

Joseph Strick to serve as a Regents' Lecturer

January 18, 1978

Academy Award winning director Joseph Strick, who has built successful careers in both the business and film world, will serve as a Regents' Lecturer at the University of California, San Diego January 30 to February 3.

Strick, whose film "Interviews with My Lai Veterans" won an Oscar in 1971, will meet with students in seminars and will give three public lectures/film showings while on the campus. His stay is sponsored by Revelle College.

During his career, Strick has brought two classic works by novelist James Joyce to the screen. He was producer and director of "Ulysses" which was nominated for an Academy Award in 1968 and last year he produced and directed "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man."

The three lectures and film showings, all free and open to the public, will be held in the Mandeville Auditorium. At the first, scheduled for 4 p.m. Monday, January 30, Strick will show and discuss "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." He will show and discuss his film "Ulysses" at 4 p.m. the next day, Tuesday, January 31.

In his final public presentation, scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday, February 2, Strick will show and discuss two other Joyce works adapted for film, "Dubliners" and "Finnegan's Wake."
