Fall Applications at Six-Year High

SAN FRANCISCO - The number of Fall 1995 applications sent by California high school seniors to University of California campuses increased by nearly five percent. The UC system received 43,364 applications, the largest number since 1989. "We are extremely pleased that the university remains the popular choice for California students," said UC President Jack Peltason. "We appreciate this vote of confidence from the students. California high school seniors seem assured we have preserved quality despite severe budget cuts."

UCLA Installs Video Tele-conferencing

LOS ANGELES - A new video-teleconferencing system has recently been installed at UCLA's Student Affairs Office (SAO). David Chien, from the SAO, said that with the system, "people won't need to come to UCLA anymore, they would be able to telecommute." The system, on a temporary loan to UCLA from Mark Thompson Right Way Inc., links SAO with Douglas Martin, the chancellor's assistant on the American with Disabilities Act. Martin, who is in a wheelchair, uses the new technology to communicate with others on campus. UCLA is waiting for money from the U.S. Department of Education to purchase the system.

Davis Professors Find Key to Love

DAVIS - Two UC Davis psychology professors recently found in a study that romantic feelings are environmentally, not genetically, determined. In their study, Associate Professor Niels Waller and Professor Phillip Shaver questioned 890 adult twins on their attitudes about six dimensions of love. The twins responded to statements such as "Our lovemaking is very intense and satisfying," or "Sometimes I get so excited about love that I can't sleep." Waller and Shaver found no correlation between the attitudes of fraternal twins and identical twins, showing that nongenetic factors were at work.

Cheating Allegations Plague Computer GRE

TESTS: ETS sues Kaplan after investigation reveals high predictability of tests

By Ivan Delventhal

Senior Staff Writer

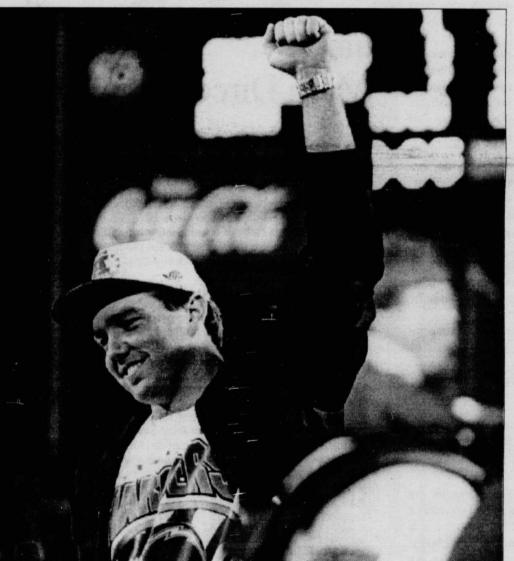

The Educational Testing Service (ETS) has filed suit against Kaplan Educational Centers, after the nation's largest private test preparation firm reassembled 75 percent of the computerized version of the Graduate Record Exam (GRE), administered by ETS, to demonstrate how vulnerable the test is to cheating.

Kaplan initiated its investigation after students who had taken the computerized GRE reported that the same questions were repeatedly being asked on the test.

Early last fall, Kaplan sent 20 undercover employees to test sites across the nation with the intention of remembering questions from the GRE.

The results were startling, according to Jose Ferreira, Kaplan's national GRE director. "We were honestly surprised at how fast and easy it See CHEATING, Page 3

ADMINISTRATION: Peltason has not confirmed reports, but announcement may come at this week's Regents meeting

By Francisco DeVries

Senior Staff Writer

UC President Jack Peltason, who has led the nine-campus UC system since late 1992, is reportedly stepping down from his post when his contract expires Oct. 1.

A formal announcement may be made during the Board of Regents meeting to be held in San Francisco later this week, according to a report in last Thursday's San Francisco Chronicle.

After news reports surfaced late last week, Peltason stated in a press release that he took his position "with the intention of helping the university work its way through a difficult transition period. We've reached a period of relative stability, but I don't have any announcement to make today."

Peltason did state, however, that he had not signed on to his $243,000-per-year post "for life."

Peltason's short tenure has come during the worst financial crisis in the 127-year history of the university. Last week, Gov. Pete Wilson unveiled a proposed state budget which calls for another 10-percent fee hike for UC students.

During the first two years Peltason served as president, student fees increased by nearly $1,000.

The budget crisis was already in full swing when Peltason took the university's helm in 1992. At his inauguration ceremony, several hundred black-clad student protestors planted crosses in the lawn outside the event and laid down to symbolize the death of the university.

Peltason's resignation would be followed by

San Diego Transit Plans June Cut in Bus Service to UCSD

TRANSPORTATION:

Public concerns prompt delays in route changes

By Tom Barkley

Associate News Editor

Proposed changes to San Diego Transit bus routes, which would have involved significant cuts in service to the UCSD campus, have been postponed until June of this year.

According to Tim Price, senior transportation planner at the Metropolitan Transit Development Board (MTDB), the board voted to review the changes after concerns were raised by UCSD-area commuters and UCSD officials during an Oct. 6 public hearing.

The proposed changes, meant to help alleviate a budget crisis, would affect Routes 34, 41 and 50/150 in the UCSD area.

"We needed a little more time to refine the plan," Price said. "There were some valid questions raised by the [UCSD] community that we are looking at in determining the best way to maintain service there."

Price said that misunderstandings about the changes were behind many concerns. "Some people thought that San Diego Transit would remove service to their area completely," he said. "One of the principles that we've had in the evaluation is that when we're going to make a change, we don't want to take transit away completely. We wanted to have some level of service."

At the MTDB meeting, UCSD campus community planner Milt Phegley brought up several problems which might affect UCSD commuters, such as assuring that the timing of the new routes made transfers convenient. "Someone traveling on the new Route 34 who wanted to get to Thornton Hospital would have to make a transfer at the VA Hospital," Phegley said. "I asked [the MTDB] to give careful consideration to the route timing so that those transfers can be easily made."

Price said that the MTDB will try to accommodate the various concerns. He added that, although there will be some amount of inconvenience, "It's a penalty that we all must agree to if this funding problem is resolved."

BRIEFLY... Mesa Director to Head Art Gallery

UCSD has named Kathleen Stoughton as the new director of the University Art Gallery. Stoughton, currently gallery director and professor of museum studies at San Diego Mesa College, will begin her new job Jan. 17.

Stoughton will replace former gallery director Gerry McAllister, who held the position since 1974.

Frantisek Deak, dean of Division of Arts and Humanities at UCSD, said that Stoughton was brought in to help spearhead the development of a new, larger gallery. "Kathleen Stoughton has the ability and ambition to take the University Art Gallery on its next stage of development, during which time it will become a major artistic and intellectual resource for the university and the community," Deak said.

At Mesa College, Stoughton created a Museum Studies Program to train students for internships and staff positions in museums. She was also responsible for seven exhibitions a year.

Prior to her work at Mesa College, Stoughton was the American Art Forum coordinator at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American Art, where she received an Outstanding Achievement Award.

Her other achievements include the Meritorious Service Award, from San Diego Community College District; Educator of the Year Award, from Greater San Diego Industry-Education Council; and Tribute to Women in Industry Award for San Diego County.

Mexico Sponsors UCSD Science Education for Its Best Students

A new fellowship program established by UCSD and the Mexican National Council of Science and Technology, will allow up to 10 Mexican graduate students in natural or physical sciences to be accepted each year. The Mexican government will pay half the cost of educating the students.

UCSD is one of 10 universities targeted for the program by the Mexican government in an effort to educate their country's brightest students at some of the best research institutions in the United States.

The first Mexican students will be recruited over the next few months, according to UCSD Physics Professor Ivan Schuller, coordinator of the program at UCSD.

Multicultural Job Fair Will Provide Career Opportunities

The Fourth Annual Multicultural Job Fair, offering work opportunities for career positions, part-time jobs and internships, will be held Thurs., Jan. 26, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Price Center Ballroom.

The fair, co-sponsored by Career Services and the Student Affirmative Action/Human Relations Program, will attract over 60 employers representing a wide number of industries.

Everyone is welcome to attend, and resumes are recommended. For more information, call 534-3750.

Program on International Affairs Lets Students Talk With Experts

College students interested in international affairs will get an opportunity to discuss issues with leading experts in a United Nations Association (UNA) program called "International Perspectives."

The San Diego branch of the UNA is offering this program series to San Diego college students and foreign students alike.

The UNA is encouraging students with diverse backgrounds to share their personal experiences and viewpoints, and to foster an environment of reciprocal education

ETS seeks statutory damages as well as copyright infringement, breach of contract and fraud.

"We appreciated the opportunity to meet with Kaplan," said ETS spokesman Ray Nicosia, "But after doing so, we realized they had broken the law on four different counts, and we filed suit."

Kaplan broke the law, Nicosia said, because when a person takes the GRE, he or she signs a contract in which they agree not disclose any of the questions.

According to Nicosia, even though Kaplan shared their reconstructed test only with ETS, this still constitutes a breach of contract.

OPINION

GUARDIAN FORUM: How far have we come in the struggle for equality - and where are we going?

The State of the Dream

As we honor the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., thirtysomething years after the Civil Rights Movement was born, we are left with the daunting question of how far we have actually progressed — the state of the dream - and perhaps more importantly, where we are headed. To this end, the Guardian posed these questions to various students and educators in the UCSD and San Diego communities.

Sanford Lakoff

Professor of Political Science, UCSD

It's [the civil rights movement] been successful in ending formal legal segregation in this country, but it's open to question if it's been successful since then. There is disagreement as to what direction should be taken... [its goals were to] guarantee equal opportunity and eliminate segregation and separatism, [despite the country's] cultural heterogeneity.

Like all other universities, we've [UCSD] become sensitive to the equal opportunity question ... [but] I disagree with the idea of quotas. Programs which admit students by race [or] gender ... are wrong and self-defeat-

The country is moving in a good direction [with civil rights]. A great deal of progress has been made on those lines. As for the problem with blacks in the underclass - the ghetto underclass - we're in serious trouble. There needs to be an alleviation of not just poverty, but the division of society into a middle class and an underclass... It [civil rights movement] doesn't work.

We're in pretty bad shape right now. We shouldn't really worry too much about that issue [civil rights], but rather the state and problems of the underclass. The civil rights movement was... relevant when we had to achieve civil rights. But now, we need to worry more about how to alleviate distress that develops when you have ghetto conditions Without family structure, values, skills and opportunities, it's a question of alleviating the poverty and distress that's associated with those conditions.

This is a problem which affects people ... in the whole society. These are issues which affect us all. They're not just civil rights issues.

I would like to emphasize that it's a good thing that we have a holiday for Dr. King, because he stood not just for civil rights, but he understood that society, not just civil rights... would provide opportunities for people of all sorts We will have achieved Dr. King's dream in civil rights [in the future], but not in promoting the feeling people have of having real opportunity.

Joseph Watson Vice Chancellor of Undergraduate Affairs

It's my view that we've come fairly far that progress has been made, but it has still been limited. We need new approaches and new strategies. I hope that 1995 will be a watershed in this respect. I think that Gov. Wilson and his call for the elimination of affirmative action may do one of the best things for equality and justice ... it puts [civil rights issues] back on the table for discussion. Affirmative action has not been that beneficial, particularly for African Americans. It's time that African Americans in particular reassess things - their dreams, their goals, their [aspirations.] The importance of Martin Luther King is not the dream, not [the message] of nonviolence, but the [idea] of constant struggle.

Ernie McCray Principal of Marvin

Elementary School, San Diego

On any given day, my response [to that question] is different. I look at the situation and see progress, and I look at other things and I wonder. Middle-class people have benefited from breaking down walls [which block opportunity.] But when I look at the masses, I don't think we've come very far

The American dream is alive, but I see too many who haven't seen it. I see kids who are caught up with their daily lives — the turf war on 39th St. - and don't see that the whole world is theirs.

- Ernie McCray Principal, Marvin Elementary School

we see [high death-rates among] black males, gangs, drive-by shootings, teen-age mothers. The American dream is alive, but I see too many who haven't seen it. I see kids who are caught up with their daily lives the turf war on 39th St. - and don't see that the whole world is theirs.

Martin Luther King, Jr. is a significant part of who I am. He gave me a lot of hope. He showed me that I can love apologetically.

But I am frightened by the prospects for the future. When looking at Proposition 187, it seemed to have popped out of nowhere -I know it didn't, but it gathered so much support, so quickly. [Now] we are facing Gov. Wilson's attempt to eliminate affirmative action What we are seeing is an out-andout war against people who are struggling. It doesn't always bother me when politicians go crazy - that's what they're elected for - but when people readily embrace it, I find that frightening.

When I leave the planet, I don't think it'll be in very good shape. Human beings against human beings - that wasn't part of the dream. I don't see a lot of prospects for peace. Those of us who [are working for See VOICES, Page 6

RECLAIMING THE LEGACY OF KING

By Sara Flocks

In the summer of 1963, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., delivered his "I Have a Dream" speech at the March on Washington to over 200,000 Americans. The image of Dr. King administration. giving this speech, while thousands of people sang "We Shall Overcome," touches the hearts of many Americans. And it is primarily this image which endeared Dr. King to tin Luther King, Jr. Day possible. Even though many organizations other than King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference actively fought for civil rights, Dr. King has become synonymous with the Civil Rights Movement. His popular appeal is largely the result of his message of nonviolence and love, which he brilliantly conveyed through his speeches.

However, while the March on Washington and King's famous speech were moving, they failed to express much of the black community's anger and frustration of government inaction on civil rights, and the pervasiveness of racism and racial violence. John Lewis, a leader of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), who had seen FBI agents stand aside and watch as the Freedom Riders

In Malcolm X's assessment, the March on Washington was not a victory for the Civil Rights Movement, but rather, it "became a picnic, a circus.... No, it was a sellout. It was a takeover."

The speech may have been a symbol of the Civil Rights movement, but it did little to pacify the black community's rage. While the national government enacted civil rights legislation, such as the Voting Rights Act of 1965, blacks in the ghetto expressed their disappointment at the discrepancy between federal law and the lack of improvement in living conditions were beaten while trying to integrate and the way they were treated. 1967 was also the year in which King fell out of favor with the government, and, as stated in a 1976 Senate report on the FBI, it was the stroy Dr. Martin Luther King." One of the reasons why the government Americans hear so little about this

King said, "The black revolution ... suggests that radical reconstruction of society itself is the real issue to be faced. We are engaged in a class struggle " King began criticizing the materialism, militarism, capitalism and rigid class system of American society. No longer could the government make token gestures toward equality to pacify King and the Civil Rights Movement. King could no longer accept simple government reforms as sufficient progress. He saw that economic disparity, as a result of capitalism, was intertwined with racial inequality, leading to his critique of the political structure it-

OPINION 5

In order to universally extend civil and human rights, simple social and political reforms are inadequate. Equality requires that we reexamine and restructure our government, our society, our values and our priorities. As we observe Martin Luther King, Jr. Day this year, instead of quoting his "I Have a Dream" speech, we should quote from his 1967 speech on revolution, in which he said, "It is forcing America to face all its interrelated flaws - racism, poverty, militarism and materialism. It reveals systemic rather than superficial flaws and suggests that radical reconstruction of society itself is the real issue to be

Ramon Gutierrez

Chair/Professor of Ethnic Studies, UCSD

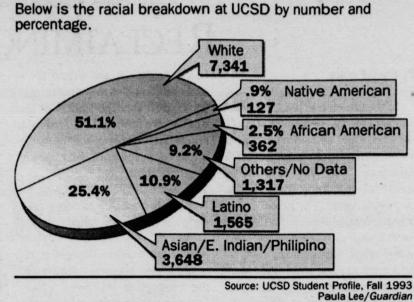

Civil rights was successful in gaining larger access to educational institutions, work opportunities and housing... to a large number of people. Whether it's transformed the United States - you still have minorities in the bottom rungs of the country.

There is a growing hostility toward minorities, particularly with Wilson's proposal to end affirmative action. Affirmative action has had a complicated history, but it gave opportunities of housing and employment to a variety of people who were formerly locked out. One can only expect that... there will be greater mobilization of these populations.

Sharon Apple Vice Chair of Student Affirmative Action Committee (SAAC),

The Civil Rights Movement made people see certain things in different aspects. It helped people to see that there are certain privileges given to people because of their [skin] color ... [but] it's not only based on color or sex, but on cause we have [programs] like af- discrimination [are] hard to change.

firmative action. There are laws now Proposition 187 ... There's also Gov. that have made the Civil Rights Movement less needed.

> [But] things still need to be done. We don't have total equality for every race, creed or ethnicity. I don't think equality will ever be achieved - only if we teach our children that everybody is equal.

Unconsciously, some people think that because they are in the lower class, they don't have opportunities. They don't see that they can [achieve certain goals.] Civil rights has changed its goals. We're not only fighting for equality by race, but also by class. Lower classes are trying to get the same opportunities as [upper] classes.

Carla Tesak A.S. President, UCSD

I don't think it's [civil rights] where it should be ..., but we've come a long way. There's a lot more subtle discrimination. For the amount of time that has gone by, we've made great strides. But his-

There needs to be a change. Right now, it's kind of stagnant. [Current strategies] are not successful in alleviating discrimination there's a lot of backlash. The idea behind affirmative action is right, but the results get a lot of resentment. It's discredited under-represented groups. People assume that they're [in a given position] because of affirmative action, not because of their qualifications or hard work I don't think that it has achieved

Triton Sailors Soar in Season Prep

TORRENTS: UCSD battles rain-soaked conditions at Rose Bowl regatta

By Tedd Ladd

Associate Sports Editor It was the first tune-up for the season. It was a tangle with the big boys. It was the UCSD sailing team showing off its skills.

The Triton sailors, sporting a young squad and a brand-new Flying Junior boat, marched northward on Jan. 7-8 to Alameda Yacht Club for the annual Rose Bowl Regatta.

And while the final results are still pending, UCSD did clearly finish within the middle of the pack of the highly-competitive event.

"You had to use a lot of tactics in this race," said team captain Jason Pettit. "It was a good test of our navigating skills."

heavy wind and torrential down- can see who the best sailors are, not pours, the fiesty Tritons held their own against the 17-school field. Pettit.

Division I powerhouses — such as Stanford, the Naval Academy and UC Berkeley — made the task all the more difficult.

"The weather was awful," said Pettit. "You couldn't read the wind off the water because of all the rain, and the 'tell-tales' stuck to the sails. Staying out there was an achievement in itself."

The regatta consisted of a unique "round robin" format in which schools rotated boats after each race. Two races were held Saturday and four were squeezed in on Sunday on the one and one-half mile course. Each race took approximately onehalf hour

"It's a nice format because it re-Maneuvering through fairly ally evens out the competition. You just who has the best boat," said

The Triton "A" crew, with Pettit and Erica Sellin, led the way for UCSD around the half-windward. half-leeward course. The Triton "B" squad - of Eric Wilcox and Jason Hannigan - also performed admirably, especially given the adverse

"Our next race is the first one that really counts," said Pettit. "We'll probably be changing up the crews a bit because some of our best sailors were unable to compete [in the Rose Bowl Regatta]."

The Triton sailors' South Series I and II races in Santa Barbara on Jan. 28-29 will be their first test as to how they stack up against the top schools in their division.

"We're young and we don't have much experience," Pettit said. "But I thought we did really well out there."

BOWL: Chargers biggest win in history

the AFC West and a first-round bye. Heads turned once again as the Chargers prepared for their Jan. 8 match-up with the Dolphins. This time, the Chargers said nothing. They won the game and were going to the AFC Championship.

Enter Team Two. The Pittsburgh Steelers played well all season. By mid-schedule they had replaced the faltering Chargers as the premier team in the AFC. After a decade of defensive mediocrity, the Iron Curtain descended onto the Steel City once again. Blitzburgh fans were going nuts, painting their faces black and gold ... and this was on Wednesdays. Even Rush Limbaugh graciously gave of his airtime trickle-down talk radio, I guess ---to go nuts about the Steelers.

As Pittsburgh pounded out a 12-4 regular-season record, clinching home-field advantage throughout a local hotel ballroom. The only the playoffs, something familiar happened. Inflated egos and a lot of hot air rose from the Iron Curtain.

It was now their turn to talk about the Super Bowl. They Seals guaranteed that the Chargers pummelled the Browns in their first playoff game, earning a ticket to the AFC title game. Eight point favor- the Chargers said nothing. They ites against the Bolts, the Steelers implemented a curious pre-game ball game - their first AFC Chamstrategy of blitzing the press corps. But they avoided the actual game. Tony Martin kept his trap shut.

In fact, the team ended practice early one afternoon to film their Super Bowl video. The Chargers, however, practiced wherever they could avoid rain, even setting up camp in downside was that punter Bryan Wagner's hang-time stats dropped like a rock with the low ceilings.

Steeler defensive lineman Ray wouldn't score a single point. And he wasn't talking about Sega. But were too busy preparing for a footpionship game since 1982. Even Amazingly, everyone — except for San Diego fans — took the Steelers' overconfidence for confidence. Nobody gave the Bolts a chance. But no one was laughing after two quarters of this San Diego-Steeler battle. The Chargers were down by a mere touchdown, prompting the NBC crew to roll out statistics about the Bolts' nine come-from-behind victories.

The Iron Curtain soon became Victim 10. After a week of silence, the Chargers spoke, but not with words. "They did their talking in the Stan Humphries said after the game. "We did ours on the field."

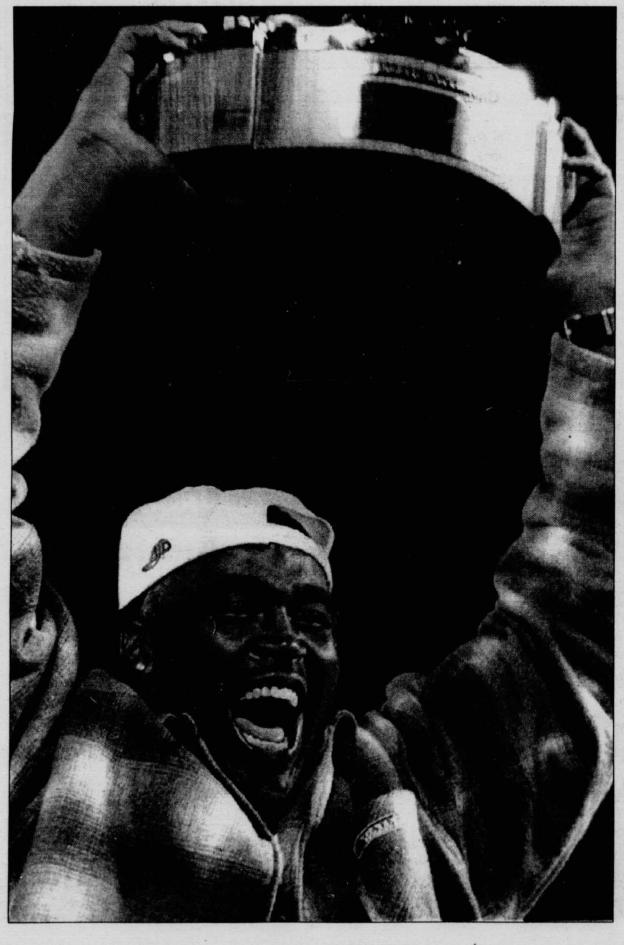

He silenced the Blizburgh crowd with two TD passes, one to Alfred Pupunu and another to Tony Martin, whose hands were sure... now that he had just one thing on his mind. The Steelers had nothing to say. They needed to get into the end zone to retake the lead. They got as far as the three-yard line.

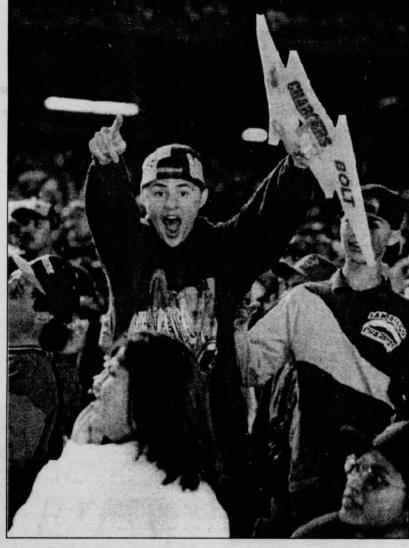

Exit Team Two, stage right. No more lines, no more football. A Super Bowl video without a Super Bowl berth. The Chargers are going to the Super Bowl. No matter how many times I say it, I'll never papers," San Diego quarterback believe it. The cursed Raiders denied them this blessed fate in 1981: the Ice Bowl did the same in 1982.

Despite their amazing wins, no one gives them a chance against the 49ers. Stan the Man said, "We'll probably be 14-15 point underdogs. It don't matter, we're there." Stan's wrong. The Chargers are 17-20 point underdogs, the highest spread in Super Bowl history.

But he's also right. Now that the Chargers are in the Bowl, you can't count them out. Pre-season polls put them in the cellar, but they captured the division. The Steelers took the Chargers for a small hurdle on the way to the Big Game, but on Sunday that hurdle was a bit too tall.

As it turned out for the Chargers, it was the best of times.

JEFF LARSEN

The Bolt Needs No Words

With apologies to Dickens, I call it a "Tale of Two Teams." Enter Team One. The San Diego Chargers began the season with six electrifying victories, including comeback wins against two division rivals: the Broncos and the cursed Raiders. Nevertheless, the football world was only mildly impressed. "Weak opponents," some said. "Inexperienced receivers," others added.

Charger players were insulted by this naysaying, but they failed to realize that respect can never be demanded. And unfortunately, instead of ignoring the press and focusing on extending their win streak, they got cocky. They uttered those two hallowed words: "Super Bowl." This was not in the hushed, reverent tones that such phrases demand, but in post-game press conferences, interviews, and anywhere with big cameras and bright lights.

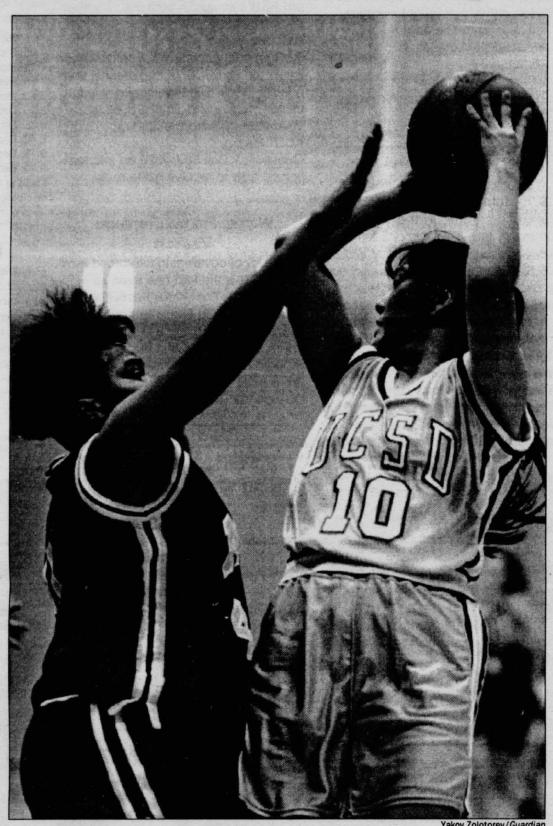

Bolt wideout Tony Martin went so far as to proclaim that he could be as good as the 49ers' Jerry Rice (a.k.a. "God"). In the meantime, Touchdown Tony didn't bother with the trivial things ... like catching balls. I guess it proves the old adage about doing two things at the same time. For most people, it means being unable to walk and chew gum. For T.D. Martin, it meant talking smack and catching passes.

Before long, the Chargers were so concerned with Jan. 29 that they began to look beyond the piddly Sunday matchups, like the ones when the Broncos came to town or the ones in Atlanta and New England. Three games that were almost certain wins; three games they lost

Panthers Roar in Squeaker, 68-67

Cindy Yamasaki tallied 11 points and nailed a clutch trey during UCSD's narrow defeat.

HOOPS: Tritons recover from 11-point deficit, but unable to pull out win against Chapman

By Dan Kraft

Sports Editor

Everyone is aiming for the UCSD women's basketball team coming down the stretch this season, especially since the Tritons rolled up an early 9-2 record. The first team to eye this opportunity was Chapman University on Saturday night, and after sticking it to the Tritons in the first half, the Panthers held off a vigorous UCSD rally to win a one-point squeaker, 68-67.

"We have to be ready for people to be gunning for us," UCSD Head Coach Judy Malone said. "[Chapman's] been gunning for us since the [UCSD Invitational]. They were ready and we weren't."

The Tritons trailed by eight points at halftime because of a sluggish start. The fired-up Chapman squad jumped on UCSD and took full advantage early, taking a 36-28 lead into the locker room.

"Chapman really took control early," Malone said. "But we came back well. We haven't been able to do that in the past when teams got up on us."

Not more than 10 seconds into the second half, the Panthers converted a three-point play that put them up by 11, and from that point on, the Tritons were on the comeback trail.

Janessa Bayda's hot shooting (3-5 from threepoint land) helped spearhead UCSD's secondhalf charge. Stacy Patsko (6-6 from the floor, 12 points) and Cindy Yamasaki (11 points) were also key elements in the Tritons' comeback. UCSD closed the gap to four points late in the contest, but then traded hoops with the Panthers for the better part of the last two minutes unable to surge ahead.

Trailing by four points with under 20 seconds remaining, UCSD was forced to foul and hope for a miss. The Tritons got their wish, rebounding the free-throw miss and dribbling up the court looking for a three-point hoop and the foul to tie. The Tritons used too much of the clock trying to find the open shot, however, and Bayda's long bomb came with too little time on the.

As the losses piled up, the Chargers even struggled in the games they did win. In fact, the Bolts began to look like your average 9-7 team - an inconsistent squad which simply happened to start the season with a flash-in-the-pan 6-0 streak. Charger press conferences became quieter, no longer polluted by bold promises and self-directed praise. Less time talking eventually meant more time playing solid football. As a result, San Diego's Bolts finished up 11-5, taking See BOWL, Page 14

H20: UCSD swimmers march on Claremont; divers invade UCLA invite

By Dan Kraft Sports Editor *

This weekend the UCSD swimming and diving squads went their separate ways each team looking for some tough competition in preparation for the conference championships next month.

The divers headed to the UCLA Diving Invitational which boasted 16 schools from across the nation, most of which had Division I programs. UCSD was the only Division

III school invited to compete. The Tritons did not pass up the opportunity to hit the road and the water for some of the best competition of the year and, over the course of the two day tournament, UCSD as a whole, and junior standout Adam Burgasser in particular, sent the big boys a message: Don't underestimate this Division III program.

The Tritons took a small but distinguished crew of divers to Los Angeles where Stanford and the University of Houston were among the big names in attendance. UCSD's squad numbered only four: Burgasser, Brigitte Elfman, Josh Curtiss and Sheri Takeuchi.

Despite being greatly outnumbered, the Tritons made a name for themselves. Takeuchi earned a top-16 finish for her performance in the three-meter springboard event, while Curtiss grabbed the same honor on the men's side.

Adam Burgasser took second in the platform at UCLA invite.

THE WEEK AHEAD

Men's Basketball: Fri., Jan. 20, at Dominican College, 7:30 p.m.

Women's Basketball: Tonight, vs. La Verne University at RIMAC Main Arena, 7 p.m.
