Chancellor McElroy says a student fee hike of $1,200 is likely if the Jarvis II income tax-cutting initiative passes in June.

By Kathy Huffer
Managing Editor

While the passage of "Jarvis II" would probably result in an implementation of tuition next fall and widespread cutbacks at UCSD, there is no chance that academic departments or programs will be eliminated, Chancellor William McElroy declared Friday.

Labeling academics "the heart of the university," McElroy said they will receive the highest priority for protection against the tax initiative.

McElroy spoke in response to recent "rumors" that liberal arts departments and programs might be eliminated at UCSD under Jarvis II.

"If Jarvis II passes, we're going to do everything to protect the arts and science campus," he said. "There's no intent to close any programs."

McElroy was reluctant to discuss possible areas of cuts that would be necessary if the tax initiative passes in June, until UC President David Saxon submits a contingency budget later this week.

Jarvis Won't Cut Academic Programs, but $1200 Tuition Seen

The budget will not be broken down by campuses, but will serve as a guideline to how much the university will suffer from the Jarvis initiative, and will be "an iffy thing," McElroy said.

One of the first measures that will be taken if the proposition is passed is an immediate implementation of tuition, possibly $1,200 yearly, according to McElroy.

This tuition would account for about half of the funds needed to offset the losses from Jarvis II, and if the initiative passes "under present economic conditions, I don't think there would be any choice" but to implement it, McElroy commented.

McElroy expects enrollment to decline by about 10 percent if tuition is imposed. The tuition, which would be in addition to current student fees, would begin fall quarter, according to McElroy.

Tuition may also be implemented at UCSD's medical school, up to $5,000 annually, McElroy said. "That would get you almost $70 million right there," he commented.

(During his visit to UCSD last week, Saxon said he supports a dramatic rise in medical school tuition, but expressed skepticism that it would come to pass.)

McElroy also suggested other, non-academic areas in which cuts could occur:

— Reduce the Instruction and Research budget by five percent, a savings of "close to $20 million."

— Reduce or eliminate buildings and grounds upkeep for a possible savings of $10 million.

— Cut the budget of agricultural extension in half for another $10 million savings.

In addition, McElroy suggested that pay increases would be eliminated for university employees, and that temporary faculty positions might not be refilled. There are currently 50 "temporaries" employed at UCSD who, if not rehired, "would probably be more than enough to take care of any faculty cut we might have to go through," he said.

McElroy also said Jarvis II would mean, "We'd stop watering the grounds, we would not mow the grass, we wouldn't empty wastebaskets but maybe once a month, we'd probably have to close down the university on Saturdays and Sundays...things like that — real drastic."

Other areas which might encounter cuts as a result of Jarvis II include the

Flaw Exposed In Vision 'Correction by Pilots May Be Dangerous, UCSD Says

From the Associated Press

A controversial procedure that temporarily improves vision, allowing airline pilots to pass required eye exams, has serious flaws and is potentially dangerous, a UCSD study shows.

In a 48-page report that took 40 months of study, Associate Professor of Ophthalmology Dr. Perry S. Binder contends results of the treatment are unpredictable and uncontrollable.

But the Federal Aviation Administration says it is powerless to stop the practice — known as orthokeratology — which was developed in San Diego more than 20 years ago.

Pioneers of the procedure, Dr. Charles H. May of San Diego and Dr. Stuart C. Grant of Beverly Hills, believed eyesight could be improved by gradually flattening the curve of the cornea with a series of hard contact lenses.

In theory, the patient progresses to the point where he or she is able to wear a retainer lens without prescription for part of each day and then, finally, no lenses at all.

Binder, also chief of ophthalmology at the San Diego Veterans Administration Hospital, was commissioned to do the study by May and Grant.

Using 20 patients selected by the two, Binder found that even when the vision improves, the patient still cannot see as well as with glasses or contacts.

He said the cornea, the transparent curved exterior part of the eye that helps to focus lights, tends to return to its original shape once the corrective lens is removed.

May has said airline pilots make good patients because they are motivated enough to undergo the expensive, two-year treatment. It costs about $2,000.

The FAA permits airline pilots to have corrected — either with spectacles or contacts — 20-20 vision.

However, an FAA flight surgeon told the San Diego Union there are so many more applicants for airline pilot jobs that the major airlines give high priority to uncorrected eyes.

Brown Gets Cut of Tidelands Money From Education Fund

Second $150 Million Goes to State Energy Plan

By Carolyn Friday
Sacramento Correspondent

After a month of haggling, Governor Brown's office and the three segments of public higher education have finally agreed on a plan to divvy up an estimated $455 million in profits for 1980-81 from the state-owned tidelands oil revenue.

Senator Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, will introduce legislation today to modify the statute that has awarded all the tidelands profits to COFPHE, the Capitol Outlay Fund for Public Higher Education, and divert some of the monies to finance Brown's cut energy projects.

Last year UC used this fund to begin construction of the Drew-UCLA Medical Center, and to make the Sacramento Medical Center, connected with the UC Davis Medical School, safe in earthquakes. University plans for 1980-81 call for the fund to buy out the San Diego County hospital.

The Rodda bill will distribute the profits in a watershed type structure with three funds receiving the money.

The first $150 million profit after fixed expenses will go into the COFPHE fund, the remainder will go into the newly created energy and resources fund.

As Brown's energy task force chairman Gray Davis agreed to cap off the energy and resources fund at $150 million, the residual profit will go into a general fund to which state agencies would have access for public construction projects.

Lowell Page, special assistant to UC President David Saxon, represented the UC in the negotiations. Saxon says he is pleased with the proposed bill because it will guarantee a $150 million plus the cost of construction index, and will be annually at the disposal of the three segments of public and higher education.

"We're tired of being sitting ducks and fighting off all those bills that want to raise the fund. Of course this bill doesn't remove those risks but does diminish them," he said.

Two years ago the State Lands Commission predicted the tidelands oil would be dried up by 1982, but with the Mideast crisis and congressional decontrol of heavy crude oil the California oil has now skyrocketed $6 a barrel to $25 a barrel.

At the January Regents' meeting in San Francisco Lt. Gov. Mike Curb quoted federal government predictions that the revenue from the tidelands oil properties from Santa Barbara to south of Long Beach would amount to $22 billion in the next decade (state-owned lands that produce private companies). Curb implied that tidelands revenues could be very useful in offsetting the effect of Jarvis II (he came out for Jarvis II.)

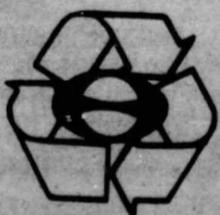

Senator Rodda, who refused to author the bill until it represented a consensus between the government and higher education, does not feel the bill will run into any trouble, according to Senate Finance Committee Consultant Greg Geeting.

If Jarvis II passes, however, Page says that all bets for the Rodda bill are off, although he doubts Rodda will permit a disclaimer that would automatically invalidate the legislation should the taxcutting initiative pass since it does not involve a new program.

Draft Means Freedom's End

By Bill Youngdahl
The world is bracing for shock. Legislation is being prepared to mandate draft registration in the United States. This action, requested by President Carter, is a severe threat to young Americans. Are we approaching another Vietnam era? That question is paramount in young minds.

Bill Youngdahl is a Warren College undergraduate.

The current political clash with Russia, if agitated, will lead to the rapid deployment of US troops. This action would be followed by a draft to supply raw humanity for the battlefield. In short, if the Persian Gulf area is attacked, many of us will find ourselves subjected to indoctrination into the armed forces.

The process of military indoctrination is similar for all the branches of the service. It involves breaking down the necessity of personal identity and replacing it with necessity of group identity. This process takes only two months.

Regimentation is the very basis of basic training. One is immediately assigned to a company of about 180 members. The company is given a homogeneous appearance through physical alterations, haircuts and uniform clothing. Thus, personal identity is clouded, and group identity is reinforced by singularity of members' appearances.

The day of training begins at 4:30 am. From the morning shave to the evening cleanup of the barracks, one is doing something for the group. If a recruit misses a spot shaving or leaves a piece of lint on the floor, it is interpreted as a reflection of group performance. Thus, personal desires are nullified by the requirement of performing at a standard level.

Rapid assimilation of group identity through appearance and expectations leaves an individual extremely vulnerable to brainwashing. He realizes that his old sense of values and identity are of little aid to him; they are of no use to the company. The well-being of an individual depends on the performance of the company.

The group performance depends on how well each member assimilates the attributes mandated by the organization of which the group is a part. Therefore, to assimilate, accepting brainwashing appears to be the rational thing to do. Once this thought pattern has emerged, the recruits are saturated with military ideals, including respect for rank, and other information pertinent to their branch of service. A collection of individuals is transformed into a military unit.

Transforming the will of an individual to meet the needs of the military is a process we may be exposed to as a result of a dispute between the United States and Russia. How much freedom is one willing to sacrifice on behalf of an ambiguously defined political crisis?

Third Had Wrong Kind of Spirit

Editor:
I am a Muir College house advisor and I'm writing to you about Spirit Night and its shocking outcome. Don't get me wrong: I'm not saying that my college should have won, but I am saying that Third College should not have won. In the first place, the UCSD Triton colors are light blue and gold. Revelle, Warren and Muir were all wearing these colors, while Third was wearing red. I'd like to know what their wearing red has to do with Triton spirit. Looking back at the game, I also remember that Revelle, Warren and Muir were all rooting for the UCSD basketball team, whereas Third was rooting primarily for itself. I will admit that they were the loudest of the four colleges, but unfortunately they were also the loudest when our competitors, Whittier, scored points. Again I ask, is this true Triton spirit when one of our own colleges yells just as loudly when the opposing team scores? Also, when UCSD had the ball and was shooting for a basket, it was Third College that was making obnoxious, irritating drum noises, just as one of our players was about to shoot. If you were to ask any of the UCSD players or coaches what they thought of this display of "spirit," I am sure that they would tell you, to put it quite mildly, that the noise was not a plus for our team.

Another thing I would like to discuss is the throwing of various objects from the crowd on to the court and the players. I'm not saying that Third College was fully responsible for these acts, because I saw small items come from all four colleges (there is one in every crowd), but I did definitely see the toilet paper rolls come from the Third College stands.

Referring back to the official judging rules given to all four colleges by the athletic department, it is apparent that Third violated most of these rules. (No throwing of objects, organization and control of the group, etc.) Yet it was Third College that won!

It seems to me that Third College did have a tremendous

No Blood For A Last Name

By Ted Burke

"The hand is on the table..." Sharon's voice was a smoke tinged whisper, husky from filter-tipped Camels. She coughed and it sounded like a bark. "Yes, she went on, rubbing her temples as though to improve reception. "The hand is on the table and it beckons to a ghost trapped in the room by the guilt of someone dead for years..."

Ted Burke is arts editor of The Daily Guardian.

Darrin fidgeted on the couch and watched the lamp hanging from the ceiling begin to swing and spin on its chain in wobbly half-circles. Shadows resembling nothing in particular spun off the living room walls, causing a surge of vertigo to launch in his stomach.

"Could I have a glass of water?" she asked, clearing her throat. "These long distance calls really fray the cords." Glad to have a break from this routine — most nights at six Sharon sat in the center of the living room in a lotus position she learned from a Life magazine photo (a nude man painfully cross-legged under a Ram Dass portrait) and would rub her temples until she made sounds straight from Twilight Zone re-runs — Darrin sprang from the couch like a man trying to outrun a bullet and made his way into the kitchen. Sharon folded her hands, closed her eyes (suddenly, the lights in the room dimmed) and listened. Ice being cracked and then clinking in the bottom of a glass, the whiney high note squeal of tap-water. "... The hand is on the table and it beckons to a ghost trapped in the room by the guilt of someone dead for years and it has nothing to do with us..."

"Whadja say?" Sharon, startled, opened her eyes and snapped her head around until it hurt. It was Darrin holding a sweaty glass of water with ice chunks floating around in it. "Whadja say?" he asked again. "Nothing," she said, massaging her neck. "I think I'm on a partyline." Taking the glass, she put it to her lips and took the liquid down in noisy gulps.

"Fuck it, then." He turned away from her and snapped on the TV. Walter Cronkite was reading the news. On the desk was a sign reading THIS IS IT. "The federal government, exercising little known laws enacted by Congress when some commie simpleton slipped something into the DC water supply in 1962, has declared that all laws currently on the books, both state and federal, are null and void. President Carter has informed the press that from now on police will be called out to quell any future outbreaks of law and order." A hand wearing a Medic Alert bracelet came from off the screen and handed Cronkite a cigarette. Cronkite poked it in his lips and reached under the table and produced a fedora. There was a card stuck in the brim reading PRESS. Cronkite loosened his tie.

"Now it's time for one reporter's opinion," he said, cigarette still in his mouth, smoke gushing like dry ice fumes. "... The hand is on the table and it beckons to a ghost trapped in the room by the guilt of someone dead for years and it has nothing to do with us because we were caught up in our own petty miseries, sinking deeper as it were into a reassuring funk fit for a king, to jump on the bandwagon before the coming of track housing..." Cronkite stopped reading. His eyes were as blank as a new blackboard. The cigarette dropped from his lips. A man in rolled up shirt-sleeves came into view and put a pair of headphones to Cronkite's ears. His jaw dropped suddenly as he closed his eyes, squeezing out two perfectly globular tears.

Sharon, rocking back and forth on the rug with her legs still crossed, laughed. "Everyone's on the same wave length." Darrin snapped off the set, snoring contemptuously as Cronkite became a white dot in the middle of a field of swamp-sludge green.

"Chain letters suck," he said. "That's it. I'm gonna quit drinking. Where the hell is my baseball bat?" "Darrin." She sounded out of breath. "Shit, what do you want?" "Can I have a cigarette?" "You don't smoke —" "I didn't say I wanted to smoke it..." "I get it. You wanna be like Barretta and let that thing hang from your lip. No chance."

Sharon piped in. "Who are you talking to?" "You know, the spook." Darrin sounded annoyed. "You know, that old whisp of exhaust trapped in the room by whatever you were talking about."

Just then a lamp levetated off a table and flew across the room, striking him in the back of the head. The lamp shattered into three big shards of porcelain. Darrin crumbled to the woodplanks. Hazy-eyed, he peered across the room — everything was sideways — and noticed his baseball bat. He crawled over on all fours and grabbed it, and then used it to lift himself.

"This is it," he grumbled, swinging the bat. "I'm ready for anything. Gonna get myself a maid and take her on a sea-cruise."

Outside on the sidewalk the cement was wet with rain and the cops were complaining about chewing gum that gets stuck to the bottom of your shoes. One of them looked across the street and saw the front door of one of the homes open. Darrin came charging out screaming, "YAAAAARRRRGGGHHH!!!" HHHH!!!, with the baseball bat, headed for the cops. There grants and contracts/administration and the purchasing department, McElroy said.

McElroy: Jarvis Won't Cut Classes

Only after cuts in these areas have been made would academic cuts be considered, McElroy said.

"We may have to cut an FTE (Full Time Employee) here and there from various departments, but that decision hasn't been made yet," he said.

Academic programs without department status "we would try to protect the same way we do the departments," McElroy emphasized.

"Communications, for example — that's a popular program and I think we'd try to protect it." Such programs, he added, would be safe because their faculty are hired through departments.

But until Saxon can respond to Governor Brown's contingency budget, to be presented March 15, McElroy said he cannot make plans for cutbacks.

UCSD and the other UC campuses could be spared part of the impacts of Jarvis II if a bill proposed by state legislator William Campbell (R-Los Angeles) is passed, McElroy noted.

The bill clarifies Jarvis II language by applying the initiative to fiscal year 1981, which begins in June. The tax initiative currently does not specify whether tax cuts are to be made beginning in June or are to be retroactive to January, 1980.

If the bill, which Jarvis backs, is passed, the state of California will cut its budget by $3.5 billion instead of $5 billion, reducing the impact upon the UC system, McElroy said.

Despite the overwhelming approval of Proposition 13, McElroy believes that "if we work hard enough at it, we might be able to defeat" Jarvis II.

"We already have a credibility gap on (Prop.) 13," because warnings that the first initiative would have severe impacts on the UC system were overstated, McElroy said.

"The problem is, we haven't had the effects of Jarvis I yet because of the (state budget's) surplus," McElroy said. "That will be coming at the end of next year — the real impact."

In the meantime, McElroy said he will wait for Saxon's contingency budget plans.

"Once I get the facts, then we'll get together with students, the faculty and the staff," to form a committee to actively oppose the initiative, he said.

"I'll meet with the Board of Overseers, the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis and Rotarians, and any other organizations we can get our hands on," McElroy added.

McElroy said he will probably not begin his campaign until April.

Telling Facts of Life to Parents

A million teenagers a year get pregnant, one in every 10 girls between 13 and 18. And half of America's adolescents are sexually active.

Those are accepted statistics, says Cynthia D. Martin, a La Jolla psychologist who has researched teenage sexuality and pregnancy, and who for a number of years has counseled both adolescents and adults.

After all, Martin says, sex is being sold, pushed and praised everywhere the young person turns today. The result seems to be increasing numbers of adolescent pregnancies and abortions, an epidemic of VD, and large numbers of sexually confused young people.

Add to that confused parents who are uncertain how to cope with the new sexual attitudes among the young, Martin says. She adds that parents can no longer afford to turn their heads away and say, in effect, "my child is obviously not having sex with anyone."

Martin is presenting a weekend program for the public Friday evening, Feb. 22 and all-day Saturday, Feb. 23 titled "The Sexually Active Adolescent." Sponsored by UCSD Extension, the program is open to parents and helping professionals who wish to help adolescents develop healthy and responsible sexual attitudes and behaviors.

The class is scheduled for 7-10 pm Feb. 22 and from 9am-5pm Feb 23 in Room 1402 of the Humanities Library Building on UCSD's Reville Campus. Enrollment and fee information is available by calling UCSD Extension at x3400.

Technique For Shaping Pilots' Corneas Risky

Pilot-patients, utilizing the orthokeratology technique, use a retainer lens the night before an eye exam and by the time their eyes are tested, their vision may reach the 20-20 level so they can get a pilot's certificate unblemished by corrective lenses.

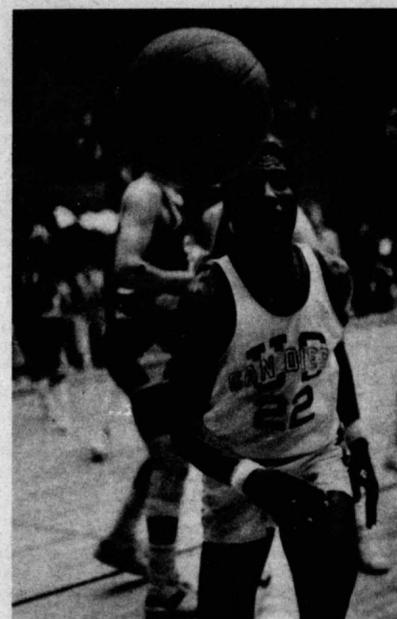

Then they go back to wearing retainer lenses. "The airline pilot with uncorrected vision reported to be 20-20 may not be 20-20 when his lens falls out as he is landing your plane," Binder told the Union.

Dr. John Jordan, deputy chief of the FAA's office of aviation medicine, said his office does not encourage orthokeratology "for any reason, to pass an exam or whatever."

A spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association in Washington said he has heard no reports of use of the technique by airline pilots.

"But if a pilot's vision is so bad he is trying to put something over on the FAA, it would be a total degradation of safety, and we would be against it," the spokesman said.

Tritons Slam Dunk a Groundhog Day Win

Forward Gary Haynes, who has the highest scoring average on the UCSD team, lays off a pass during Saturday's win over Pomona-Pitzer. Right, Triton guard Dana Bedard puts up a lay up for two more points.

By Barbara Haas
Senior Staff Writer

The Triton varsity cagers cruised to an easy home win over Pomona-Pitzer College Saturday night, repeating their early season win over the Sagehens by 14 points in the La Jolla Classic.

Gary Haynes and Dana Bedard both scored 18 points to help lead the team to a Groundhog's Day 84-72 victory. Six more weeks of winter may be in store for the rest of the nation, but if the Tritons continue winning and make it to the playoffs, San Diego may just see six more weeks of Triton Basketball.

UCSD broke the game open from the starting tip-off. They gained possession of the ball and canned the first score of the one-sided contest. Pomona quickly went down by five, and never approached the dominant Tritons until late in the first half.

UCSD was only up by two with four minutes remaining, but a tight defense shut down the threat, allowing only three Sagehen points in the rest of the period.

An offensive spark gave UCSD 10 more points to lead at the half 38-29.

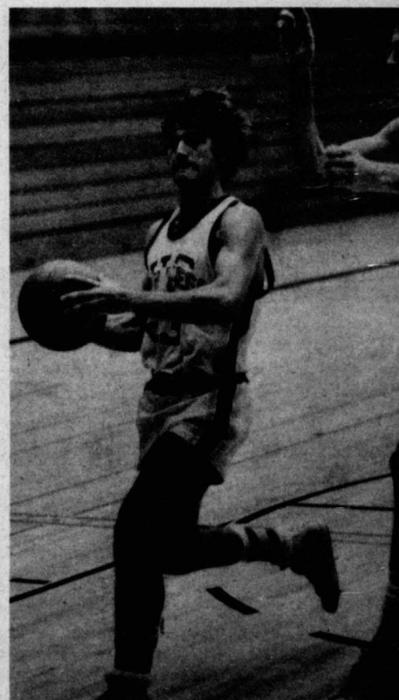

The second half went even better for the Tritons. Three starters from Pomona fouled out early and the rest of the team never quite got the hang of playing together. The nervous second stringers pitched in to bring the turnover total to 25, nine more than UCSD.

Coach Ron Carter was more than satisfied at the final score. Toward the end of the game he put in some lesser used players, displaying the faith he had in the outcome.

"They played fine basketball tonight, I am real happy with them," Carter said.

Stan Hopper led rebounders with seven and contributed 13 points. Sherman Johnson also canned 13 points, including another spectacular slam dunk.

Ruggers Mug Aztecs

The men's rugby team used its superior speed Saturday to pick up its first win in three years over San Diego State. Captain Jeff Jones led the way for the Tritons in the 23-12 win, scoring once on a 65-yard try, kicking a field goal and assisting on another try. Jones' field goal put UCSD up 7-4 at the end of the first half. At the beginning of the second half, the Aztecs scored a try to take their only lead of the match, 8-7. After that, though, it was all UCSD, as the Tritons ran their way to the win.

Swim Times Impressive

Individuals Make Nat'ls, But Team Doesn't Shine

By Jon Goetz
Sports Editor

When you ask the men's swim coach how many of his swimmers have qualified for the national championships this year, it takes him a while to answer.

After last weekend the number stands at 10, already three more than went in 1979. Though the team finished fifth of six schools at the Irvine relays Friday and Saturday, things are looking good for the program.

UCSD ended up behind Cal State Northridge, Pepperdine, UC Irvine and San Diego State, all schools competing within the NCAA's highest echelon of swimming. Yet the Tritons, classified in the lowest levels of the sport, displaced some of the top relays and individual athletes, and gained some credence as a feisty, small school.

"It's not very challenging to be the best of the worst," said Coach Bill Morgan after the meet. "It's better to be the worst of the best."

Competing against the best added incentives to swim well. Chris Dixon, in only his second meet for UCSD since transferring from San Diego State, broke school records in two events. He led six of his teammates in the 100 fly, finishing in 50.47.

The top seven UCSD swimmers turned in a quicker time than the fastest UCSD time last year.

Dixon and Mark Allen both surpassed Allen's old 400 medley record, but Dixon now has possession of it with his 4:26.1 clocking, a second-and-a-half ahead of Allen.

Joe Hernandez turned in a typically spectacular day, finishing fourth in both the 50 and 100 free, the highest placings for UCSD. His 22.0 in the 50 also broke his old school record by .2 seconds. He swam an even faster, yet unofficial, time in the last leg of the 200 medley relay, with a 21.8 split time.

It was a weekend for setting national qualifying times, with a fast pool and a fast field of athletes. Bob Conlin made the standard in the 100 backstroke, and both Lance Halsted and Roger Kirton qualified for the 1650 free. Halsted finished in 17:06.5, and Kirton clocked in at 17:18.4 in his first time swimming the event.

Kevin Lingel, though he barely missed national qualifying times in a couple of events, "had about as good a meet as anybody," according to Morgan.

Today in Sports

The Triton women's swim team faces USD in the first of five matches against them this month. The meet begins at 4 pm at USD.

SD Buds Upset by UCSD's Ultimate Team

By Scott Allison
Staff Writer

Promoting ultimate frisbee here has been somewhat of an uphill struggle for Scott Wilson, captain of UCSD's team.

But Saturday at Revelle Field his squad accomplished what many observers thought unlikely: they defeated the much more experienced San Diego Buds by a score of 17-15.

The victory was the Triton's first of 1980. Last quarter the Buds embarrassed UCSD with a fairly one-sided win over the Tritons. But this time many of the Triton ultimate frisbee newcomers seemed more talented and confident.

Basketball JV Wins In Overtime

John Wohlmut and Dave Tollner led the JV basketball team to a one point overtime win over Point Loma Saturday night, 76-75.

Wohlmut was leading scorer with 25, almost one third of the Triton total. Tollner contributed 21 rebounds and 19 points to help put UCSD over the competitive Crusader threat.

The contest was tight throughout the game. At halftime the teams were tied at 33, and at the end of regulation play they stalemated again at 70.

"Many of our guys have been playing ultimate only 14 weeks, and yet they played to the level of the Buds, some of whom have played more than five years," said Wilson.

Ultimate Frisbee is still in its infancy as a sport. Invented in New Jersey in 1968, its popularity has since spread enormously. Now more than 300 collegiate teams exist in the nation.

The game basically combines the elements of several other sports: Patterns are run as in football, pivot foots are used as in basketball and the ebb and flow of playmaking is similar to that found in hockey or soccer.

Despite these features, one could argue that Ultimate Frisbee's best quality lies in the use of a disc instead of the conventional ball found in most other sports. The frisbee's unpredictability and limitless use adds a different dimension to the game.

Against the San Diego Buds, the Tritons appeared to be at a disadvantage in experience, size and ability.

"I guess we just out-smarted them," joked Wilson.

Actually, it appeared UCSD won because of better coaching and preparedness. "We went in with a definite game plan in mind and we followed it," Wilson said. "Everybody played like a team, whereas they (The Buds) played like a bunch of individuals." The Buds were ahead of the Tritons at halftime, 10-7. UCSD then reeled off four straight points to take the lead at the opening of the second half.

The lead changed hands several times during this half. With only three minutes left, Brian Walsh made a diving, shoe-string catch to give UCSD the lead for good, 15-14.

I got pregnant and I didn't want to be. At Birth Control Institute, I found the help and understanding I needed from an experienced counselor. After my pregnancy test, we explored the alternatives. I decided on an abortion. The doctor was a professional who cared about me. The costs were reasonable. It was good to know I had lots of choices.

Carter Has Decided On Draft

WASHINGTON — President Carter said yesterday he has made up his mind on whether to ask Congress for the authority to require women to join men in registering for the military draft. But he declined to say what he had decided.

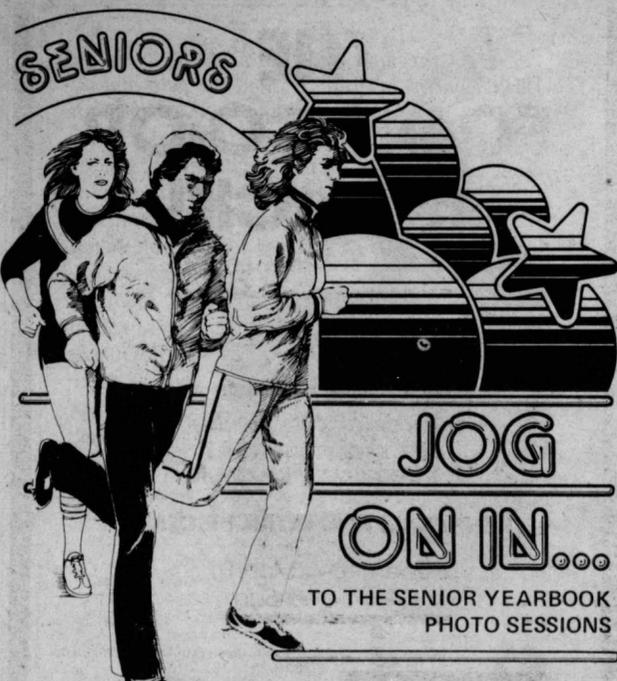

Carter, as he returned to the White House from a weekend at the Camp David presidential retreat in Maryland, was asked whether he had reached a decision on the controversial subject of registering women.

"Yes, I've decided," he replied, declining to divulge his decision.

A White House press officer, Jim Purks, was unable to provide details. Aides had said previously that a decision would be announced by the end of this week.

The president announced the resumption of draft registration in his State of the Union address last month, saying it was needed to respond to an increasing threat from the Soviet Union. But he did not say whether he would seek to have women included in the call.

Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic policy adviser, had said on Saturday that the staff would send a recommendation to the president during the weekend.

Good Humored Collages Recall Bill Cosby

An exhibit of paintings and collages by artist Raymond Saunders will be on display in the Mandeville Art Gallery from Feb. 15 to March 21.

Gallery hours are noon to 5pm Sunday through Friday and 7-9pm Wednesday. A reception for the artist will be held from 5-8pm Friday, Feb. 15, in the gallery. The public is welcome to attend.

Saunders was born in 1934 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

He attended the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of Pennsylvania and received his bachelor's degree from the Carnegie Institute of Technology. He earned his master of fine arts degree at the California College of Arts and Crafts and currently lives and works in Oakland, California.

Los Angeles Times art critic William Wilson compared Saunders' works to a Bill

Cosby monologue, in that the works of both men are autobiographical and fundamentally good-humored. Saunders' themes include childhood, nostalgia, modern society and black culture, presented in collages which are for the most part playful and spontaneous.

The collages combine Saunders' deft and often delicate drawings with bold brushstrokes of color and objects which are taped and glued to the canvas. Pages torn from children's books such as "Little Black Sambo" and the primary school Dick and Jane series, playing cards, crayons and buttons are some of the materials used by Saunders in his jazzy pieces.

Lynn G. Fayman Photography, a retrospective of more than 100 photographs by the San Diego artist, at the La Jolla Museum continues through February 24.

The exhibition surveys 20 years of the artist's work in color prints of natural and abstract subjects and in black and white close-up studies of natural objects and textures.

The museum is located at 700 Prospect Street. Admission is free.

FBI Probe Nails 8 Congressmen

WASHINGTON — Eight members of Congress have been implicated in an FBI investigation of political corruption that was carefully monitored at the highest levels of the Justice Department to avert instances of entrapment, sources said yesterday.

The sources said that FBI director William Webster and top Justice Department lawyers closely policed the probe and that the FBI was never the first to suggest bribes to public figures.

"Informants and lawyers who came to them brought in officials seeking bribes," he said. Code-named Operation Abscam, the investigation used undercover FBI men posing as representatives of an Arab sheik offering bribes to win a casino gambling license and other favors.

Third Had Wrong Spirit amount of spirit for themselves, but that isn't what Spirit Night is about. The purpose of Spirit Night is for the colleges to show their spirit for the UCSD basketball team.

I wouldn't be the least bit surprised if, when you asked most of the Third College cheerers about the game, that they would reply that they hadn't been paying much attention. In fact, some might not even be aware of who won.

Maybe I am incorrect in my last assumption, but I do know that most of my own college was at least aware of the fact that there was a basketball game going on. Our spirit was directed towards the game, and not just against the other colleges in an attempt to make the most noise.

No Blood for a Last Name

was a loud report that echoed up and down the street and which got fainter with each re-run as Darrin slowly clutched his chest and moved toward the sidewalk. A cop walked over the dying Darrin and looked down at him.

"Why'd ya do it, kid?" he asked. It was only seconds before Darrin would be fit for a marble mattress, but he got it in.

"No blood for a last name," he muttered, then croaking.

The cop kicked him. Darrin yelled in pain and stood up.

"What the fuck are you doing, kicking me like that?"

"You got it wrong," said the cop. "It's supposed to be 'the hand is on the table and it beckons to a ghost...'" and so on.

You know."

"Oh," said Darrin, turning back to the house. "Sorry... I forgot..."

"Don't worry about it," replied the cop. "You'll get it right next time." Darrin waved at him and walked back into his living room, where Sharon was watching Tom Snyder's celebrity clambake.
