concerned with but not very familiar with. This lecture gave me some historical background on the issue, as well as personal ideas, thoughts and insight. It was very well presented and I was impressed with the choice of the speaker.

I feel that the continuation of such program(s) will be very successful and certainly provide a great service, not only to the University, but also to the San Diego community in general. I sincerely hope that the establishment of an Asian-American program can be realized. Thank you for your time and effort toward this goal.

Dear Professor Lin:

I feel my working experience at UCSD's Program in Chinese Studies has been greatly enhanced by the opportunity to attend Professor Ling-chi Wang's class (Asian American History 1840-1980) last Spring, 1987. My personal perspective on my status as a Chinese-American has also been enriched.

The class made me aware of how much I am indebted to the Asians that have come before me. Through their struggles, hardships and perseverance, I am able to live with relative ease in this social climate. Even more importantly, this class has made me want to pave the way for the future Asian population in any way I can. I think everyone would benefit by taking this class. (Orientals and Occidentals).

I hope there will be an Asian American Studies Program established at UCSD offering classes of this calibre for all to enjoy regularly.

Dear Dick,

I had a very enjoyable time on the San Diego campus last Thursday talking to students, staff, and community persons as part of the Asian American Studies program. I thank you and Professor James Lin for the warm hospitality accorded me during the visit.

It was the first time that I have ventured so far south to talk about "the coming of age" of the second-generation Japanese in California since most of my "lecture trips" have been confined to the Berkeley campus and to the campus of San Francisco State University. I only hope that my trip to the San Diego campus was interesting and informative for the listeners.

During the hospitality time that followed the talk, I was amazed to find out the growing Asian American population of the San Diego area, especially among those from Southeast Asian countries. I had thought that the dramatic upswing was in Orange county, the San Joaquin Valley, and the San Francisco Bay area.

I was especially heartened by the deep interest of the San Diego students in "their roots" in America. And I would like to reiterate my deep hopes that the San Diego campus institute an Asian American Studies program for its students. If such a program can be funded and started on the San Diego campus, I would be most gratified.

Once again, I express my thanks to you and to your staff for the wonderful hospitality during my visit. In my nine years on the Board of Regents, I have visited the San Diego campus only three times. Most of my trips have been to the Berkeley, San Francisco, Davis, and Santa Cruz campuses.

My best wishes to you.

I recently became aware of a proposal by a committee of faculty members of the University of California, San Diego (UCSD) and their efforts to obtain a tenured faculty member to teach Asian American Studies.

I hope that every consideration is given to the approval of this position. I understand that from the courses offered thus far, there has been a high level of interest and need by the students and faculty at UCSD for courses in Asian American Studies. Since UCSD is the only UC that does not have an Asian American Studies program, I encourage your support.

The University of California, San Diego has often been a progressive leader in medical research, liberal arts, and sciences, by taking this step, it will certainly further enhance its' reputation. As all factors are taken into consideration, especially with the creation of the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies this year, it is more evident that there is a real niche for an Asian American Studies Program at UCSD.

Chancellor Atkinson University California at San Diego La Jolla, CA 92093

Dear Chancellor:

Pacific Islanders and Asians for the Rainbow (PAR) strongly urges the administration of UCSD to adopt the proposals of the Asian American Studies Committee and establish an Asian American Studies Program.

PAR is a community-based group which organizes around issues of justice and empowerment facing Asian and Pacific Islander peoples. Our members play leadership roles in Mayor O'Connor's Asian Advisory Council, Congressman Bates' Asian Affairs Subcommittee, Asian/Pacific Caucus of the California

Democratic Party, Filipino Caucus of the California Democratic Party, San Diego Democratic Central Committee, and Superintendent Payzant's Asian Advisory Committee.

In recent years we have seen an alarming rise in anti-Asian violence, the resurgence of racist stereotypes and the promotion of such pseudo-theories as the Asian model minority myth. Neanwhile, the rapid growth of the Asian/Pacific Islander population presents increasingly complex challenges in areas such as education, economics, social services and political democracy.

Our nation's future leaders must have an understanding of the Asian/Pacific Islander communities in the US if they are to adequately address these and other issues facing this country. But Asian/Pacific Islander students, in particular, have a right to study the history and dynamics of their own people. The exercise of this right is critical to the very survival and, progress of our communities. For this reason, we in PAR view the present weakness of Asian American Studies at UCSD with deep concern.

Again, we urge the administration of UCSD to establish a permanent Asian American Studies Program in accordance with the proposals forwarded by the Asian American Studies Committee. We await your reply.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

The Union of Pan Asian Communities wholeheartedly endorses and supports the proposal to establish an Asian American Studies Program on the UCSD campus. UPAC has over the years, in sessions with faculty, students and administration, advocated for UCSD's committment towards programs that focus on Asian American student needs through increased Asian American faculty, counseling and support services and Asian American courses.

If UCSD is to maintain its highly respected academic position in the state and country, it is essential that an Asian American Studies Program become available as a permanent part of the UCSD curriculum. The fact that UCSD is the only UC campus without such a program attests to the belated need and glaring ommision that should not continue. The Pacific Rim program does not replace the need for a separate program that focuses specifically on the experience of Asians in the United States.

An Asian American Studies Program with faculty and administrative support will serve as a strong link to the growing Asian American community in San Diego. An identified program will increase UCSD's visibility in the community and can work toward increased participation and support from the various ethnic organizations and leaders.

On behalf of the Board of Directors and staff of the Union of Pan Asian Communities, I urge your serious consideration of the acceptance and funding of this proposal.

Such a program will be appropos in line with your Pacific Rim Studies. As a San Diego resident and community activist here for 57 years, I know the Pacific Asian peoples contributions in America as well as the stories my paternal grandfather told me when he was here from 1847. My grandchildren are 5th generation Americans and need to know they are not foreigners and their ancestors are 100% part of America's history.

Last year, the Asian American Studies courses was extremely well received by the students and community. The PAN ASIAN EXPRESS received several letters from the students who took the course, praising the content, the speakers and you. We printed the letters because it truly was a bringing together of foreign and American born, different generations, different ages and unique, diversified Pacific Asian American groups to be proud of their heritage.

When UCSD requests my assistance to support their Asian American studies program, it is indeed welcomed and I look forward to its establishment in the University's courses.

Dear Vice Chancellor Ticho:

I wish to express my full and energetic support for the establishment of a Minor in Asian American Studies at UCSD.

I have seen the development of Asian American studies over the past few years at UCSD through the efforts of Professor James Lin and others and have attended public lectures and programs in association with this. A tenured faculty position is clearly needed and will no doubt meet a clear and growing need at the UCSD campus

I am on the board of the Union of Pan Asian Communities and the San Diego Chapter of the Japanese American Citizens League. Having recently moderated a UPAC-sponsored workshop on "The Filipino Family: Conflicts and Adjustments" it is clear that education and study would help many bright Asian American students better understand themselves and their culture, enhancing their selfesteem and identity as well as gain a deeper understanding of the various Asian communities in our society.

In reference to the proposed Minor Program in Asian American studies, I would like to give an unqualified recommendation for its implementation. I am in a position which gives me an almost daily reminder of the need for Asian American studies. I am the Redress chair of the San Diego Japanese American Citizens League (JACL) and the Redress co-chair for the Pacific Southwest District of the JACL. We are currently in a national campaign to have passed the Civil Liberties Act of 1987, H.R. 442 and S1009. It is obvious that we have to overcome many historic inaccuracies about the condition and loyalties of Japanese Americans during the second world war and at present. I am concerned about having Asian Americans portrayed with historical accuracy, about racial prejudice and its effects on all of us, and about such fallacies as the model minority myth which is currently being directed at Asian Americans. I am concerned about anti-Asian sentiment and violence. I am for studying Asian Americans as human beings living and working proudly and diligently in America and contributing to the greatness of this land. I am for the development of a comprehensive Asian American studies program. I am for the development of a Minority Program in Asian American studies.

Dear Professor Lin,

I am writing in support of a Minor Program in Asian American studies. Since Asian Americans have been active participants in California history and will be an increasingly significant part of California's future, I would like to urge UCSD to continue its offerings in Asian American studies, to develop a Minor Program in Asian American studies, and to expand the varieties of topics available.

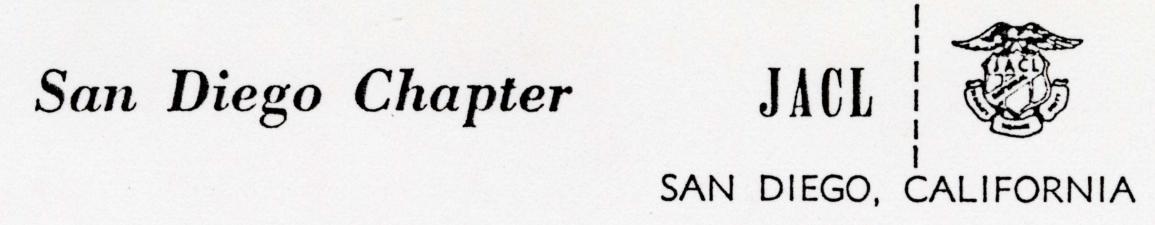

According to a United Nations prediction, over half of the 21st century supercities will be in the pacific rim countries. At the turn of the century, Secretary of State, John Hay, wrote "The Mediterranean is the ocean of the past, the Atlantic is the ocean of the present, and the Pacific is the ocean of the future." John Hay's future is our present. The United States had more trade with Pacific nations than with Atlantic nations for the past few years. Tens of billions of dollars of trans-Pacific trade is routed through California every year. As the activities of the state and the nation become more directed toward the Pacific, it becomes more crucial for educational institutions such as UCSD to adopt a leadership role in researching how the cultures of the Pacific rim can interrelate. Even though the cultures of the Pacific rim and that of the Asian American communities are not identical nor even comparable at times, UCSD must show leadership in meeting the educational needs of Americans of Pacific rim heritage. As UCSD meets the educational needs of Americans of Pacific rim background, UCSD will once again demonstrate that it is capable of preparing all Americans for interrelating with Pacific rim cultures.

Within two decades, California is projected to have a minority of white residents. The percentage of Asian American students in the UC system has been high and it is increasing. Regardless of the future of California within the Pacific rim, the large and increasing numbers of Asian American students have needs which should be assessed and served. Asian American students, as well as all other students, should have the opportunity to learn about Asian American history, values, and heritage along with the European-American cultural heritage that is a part of the standard curriculum.

I would like to compliment UCSD for considering the Minor Program in Asian American studies. Many people in the San Diego community are appreciative of such efforts. Many of us will be following with great interest the further development of Asian American studies courses at UCSD.

Dear Professor Lin:

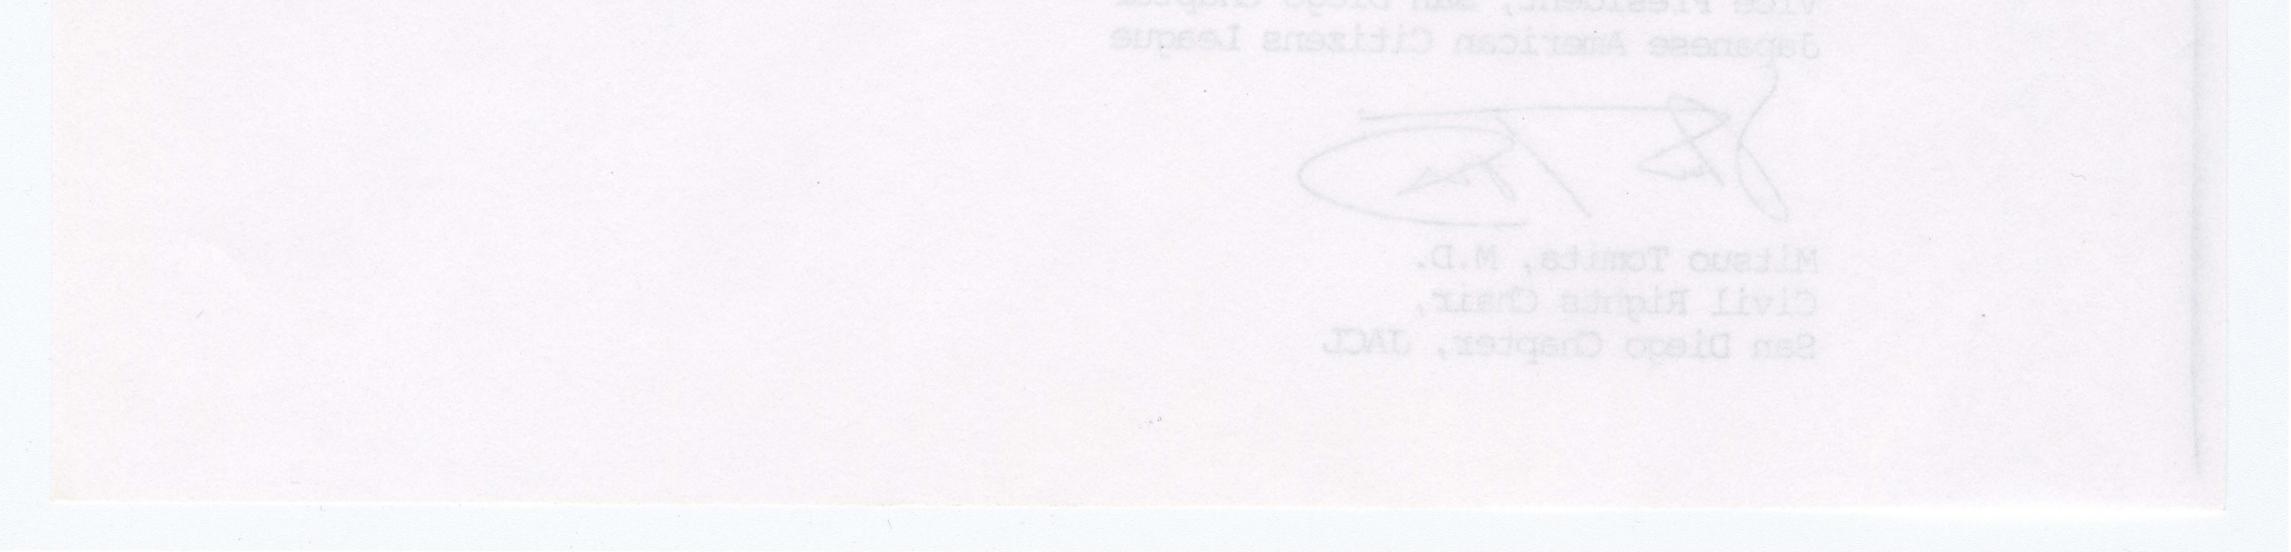

The proposed Asian-American Studies course would be of value for students of all backgrounds. It would focus direct attention on the history of Asian Americans in the United States. The information would assist all students to understand the cultural, political and social forces which influence the Asian-Pacific Islander populations.

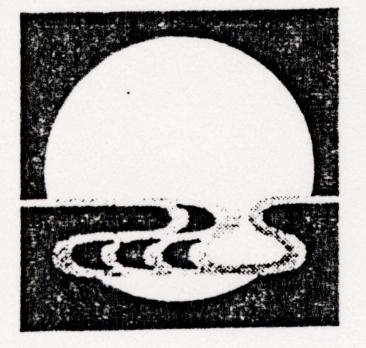

For students of Asian and Pacific Islander backgrounds, the course could give them valuable historical information. It could address important issues facing each of the Asian American populations.

Non-Asian students would learn that the Asian-American population is not a monolothic entity. Each cultural group is distinct in its strengths, weaknesses and concerns.

Dear Professor Lin:

I write in full support of your proposal for a program in Asian American studies at the University of California, San Diego.

As you point out in your rationale for a program, Asian American studies is essential to the university's service to its community and to its educational mission. The growing number of Asian American students on the University of California campuses and the changing demography of the state compel a consideration of the university's response to the needs of that community. In addition, intellectual honesty and curiosity about shifting global relations, notably the anticipated "Pacific era," require scholarly examination of a hitherto neglected aspect of American history and contemporary circumstance. Asian American studies is thus timely and important.

The program you propose offers a realistic scenario for your campus while utilizing existing resources to maximize what is already in place. Establishing a program base with a director and 0.5 FTE for visiting lecturers and distinguished guests will enable the beginnings of a fine program. At the same time, involving existing faculty in departmental offerings will expand the program's offerings and help to infuse the university's curriculum. I trust, nonetheless, that, once established, the program will be permitted to grow depending upon the response of students and faculty, and the support of the surrounding Asian American community.

In sum, I fully endorse your proposal and urge the administration's favorable response. You are not alone in seeking to institute an Asian American studies program during this period of fiscal restraint. Several universities on the East Coast, including Cornell, have only recently become convinced of the need for Asian American studies programs on their campuses and we are now witnessing a resurgence of interest and growth in Asian American studies in that region of the country. UC San Diego would do well to join in that effort.

Dear James:

With a great deal of interest, I read the Proposal for a Minor Program in Asian American Studies submitted by the Chancellor's Advisory Committee for Asian American Courses at the University of California, San Diego.

In reading the report, I was quite surprised to see that of all the U.C. campuses, the campus in San Diego is the only one that does not have a program in Asian American Studies. As you know, the contribution of the Asian Americans in California has been a very important one, and the full story of their contribution has never been fully told. It is important that this story, along with stories of other groups as well, be properly presented in our educational system in order for the country to grow in social maturity.

Please record me as one of the supporters in your group's efforts to have the administration of the University of California initiate such a program for the UCSD campus within the near future.

To Whom It May Concern,

Dear Academic Committee

The House of China heartily endorses the proposed course on Chinese/Asian History made by Dr. James Lin. The House of China is a 52 year old non-profit cultural and educational institution located in Balboa Park. Our aim is to preserve, present and promote Chinese and Chinese American culture and well-being.

As a prime writer of our 50th Anniversary Book and the Centennial Book of the Chinese Community Church, both in 1985, I can assure you of the wealth of local history. History is a key component of understanding and growth. For these reasons, we endorse Dr. Lin's proposal.

Sincerely ______

David Seid, President

To Whom It May Concern,

On May 1, 1986, I had the privilege of speaking to James Lin's Asian Studies class. As a writer of award-winning fiction and the posessor of a doctorate, I have spoken to similar classes on other campuses and to various conferences; and I have rarely found a betterprepared or more receptive audience. This was a group of some seventy people eager to learn about the Asian-American experience. As one student explained afterwards, he finds himself in between the white and Asian communities.

The course, then, fills not only fills a pressing educational need but emotional ones as well. The phrase, "exploring one's roots," has been used so much that it has become cliche; and yet it remains true nevertheless. A university should provide the means not only to round out a student's personality but also to deepen her or his own selfawareness.

More importantly, the class also draws older members of the community so that there was a cross-generational sharing. As one student said to me, her father rarely talks; but after the class he was willing to reminisce at great length.

Since the outside community takes such an active interest, the students are able to interact with other generations in a special and vital way. Thus, besides the academic materials, the students also have "living textbooks." The students, then, not only have theory but graphic lessons as well.

In short, James Lin's invaluable course should not only be continued; it should be expanded.

Sincerely,

Laurence Yep

ASIAN AMERICAN STUDIES AT UCSD

of the University of California at San Diego, La Jolla, California

Chancellor Richard Atkinson University of California San Diego Gilman Drive at La Jolla Village Drive La Jolla, CA 92093

Dear Chancellor Atkinson:

This letter is in support of Dr. James Lin's proposal for establishing an Asian American Studies Program at the San Diego Campus of the University of California.

As a Board member of the Union of Pan Asian Communities, I have come to appreciate the importance of the Asian community in San Diego. If recognized and properly nurtured, this growing community has much to contribute to San Diego's future. An Asian American Studies Program would be a good first step in realizing this potential.

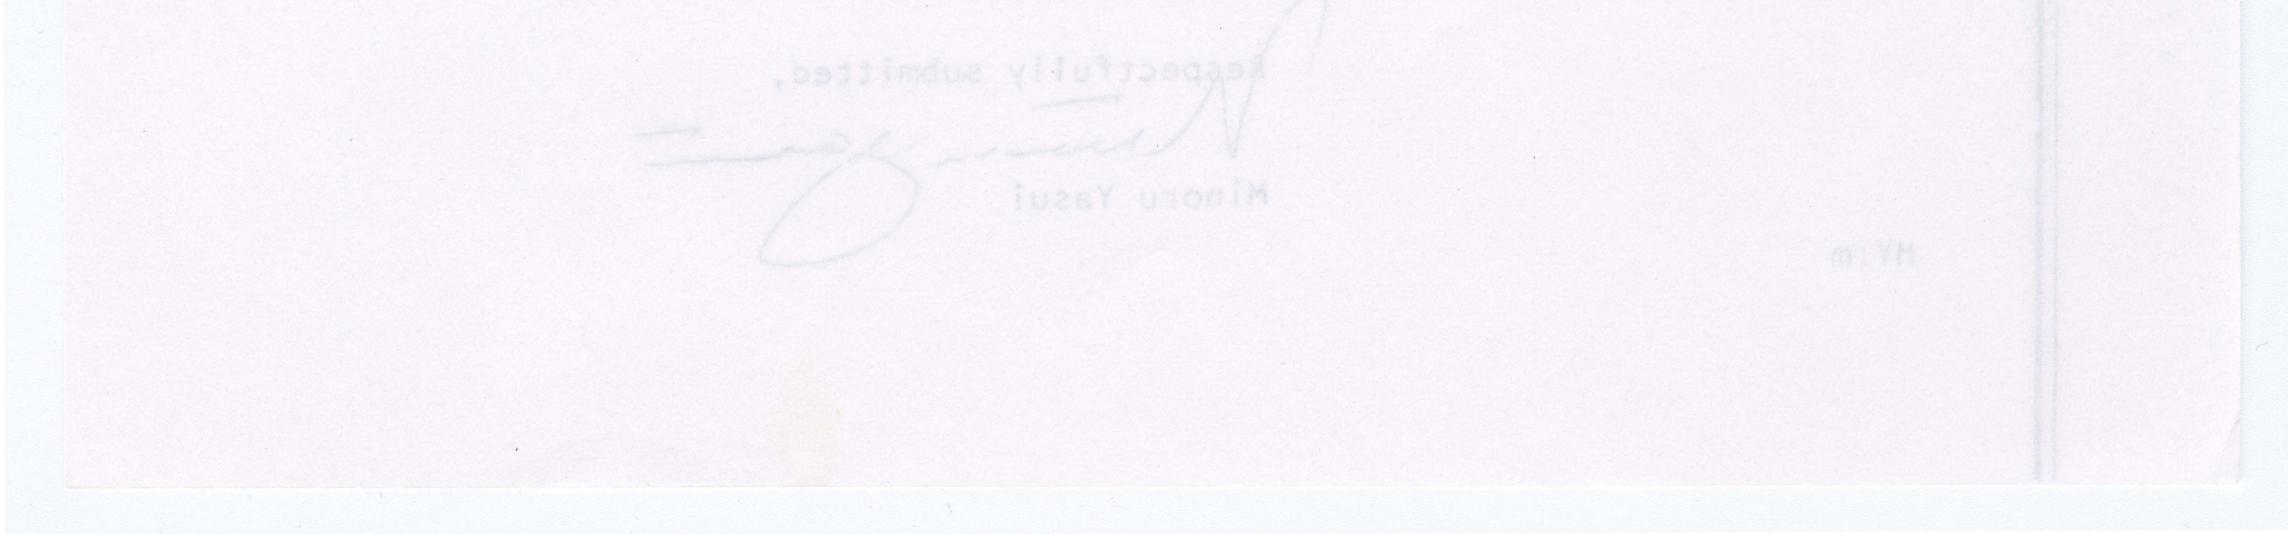

Very truly yours,

Have Surris

My brief stay on your compus, talking with hundreds of students, convinces me that a broad curriculum, including Asian American Studies, would be of academic validity and would fill an important need. I urga that courses in Asian American Studies be continued at UCSO.

Minoru Yasui, Attorney at Law (303) 722-9255 May 3, 1986 TO: THE COUNCIL OF PROVOSTS of the University of California at San Diego, La Jolla, California RE: ASIAN AMERICAN STUDIES

Having spent five days, April 6-11, 1986, on the campus of the University of California at San Diego, presenting formal talks and lectures at several classes and occasions, and speaking with dozens of students during that visit, I came away with the distinct feeling that lectures, courses and contacts with aspects of Asian American life in the United States would be not only greatly appreciated by many students, not limited to Asian/ Pacific American students, but would an intellectual void. Such a course on Asian American Studies is needed at the University of California at San Diego, it seemed to me.

During the five days, I and my wife were on UCSD campus, literally a dozen young people constantly hung around, asking questions and learning about the Japanese American experiences during World War II. There seemed almost a hunger to know more about the history of Asians in the United States, even going back to the days of the Gold Rush in California in 1849, and the contributions of Chinese labor in building the most difficult sections of our transcontinental railroads that stitched our country together. They were intrigued by stories and records of Filipino farm laborers and Japanese farmers in helping to develop the bountiful farmlands in the central valleys and coastal areas of California.

Moreover, to Asian American students, the role models of doctors, engineers, lawyers and judges, architects, musicians, fashion designers, journalists, TV reporters and anchors, business entrepreneurs, military personnel -- and even an astronaut (tragically lost in the explosion of the Challenger) -of Asian American background and heritage is of inspiration and is important for these students at the University of California at San Diego.

My brief stay on your campus, talking with hundreds of students, convinces me that a broad curriculum, including Asian American Studies, would be of academic validity and would fill an important need. I urge that courses in Asian American Studies be continued at UCSD.

Respectfully submitted, Minoru Yasui MY:m

Your recent Asian American Studies course conducted by you at the University received positive feedback in the community. I commend you for giving these valuable classes to the students.

I am strongly urging that you continue these courses each quarter. The content of the courses promotes greater understanding for the Pacific Asian Americans who contributed 150 years of their blood, sweat and tears to make America the great nation it is today.

Re: Asian American Studies Class

Dear Jim:

210 - 220 - 200

As a freelance writer for the Japanese American newspaper, Pacific Citizen, I was so impressed by the community and student participation that I was inspired to write an article (see attachment).

There was much excitement this quarter from the people I talked with. A class like this provides a vital service to the Asian/Pacific community. There was valuable exchange of knowledge about our rich heritage as Asian Americans.

Such a class is badly needed because too often there is little opportunity to learn about our history and culture in regular classes.

Due to the many positive effects that the class had on Asian American community and students, I support their efforts to bring a fulltime, permanent faculty person here to teach Asian American studies.

Sincerely,

Edna Ikeda

Dear Jim:

Thank you very much for inviting me to lecture to your Asian-American Studies class. I was very impressed by the preparation of the students and involved community members, and also by their enthusiasm for learning. As one of the students (a non-Asian woman from Riverside) put it, "This whole course has opened up a new area to me. I wish it had been offered two years ago."

Obviously, with its globally-oriented location, and in keeping with its standing as one of America's top universities, UCSD is the natural place to develop an Asian-American Studies program. With limited resources, I've offered an introductory course at this college for over ten years now, and the student response is always positive for they realize they are learning, not only about America, but about the Asian experience in general -- peoples, histories, cultures they have never really been exposed to.

You are to be commended for a job well done. I expect to be working with you in the future.

Sincerely,

Lawson F. Inada Professor
