INTRODUCTION.

THE Editor of the following Epistle has only to inform the Publick, that he has translated it with all the Fidelity, which the different Idioms of the two Languages will admit of. He is sensible that it is impossible in English, to convey any Idea of the Beauties of the Otaheite Tongue. It abounds with Diphthongs and Triphthongs, and every Word of it begins with a Vowel. Upon this Account it is infinitely harmonious, to which if we add the Beauty and Sublimity of its Metaphors, we shall only do it Justice if we pronounce it to be one of the noblest Languages, which has ever been spoken since the Confusion of Tongues.

The Editor is in Hopes that this little Specimen will excite the Curious to the Study of it; and he takes this Opportunity of informing them, that he is going to facilitate their Labours by the Publication of a compleat Grammar and Dictionary. This Work will be printed on the same Paper, and with the same Letter as Doctor Hawkesworth's celebrated Voyages, and will be ready to be delivered next Spring for the moderate Price of Three Guineas.

Guineas. It will be highly useful to such Gentlemen, as propose to visit the South Seas, and to make the Grand Tour.*

Dublin, Sept. 20th, 1773.

* If the Impression of this Work shall not be sold so soon as the Author flatters himself it will, he engages to publish it in weekly Numbers, at One Shilling each.

* The people of Otaheite could not pronounce Mr. Banks's name, but called him Opano.

Oft in the rocking boat we fondly lay,
 Nor fear'd the drizly wind, or briny spray.
 * Who led thee through the woods impervious shade,
 Pierc'd the thick covert, and explor'd the glade;
 Taught thee each plant that sips the morning dew,
 And brought the latent minerals to thy view?
 Still to those glades, those coverts I repair,
 Trace every alley—but thou art not there.
 Nor † herb, nor salutary plant I find,
 To cool the burning fever of my mind.
 Ah! ‡ I remember on the river's side,
 Whose babbling waters 'twixt the mountains glide,
 A bread-tree stands, on which with sharpen'd stone,
 To thy dear name I deign'd unite my own.
 Grow bread-tree, grow, nor envious hand remove
 The sculptur'd symbols of my constant love.
 To the vast § main a rock projecting lies,
 Where tempests howl, and roaring billows rise.

There first at eve thy opening sails I spy'd,
 And eager glow'd to cleave the briny tide.
 My faithful senate sat in wise debate,
 And weigh'd the dubious interests of the state.
 Though some with brandish'd lance for war declare,
 With all the frantic signs of wild despair;
 Yet I more soft to gentle peace inclin'd,
 And sooth'd the terrors of * Tupia's mind.
 Send them, I cry'd, twice twelve delicious dogs,
 And give them cocoas, women, bread, and hogs.
 'Twas morn, the gallant vessel steers to land;
 On the moist beach the marshall'd sailors stand.
 Then first the pangs of conscious love I knew,
 My eyes, my longing soul was fixt on you.
 To gain thy love I practis'd every art,
 And gave my kingdom as I gave my heart.
 Alas! what streams of scalding tears I shed,
 When you surpris'd † Obâdee in my bed;

- * Tupia was Prime Minister to Oberea. She consented that he should come to England with Mr. Banks, and thereby gave the strongest proof of her attachment to that gentleman. Unfortunately this great politician and philosopher died on the voyage. Luētusum hoc suis; acerbum patriæ; grave bonis omnibus. Cic.
 † On the 29th, not very early in the forenoon, Mr. Banks went to pay his court to Oberea, and was told that she was still asleep under the awning of her boat. Thither he went, and upon looking into her chamber, he found her in bed with a handsome young fellow about twenty-five, whose name was Obadee. Hawkes, Voyages.

From * my chaff'd temples strait my locks I twitch,
And with the prickly shell tataow my breech.

In the soft dance if e'er I chanc'd to move,
How throb'd thy bosom with impatient love!
Now slow I sail'd, and stole my easy way
With sweet, reluctant, amorous delay;
Then † in brisk circles glanc'd around, and beat
The measur'd cadence with my quivering feet.
My eyes refulgent beam'd with wanton fire,
And all my limbs were brac'd by fierce desire.
Not Hella's self with all her curious pas,
Her Rigadoons and motley Entre-chas;
With such luxuriant grace displays her thigh;
Or ‡ Temerédes with such ease as I.

Oft on thy lips, those lips of love, I hung,
To hear thee greet me in my native tongue;
§ Meete atira, sweetly you exprest,
Your eyes all-eloquent explain'd the rest.

‡ The Temerédes is the lascivious dance. See Hawkesworth's Voyages.
I had some difficulty to find out who Oberea meant by Hella, but an ingenious friend and critic suggested to me that it must be Mademoiselle Heinel, whose skill and fame we may suppose were highly exaggerated to Oberea by Monf. Bougainville.

Say fondest youth, canst thou forget the night,
When starting from your sleep in wild affright;

Sorrowing † I went beside the billowy main,
Search'd the long-winding coast, but search'd in vain.
My choicest garment strait I shar'd with you,
And fondly cloath'd you with my own ‡ Perou.

Nor strove not other suitors to impart,
A mutual passion to my royal heart;
My neck, my jetty eye-brows charm'd § Teete,
And Otapairoo pink'd his bum for me.

* Upon their visit to Tootahah, Mr. Banks thought himself fortunate in being placed by Oberea in her canoe. She insisted upon taking his cloaths into her custody. Awaking about eleven he found they were stolen, upon which he awakened Oberea, who starting up and hearing his complaint, ordered lights, and prepared in great haste to recover what he had lost. In the morning Oberea brought him some of her country cloaths.

 And lavish all the raptures due to thee.

 And ting'd the ocean with her livid blood.

Thrice with the shark's sharp tooth she pierc'd her head,

 And paid just honours to Opano's name.

† Tibora, Tumaida's wife.

‡ An exclamation of grief which signifies, where is he! Early in the morning on the 28th, a great number of women came down to the fort, and Teropoa being observed among them on the outside of the gate, Mr. Banks went out and brought her in. He saw that the tears stood in her eyes, and as soon as she entered they began to flow in great abundance. He enquired earnestly the cause, but instead of answering, she took from under her garment a shark's tooth, and struck it six or seven times into her head with great force. Vol. II. p. 104.

the principal, and who was called Oorattoa, stepped upon them, and taking up her garments all round her to the waist, turned about three times with great composure and deliberation. When this was done she dropped the veil, and stepping off the cloth, three pieces more were laid, and she repeated the ceremony. The three last were laid, and the ceremony was repeated the same manner the third time. Vol. II. p. 125.

* The part on which these ornaments are lavished is the breech; this in both sexes is covered with a deep black, above which arches are drawn one over another. These arches are their pride, and are shewn with great ostentation. Hawks. Voyages.

‡ A young man near six feet high performed the rites of Venus with a little girl about eleven or twelve, before several of our people and a great number of the natives. Among the natives were several women of superior rank, particularly Oberea, who may properly be said to have assisted at the ceremony. For they gave instructions to the girl how to perform her part, which young as she was she did not seem much to stand in need of. Vol. II. p. 12.

*Blanda truces animos fertur mollisse voluptas,
 Consisterant uno faemina, virque loco,
 Quid facerent ipsi nullo didicere magistro,
 Arte Venus nulla dulce peregit opus.*

The translator intended to have suppressed all passages of this nature, which might offend the chaste ear of a British reader. But as Doctor Hawkesworth's very luscious descriptions have been considered rather as sallies of his prurient imagination, than the transactions of real life, he thought it a piece of justice due to that great man to authenticate his narrative.

Experienc'd matrons the young pair survey'd,
 And urg'd to feats of love the self-taught maid;
 With skill superior she perform'd her part,
 And potent nature scorn'd the tricks of art.
 Curst be the envious gales that wafted o'er
 Those floating wigwams to our peaceful shore:
 With specious gifts a crew insidious came,
 And left us * bitter pledges of their flame.
 'Till then was nature free and love sincere,
 Nor generous passion quench'd by slavish fear.
 No pining maiden knew the venom'd kifs,
 But all was genuine extacy and blifs.

Oft have I wish'd, for such you love, that I
 Were metamorphos'd to some curious fly;
 Beyond the main I'd speed my eager way,
 And buz around you all the live-long day.
 Nor would I not be some-ombrageous tree,
 That shades thy grot, and vegetate for thee;
 At thy approach I'd all my flowers expand,
 And weave my wanton foliage round thy hand.

 Your houses, land, estates—I scorn them all.

 Nor twice as many pounds to buy my pins;
 Nor yet shall I the tardy fates reproach,

 With you, thrice dear Opano, oft I lay,
 Within the wigwam 'till the dawn of day;
 Then from my pack, with anxious care, for you,
 Chose the best dog, and stew'd the nice ragout.
 Ah! how I strove thy curious taste to hit,
 From the bak'd viands carv'd the brownest bit;

* Non ego miror opes, nec me tua regia tangit.
 † It is surprizing that Oberea should be so well acquainted with the manners of Great Britain; but as she appears to have had such fine parts, we may easily imagine that she did not fail to profit by her frequent conversations with Mr. Banks.
 ‡ The people of Otaheite have a custom of anointing their heads with what they call Monoe, which is an oil expressed from the cocoa nut.
 § It appears that music is cultivated in Otaheite to no small degree of perfection. Indeed this method of blowing the flute with the nostrils is admirably calculated for the cromatic.

Thrice happy youth! what bliss with thine could vie,
 To feed on dog's flesh, and with Queens to lie!
 * Parting you wept, this truth at least you'll own,
 Nor think that weakness, which was love alone,
 Stedfast I gaz'd, till from my aching view,
 Your lessening canvass gradually withdrew.
 Then to my tent I ran in wild despair,
 And e'en in dreams renew'd my anxious care.
 Whene'er I strove my slumbering eyes to close,
 Terrific phantoms, dread illusions rose.
 Now o'er the waters I appear'd to float,
 And fondly clasp you in the † crazy boat.
 ‡ Culling choice simples, now I seem'd to go,
 O'er barren wastes, a wilderness of woe!
 Where'er I turn'd the dread § Morais appear'd,
 And the wild shrieks of frantic grief were heard.
