Dear Dr. S. L. G.

I have thought about your plan - which - as I understand it - is an endeavour to combine in one organisation financial, social, and scientific interests. You are therefore bound to have some inner clashes regarding policy - if it is ever near success - quite apart from the outside criticism which any 'mixed' plan of this kind must meet. As a financial proposition it can therefore be little interest to any ordinary investor & I don't know any 'joke' to whom I could put it up.

You will appreciate this letter is in answer to your financial enquiry: I don't know enough about your scientific or social ideas regarding the plan to estimate its suitability to the ends you may have in view.

As far as I understand your ideas, I should think the whole thing could only be handled by some financially interested group or trust, of adequate standing to guarantee a clear policy and to stife criticism

Yours sincerely,

Dear Whyte,

I ought to have thanked you for your letter of the end of January long since, but I left for America early in February and did not come to England until June.

The discussion which I had with you and your letter were very helpful in getting my mind clear on the subject and I feel I ought to tell you that I have made good progress through a chance observation, the interpretation of which is no longer doubtful. This does not mean that all the crucial points have been cleared up, but there is something like a fifty to fifty chance for an exciting development in the immediate future. Even if I over-estimate these chances to some extent, there is enough left to make it necessary to take some action.

I am spending most of my time in Oxford, where I have been offered a three years appointment which I should accept, if I can fit it in with these other things and I hope, if I stay in England, I shall see you now and again.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,
