Interviews

Last week we introduced you to interviews, their different types, their structure and their sequence.

This week we will look at:

GENERAL INTEREST INTERVIEWS

"General interest" interviews are often held by radio and newspaper journalists. They are the interviewers. The interviewee is normally someone important or well known: for example, a famous sportsman like John Aba. We often hear interviews on NBC.

The purpose of these interviews changes each time. It may be to find out about a person's opinions or way of life. It may be to talk about a particular thing, for example: the effects of a volcano or a footballer's trip to Australia.

A. STRUCTURE

The structure of these interviews is always the same: information needed → question → answer.

The information needed will depend on the purpose of the interview.

INFORMATION NEEDED

TALK ABOUT A RECENT VOLCANIC
ERUPTION
IN RABAUL

Time of explosion.
Date of explosion.
Length of explosion.
Number of deaths.

QUESTIONS

When...?
How long...?
How many...?

TALK TO FOOTBALLER, MICHAEL MARBAN

Success of his trip.
Chances of Eagles.

Did you...?
Do you think that...?

B. SEQUENCE

The sequence will usually be the same:

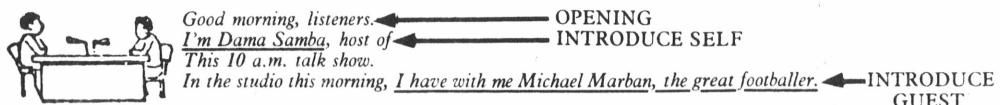

greeting → question/answer → farewell.

1. The greeting

This usually begins with an opening.

| | |
|---|--|
| Good morning Good afternoon Good evening Hello | listeners viewers ladies and gentlemen |
|---|--|

Next there is an "introduction". The interviewer gives his name and the name of his guest (the interviewee). He might also say what jobs he and his guest do.

The interviewer and his guest then greet each other.

I have with me Michael Marban, the great footballer.
Good morning, Michael Good morning, Dama.

Living and Learning

Last week, we showed how sound waves travel through the air. These vibrations make it possible for you to hear sounds. These sounds can be put into a machine, so that they can be heard many times.

The sound has to go into a microphone to be changed into electric current. Then this sound can be stored electronically on to a small plastic container holding tape called a cassette.

The College of External Studies has recorded books on to cassettes. Johnbili Tokome, who used to work at the NBC read all the description parts and some of the course writers from the college read the other parts into a microphone. These works were mixed with noises and music to make a complete story.

You can read the book and listen to the cassette. This helps reading and English. Besides being entertaining, these books with cassette packages were designed for people to:

- Listen carefully while following the printed words.
- Read some passages aloud with the cassette characters.
- Sometimes, stop the cassette and repeat what has been said.

The interviewer might also describe the place of the interview.

...I'm Dama Samba, host of the 10 a.m. talk show. In the studio this morning I have...

The reason for the interview is also given.

...Michael, you've just returned from a three week tour of Queensland...

2. The questions

The questions in a "general interest" interview will depend on the information needed.

| | INFORMATION NEEDED | QUESTIONS |
|--|---|---|
| POLITICAL INTERVIEW WITH A VISITING AUSTRALIAN | Find out his views about working women. Is there equal treatment etc. in Australia? | Do you think that work men and women are treated equally? Is there equal pay Australia? |
| LOOKING AT LIFE IN ENGLAND | Ask how long she's lived in England, Florence? Does she like East Langton? | How long have you lived in England, Florence? Have you lived in many different parts? Do you like East Langton? |
| TALK ABOUT RECENT VOLCANIC ERUPTION IN RABAUL | Place of explosion. Date of explosion. Time of explosion. Length of explosion. Number of deaths. Amount of damage. | Where did it explode? What day did it explode? What time did it explode? How long did the explosion last? How many people were killed? How much damage was caused? |

3. The farewell

The farewell in a "general interest" interview can also have several parts.

It can:

- summarise what was said
- thank the person for coming
- say goodnight/goodbye

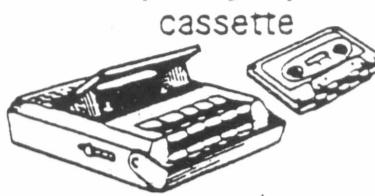

Well, that's all listeners.
Thanks for coming in, Michael. Goodbye and good luck.

The interviewer can be very relaxed and friendly as with the footballer: Thanks for...good luck, or more formal as with the Prime Minister:
Thank you very much for your time, Sir...

Next week we will look at survey interviews

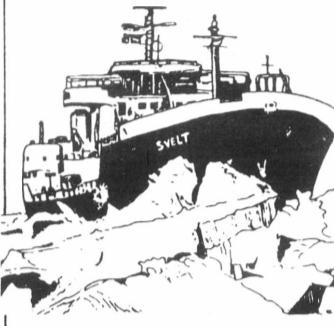

This will improve English speech.

B A R R A B R O S dribbled away from a strong Madsep challenge in the last round of the Kiunga A grade mens' basketball competition to win 35-29.

Although it was a low scoring game both sides played strong defensive basketball.

Early in the first half, Madsep, led by forward Michael Pagru, dominated the play by keeping Barra Bros away from the key hole.

Barra was forced to take long shots at the ring from which Madsep easily regained possession from the rebounds, however half way through the first stanza Madsep were leading 6-5.

But when Barra Bros' lofty centre Epesi "Forklift" Dabu came on, Barra started to dominate the key hole play to lead 12-6 at half time.

Despite the 34 degrees Celsius heat the game came even hotter. Both sides started to play open attacking basketball with Barra's improved forward Baiu Olewale backed up Dabu started to pour on the baskets.

Madsep's top scorer Joe Misiang was deadly accurate in his shots at the ring and kept his team in the game.

Misiang team mate Pagru assisted in controlling the Barra players.

The fulltime score was Barra Bros 35 defeated Madsep 29.

Both Barra Bros and Madsep are strong contenders for the semi-finals which start next week.

Man for man Madsep have better individual players while Barra Bros, though their members are not top players, have very good team work.

Scores in other games played last Sunday in A grade: Lutheran Youth belted Kiunga Vocational Centre 48-28 while Medics thrashed All Stars 43-16.

In the reserve grade West Gogos narrowly defeated Kiunga Vocational Centre 34-29. Trotters won on forfeit from BPs and Police had a bye.

Next weekend the semi-finals will be played and the association and team officials meet this week to finalise the arrangements for the matches.

BROWN Eagles' impeccable infield defence combined with Herman Tomar's tactical pitching enabled them to hold reigning champions Nissan Gazelle to a 3 all draw in a tight duel at the Bisini grounds last Sunday.

The game was played before a capacity crowd who were kept in suspense until it was time and game at the bottom of the sixth inning.

Eagles, who were sent in to bat, were two down with a runner on first base who just did not seem to have a chance. But it was cheeky little backstop "Oxie" who did a left hand bunt then dashed it to first, while his opponent Francis Diap, who was at backstop was dazed for a moment and panicking, threw the ball away above the first base into the right field. That proved to be a costly error as two Eagles came home safely.

Gazelle however got their own back with two home runs, both in the first inning to throw the game open again.

The next two innings that followed saw tight fielding as both pitchers sought out their opponents' batting strength.

But Gazelle managed to crawl in a home in the fourth inning to lead by one point. And

by ALFRED KANINIBA

this gave the Eagles more determination because of their efforts.

The next crucial inning, however, was scoreless but what really mattered was that time was running out as both teams were locked in mortal combat.

It was in the top of the sixth inning when Patrick Pilak walked Marika Tako, a former Gazelle player, to first base, who stole second. "We were actually looking for a win but it was our batting that kept us back. I have been working intensively on the batting because this is where we have been going veteran on. David Kaputin, who was next to bat, hit the ball into the right field and which saw Tako make the third base then slide home for the equaliser.

Eagles' coach Semi Parans said after the game he was quite pleased with his boys.

"Well if we have had a draw with Gazelle, I think it will give the other teams a boost of confidence when they meet Gazelle," Parans said.

Umpire Joe Pupua called time and game at the bottom of the sixth inning after Gazelle failed to make any down."

Coach Parans also gave special praise to his players in keeping up Gazelle's pressure and commended his pitcher Herman Tomar and Oxie at backstop who combined well throughout the game.

"We were actually looking for a win but it was our batting that kept us back. I have been working intensively on the batting because this is where we have been going ground in their final batting.

In the major upset of the weekend, Elcom blacked out Yokomo 13-5 in the fifth inning in another tight game. However, Yokomo played a better co-ordinated game in both the infield and the outfield.

Their batting too saw good placements while they stole bases and threw the whole Yokomo infield into a frenzy of wild and uncalculated throws which expedited Elcom's home runs.

Yokomo's backstop Bill Nuembi had a great backstop game and was able to reduce Elcom's home runs with several run outs on his opponents.

In the main game of the afternoon, Fuji recorded their first win for the season they edged out Malangan 3-1 in another tight game.

Malangan played a half-hearted game and just did not have that fire power to work them up.

Sato, who was leading his Fuji attack at third base however, played a great game catching crucial balls to run out Malangan's batters at first.

In the early games Mazda just edged out Kabiu 2-1

1954 soccer Cup World winner Fritz Walter turns 65

SOCER star Fritz Walter, 65, is still respectfully called Friedrich by his team-mates in the 1954 World Cup-winning side. It is a name that sooner or later prompts the epithet Friedrich the Great in German, and despite the merits of later German team captains Uwe Seeler of Hamburg and "Kasier" Franz Beckenbauer of Munich, Fritz Walter of Kaiserslautern has remained the nation's No. 1 soccer hero.

The bestselling book he wrote he simply entitled "3-2" after the final score of the World Cup final in Berne, Switzerland, where the Federal Republic of Germany beat the favourites, Hungary. Fritz Walter, 34, the captain took possession of the Jules Rimet trophy on what was truly a great day for German football.

A proverbially modest man, he fled the publicity of his 65th birthday and headed south with his Italian-born wife and a few close friends. He was always a quiet one, and one wonders whether he would fit into today's commercialised soccer, brilliant footballer or not.

He has never for a moment regretted that Bundesliga soccer with its big money and bumper transfer fees did not arrive until well after his playing days were over. "We had a better time of it," he says. "Everything was friendlier and more in the family."

That will have been why he turned down a sensational transfer bid of DM250,000 from Atletico Madrid in 1951. "Home is home," he says in broad dialect. When he is not signing autographs he works as a representative for several firms.

Home to him has always meant Betzenberg, the Kaiserslautern club ground. He scored his first goals there as an eight-year-old schoolboy. Later, as player-coach he put together the Read Devils who won the national championships in 1951 and 1953 and formed the backbone of the World Cup-winning side.

Fritz Walter has remained true to his home club, and it has honoured him accordingly. The Betzenberg ground, still feared by visiting sides, has been named Fritz Walter Stadium in his honour.
