

"I/O" by Roger Reynolds to be played in jazz concert

January 7, 1971

"I/O" a concert featuring the music of Roger Reynolds, will be presented at the University of California, San Diego Wednesday, January 20 at 8:30 p.m. The concert, scheduled as part of the Faculty Composer Series, will be held in the Recital Hall, Building 409, Matthews Campus. Admission is free.

The evening's fare will consist of two major works- "I/O" by Reynolds, and a jazz-rock improvisation.

Roger Reynolds is an avid composer, lecturer, and researcher in experimental music. He is currently studying time perception in aesthetic situations, based on data derived from literature in the fields of psychology, physiology, physics, acoustics, and music. His recent opera, "The Emperor of Ice Cream," is scheduled to tour the state of California next year.

To reach the Recital Hall, take Interstate 5 to La Jolla Village Drive, turning west; then turn right on Gilman Drive and follow this street to its end at Myers Drive. Turn left on Myers, then right on Russell Avenue. The Recital Hall is at the corner of Russell and Lyman Drive.

(January 7, 1971)