Glasnost and protest come to UCSD

By JAMES GILMORE Staff Writer

Vladimir Pozner, a top-ranking Soviet journalist, offered his perspective on the nature of U.S.-Soviet relations to a crowd of over 1,000 people in Peterson hall last Wednesday. The attentive crowd, half of them watching via video in an adjacent room, listened to the articulate and witty Pozner talk for over an hour in flawless, idiomatic Pozner addressed a number of what he considers to be popular misconceptions of Soviets in western media and offered insights into Soviet culture.

Stereotyping

The popular image of Soviets that most people hold in the United States, and one that has been nurtured for over 40 years by the western media, is, according to Pozner, "the kind of mythology that has led to the fear, to the hatred... and there is hatred [of Soviet citizens]. And I frankly believe that in this audience there are people who have come today not to listen, and don't want to hear me, who have come to say what they want to say then leave. And I feel sorry for that, because if we cannot communicate we're dead."

The result of this stereotyping, along with the shorthanded education of American students in the history of U.S.-Soviet relations has led, Pozner claimed, to a plague of ignorance among Americans - an ignorance which has allowed the myths about Soviets to fill the void. "The result of this is striking," Pozner said. Among other examples, he cited a poll published in the November 1985 issue of the New York Times Magazine which showed that 40 percent of all Americans do not know on whose side the Soviet Union fought in World War II. Of that 40 percent, 28 percent believe that the Soviet Union fought on the Nazi side against the United States. "I believe [this] is because | Americans | have not been reminded of the fact that we were allies; that we did fight together against the Nazis,' Pozner said.

Pozner then elaborated on the realities which characterize rela-Please see POZNER, page 7

"Earthquake" hits Muir; Former contra leader everyone is safe

By PETER MESSROBIAN

Muir college residents and staff got a taste last week of what might happen if the "big one" ever hits Southern California.

Over 1,000 students and staff members took part in a complex earthquake simulation Thursday morning, described by assistant resident dean Blue Robbins as a "self-sufficiency drill."

"We wanted to emphasize the personal safety of the residents... what to do, where to go," Robbins said. He added that "the resident hall staff is a little more independent now."

The San Diego fire and police departments, Hartson ambulance units, and lifeflight helicopters all participated in the drill. The buildings involved Tenaya, Tioga, and the Muir apartments.

tells his story

By MAUREEN SPURR

Edgar Chamorro received a warm welcome last Thursday from UCSD students as he arrived to speak against aid to the contras. A former top official of the Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries, Chamorro gave the inside story of working for the contras.

An opponent of U.S. aid to the contras, Chamorro emphasized and elaborated upon his reasons for leaving the contras, including the fact that they are controlled by the CIA.

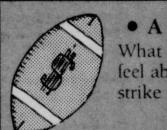

"Just go out and kill... Kill them..." Chamorro quoted one of the young contras whom he had asked what he was fighting for and what his job was. An experienced speaker, Chamorro told emotional inside stories of his tenure with the contras. He believes these contra members are uninformed as to why they are killing, are virtually children, and are partially brainwashed. Being a native Nicaraguan, Chamorro is much closer to the situation than the typical American, and he feels that Americans may not realize what is truly happening in Nicaragua.

Chamorro discussed a few of the run

Attempted assault on student near on-campus apartment

On Oct. 8 in the eucalyptus grove behind Third Lecture Hall and Central Library, a female student, on returning to her on-campus apartment, was grabbed around the neck from behind. She responded by stabbing the assailant in the thigh with a pencil. The suspect let her go and she ran to her apartment.

Having not seen the assailant, the victim was able to offer only a tentative des cription — a white male of large build, approximately 6'6", and about 250 pounds. Anyone having information concerning this incident is encouraged to contact the UCSD police at 534-4357.

'Women's Studies and Higher Education Today' conference

Several prominent women academic leaders will meet at Third College Lecture Hall 107, Oct. 16 and 17, for a free public conference discussing issues in women's studies. Nan Keohane, the president of Wellesley College, will give the keynote address, "The Role of Women's Studies in Higher Education Today," on Friday, Oct. 16 at 8 pm. Keohane is a leading advocate for the formation of women's studies programs at universities in the United States. In 1985, she chaired the American Council on Education's Commission on the Status of Women in Higher Education.

Beginning at 10 am, there will be 4 speakers on Saturday, Oct. 17, in Third College Lecture Hall 104. Dr. Evelyn Fox-Keller, a Fellow of the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton, will open with "Feminist Perspectives on the Natural Sciences." At 11 am, Dr. Virginia Olsen of the School of Nursing at UCSF. will address the subject of "Women: Health and Healing Issues." After the lunch break, Dr. Barbara Christian of the Afro-American Studies program at UC Berkeley will speak at 1 pm on, "Does Celie Know Something You Should Know?: Afro-American Women's Literature and the Pursuit of Knowledge." The final topic, "Community and Resistance Women's Political Cultures in Historical Perspective," will be addressed at 2 pm by Dr. Temma Kaplan of Columbia

The aim of this conference is to direct the attention of faculty and administration to the importance of women's studies in undergraduate education. The conference represents an effort by several UCSD women faculty members to begin a full-fledged women's studies major on

UCSD Med School signs pact with Japanese university

The Schools of Medicine of the University of California, San Diego and the Yokohama City University have developed an agreement of cooperation to promote academic exchange between the two institutions. According to UCSD Chancellor Richard Atkinson, "The signing of this agreement is intended to further develop the friendship between our two institutions and to strengthen their academic cooperation." Wayne Akeson, dean of the UCSD School of Medicine, remarked, "San Diego and Yokohama have been sister cities for 30 years and we are delighted to enter into this relationship with our colleagues in academic medicine during this special anniversary year."

Community Mediation of San Diego hosts open house

San Diego's Community Mediation Program will be hosting an Open House on Friday, Oct. 16 from 4-6 pm, at its new office, 315 Laurel Street. Community Mediation, which begun as a pilot project of the University of San Diego Law Center, offers as a public service a confidential, voluntary process in which disputing parties meet with trained volunteer mediators who assist them in reaching their own agreements. The program is an alternative to the courts and helps to resolve disputes between neighbors, friends, family members, youth, businesses, landlords and tenants, merchants and consumers, and employer and employees.

Symposium on the removal of life-sustaining care to be held

"Long-Term Care: When is Enough Enough?," a free public symposium dealing with the withdrawal of life sustaining care, will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 14 at 7 pm in the Garren Auditorium (Basic Science Building) at UCSD Medical

The program will begin with the screening of the film, "No Heroic Measures," which dramatizes a family's efforts to terminate long-term care for an elderly person. The panelists include, Richard Scott, who holds degrees in law and medicine (the attorney for Elizabeth Bouvia and Anna Hirth's daughter); California State Assemblywoman Lucy Killea; Larry Schneiderman, M.D., who teaches at UCSD Medical School and is a member of UCSD Medical Center's Bioethics Committee; and Cathy Rouff, who represents the California Association of Health Care Facilities.

After the initial presentation, the panelists will then participate in a discussion regarding the legal, medical, ethical, and emotional issues surrounding the withdrawal of life support. The audience is invited to participate in the discussion by voicing opinions, which will be considered in the development of guidelines on the issue of termination of life sustaining care in San Diego. UC Irvine threatened with 'censorship' lawsuit

MEChA, or Chicano Student Movement of the Southwest, may sue the University of California, Irvine for alleged violations of organization members' First Amendment rights. The proposed lawsuit is in response to Chancellor Jack Peltason's decision to remove 4 large murals that graphically depict the plight of Vietnam veterans and the oppression of women and Chicanos. Stephanie Lopez, a graduate student in comparative literature, contends that the chancellor violated the rights of Chicanos and other minorities on campus by censoring the political content of the murals by dismantling them. She stated, "We don't feel that Chicanos are very welcome here," and also accused the university of "institutional racism.'

The theme and location of the murals, originally part of a student-group art project, were approved in 1980 by a design committee, the Campus Physical and Environmental Committee and former Chancellor Daniel Aldrich. The murals which hung on the first floor of the Social Science Tower, were considered "offensive" and "ugly" by the majority of those housed in the building according to a 1985 survey.

$11.2 million contract signed for Los Alamos facility

Los Alamos National Laboratory, operated by the University of California for the Department of Energy, recently signed an $11.2 million contract with a Colorado firm for the construction of the Ground Test Accelerator (GTA) facility, the next step in the lab's Strategic Defense Initiative effort.

"This facility represents the beginning of what will eventually be a project worth more than $500 million, bringing a fasttrack research and development program together with state-of-the-art hardware design, procurement, testing and technology advancement," manager of GTA Jorg Jansen said.

The GTA will incorporate several major technological breakthroughs into what will be the main thrust of the Los Alamos neutral particle beam program. It will also provide the technology demonstration necessary for a follow-on prototype, a space-based neutral particle beam system. Once the facility is complete, work will begin on the installing and the testing of the components of the neutral particle beam generator.

The neutral particle beam's main Strategic Defense Initiative mission will be to discriminate between real enemy warheads and decoys as they head toward the United States. The beam also could eventually be used as a weapon to kill missile boosters and warheads.

New work-study program implemented this year

By CHRIS HAMSON

A new $150,000 work-study program that began Oct. 1 places UCSD students in corporate jobs related to their major or career goals.

The employer pays the work-study student as a regular employee and the university reimburses the employer 50 percent of the employee's gross wages. Seventy-five thousand dollars in state grant money will fund the one-year pilot program. Fifteen other colleges in California were also awarded grants in the trial program. Student eligibility for the program is determined by Student Financial Services. Those who receive a workstudy as part of their financial package are eligible to participate. Additionally, some students with loans can gain entrance to the program. Career Services refers students to employers with academically-related positions. If selected by the employer, students can work up to 20 hours per week while school is in session and 40 hours per week during breaks. The program ends June 30, 1988, or the point at which the student's award amount is exhausted, whichever comes first. Pay rates are comparable to those paid for similar positions within the corporation.

One student involved in the program is Janine Zimmerman, a Muir senior majoring in biology. Zimmerman works for Immuno Dynamics, Inc. as a peptide cleaver and frequently goes on business trips for the company. "The program is a big advantage." Zimmerman said. "I've been offered a job when I graduate."

The program was secured for UCSD by Associate Director of Financial Services Ann Klein and Assistant Director of Career Services Phyllis Walker.

"Career Services has been trying to get a wide variety of corporations to participate so that students of any major will be able to find a related position," Walker said. Some companies currently searching for qualified students are: E.F. Hutton, which is looking for economics or management science majors; Little Dogs of Bali, which is hoping to find an art major and a computer science major; Enfin Software, which is looking for a math major; Harquest and Associates, which is seeking a student interested in geology; and NCR, which is looking for programmers. Judy Manternach, a Career Services employement development specialist, attracts the companies to the program, searching for a variety of employers close to campus.

After the one-year trial period, the results of the program will undergo study and evaluation. "It is very successful in the state of Washington," Walker said, "The program was started by Gary Hart."

Several restrictions apply to the program. Student employees may not displace workers currently employed by the employer or impair existing contracts for services. Positions must not have been occupied by a regular employee during the preceding 12 months. Employment must not violate applicable collective bargaining agreements or fill vacancies due to a labor dispute. Finally, activities must not be related to a sectarian organizations or to parasan or nonpartisan political activities.

Free speech as a refuge

I think that if the C.I.A.'s right to advertise in the Guardian was a freedom of speech issue, then last week's letters would have exhausted the subject. However, recruitment by a company, public or private, is construction workers take up both they should not have the authority regulated to ensure that the recruiter is obeying the national, state, and local laws. But the real issue here isn't whether or not the U.S.S.R. should be allowed to do what it does, or even whether anyone should believe what Pozner said. By simply refusing to listen to him, we would be ignoring his very plea, which is a valid one: each side needs to get rid of the myths it holds regarding the other side, and open lines for clear, open-minded communication. This isn't saying that we must completely tear down the fence and cross into each others' yards. It is just asking to break the fence down to a level where we can see each other and talk without a barrier getting in the way. If Pozner was right about nothing else, he was right in saying that

Now it's easy for undergraduates to apply themselves.

Sometimes it seems that seniors and grad students get a lot of special treatment. Like getting the American Express* Card pretty much hassle-free. Sure, they've proven themselves. But you have too, or you wouldn't be reading this today. So we're making some changes. Starting now, we're making it easier than ever for you to become a Cardmember through our Undergraduate Automatic Approval Offer.

The requirements are as simple as they get: just be enrolled full time in a four-year college and have some form of income—be it from a job, a grant, or from your folks. You don't even need a credit history. but if you have one, it must be clean.

How's that for hasslefree! Of course, once you have the American Express Card, it gets even better. You can use it to buy everything from sweats to stereos, everywhere from campus to Cameroon. And those are just the basics. As a Cardmember, you'll be entitled to a world of benefits you can rely on.

So look into our new automatic approval offer. Call 1-800-THE-CARD and ask for a student application. Or just pick up an application on campus and study it. You'll find you're bound to pass.

Protestors challenge Vladimir Pozner

By JAMES GILMORE

The excitement was running high Wednesday evening in and around Peterson hall where the top-ranking Soviet journalist Vladimir Pozner delivered a lecture, followed by a question-andanswer session.

Although Pozner appeared at ease and commented that he was impressed by an audience he thought was serious, interested and basically friendly, the numbers of protestors in and around the building sent some tension through the air.

"There was some trouble outside," communications professor Dr. Helene Keyssar said, "the protestors were getting a little wild. They were behaving in a somewhat threatening way and it was not clear what was going to happen by the end of it."

Emotions peaked while Pozner was answering questions and a group of protestors from the Free Afghanistan Alliance exploded in a violent chorus of chants denouncing the Soviet Union. After campus police officers, aided by members of the audience, forced the protestors out of the hall, Pozner responded to a formal challenge offered him by representative of the Free Afghanistan Alliance and the International Medical Core.

The young woman challenged Pozner to help her get into Afghanistan with a representative of the International Medical Core and a live broadcast crew in order to disprove Pozner's denial of Soviet human rights abuses.

Pozner said that although he did not have the authority to arrange such an expedition, he promised to refer her request to the proper authorities.

Following the lecture and question-and-answer session Pozner had planned to walk over to La Casa for his reception. However, on advice from campus police, he was ushered into a waiting police car and delivered by an alternate route.

After the discussion, protestors rallied outside the hall late into the evening, condemning the Soviet Union and denouncing Pozner as a Soviet propagandist.

indeed given by the society in change. which they live, which is why they should fight for the society they need. These rights are such things as free education for all people regardless of how rich or poor their parents are, free medical care for all people, a guaranteed right to a job or all people, a guaranteed roof over your head for all people. We consider these rights to be as important if not more important than, let's say, freedom of speech, for we believe if you don't have them, what use is freedom of speech."

Next, Pozner turned to some of the historical realities of the Soviet Union which often fuel American fears. "It would be far from valid if I were not to say that much of this relationship is also determined by what we have done and by our own transgressions." In reference to the Stalin purges, which sent 20 million people to labor camps, Pozner said, "This is first and foremost a tragedy for our country and for our people. We have suffered from what had happened to this day and we will suffer. When I say that we had a lack of democracy in those years, I'm making an understatement. But I should also say that Russia never had a democratic tradition. We don't come from a culture that had a Magna Carta in the 13th century. Seventy years ago we had a czar ruling the country."

Today, under the leadership of Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the policy of glasnost is attempting to bring about major reform within Soviet society, which Pozner characterized as "nothing short of a re-ing of human rights," Pozner added nothing to do with you, it is our life, people must have certain eco- we need it. Some like it and some nomic and social rights which are don't. People always resist major Pozner also criticized the tendency of the media in his country to focus on the negative aspects of life in the United States, but noted that he sees change. He said he perceives an attempt by the Soviet media to portray Americans in a more balanced and realistic light.

Pozner's point was that there is a reponsibility to be assumed by both sides, and both the Soviet and American media must work to create a more truthful representation of each other's country and "I believe that we live in a very dangerous time," Pozner said, "and I believe that if the media do not change, if they continue to work on the fears, the misconceptions, the stereotypes that exist, we will not be around to discuss that anymore. If we make the effort, if we take the pain, because there is pain involved, then I believe we can really solve problems and look ahead to what I would call a really peaceful world. If we don't, I think we can wealth look ahead to disaster and calamity Sponsored in part by the com-UCSD Extension, Pozner's visit sent a current of excitement through the faculty. "I thought it was very important for the campus and exciting," communication professor Dr. Helene Keyssar said. "His visit was very substantive and more than fulfilled my hopes."

Student ignorance

One point Pozner brought up was the ignorance of the American students he has encountered on his lecture tour. "And not just about the Soviet Union," Pozner said, "but also about history, literature, geography - I am frankly puzzled by this 'tabula rosa', where they know little about American history and literature, let alone international topics. ... I'd like to understand why this ignorance."

Communications professor Susan Davis agrees, "The teaching of history at the lower school and high school level in the U.S., especially through mass mediated history such as TV shows and popular novels, tends to be more mythological than historical. It tends to be about symbols and icons and big themes, not about the complex relationships between forces that made things actually happen.'

Another professor cited the pervasiveness of a myth that America is a conflict-free society and a kind of 'melting pot' rather than one in which there is a lot of disparity in terms of power, resources, and Pozner also remarked that Soviet students would be awe-struck by the high quality of our facilities and munications and political science the physical beauty of our college departments, and organized by campuses. However, according to Dr. Keyssar, "Most Soviet students would have a much greater store of knowledge and just be better read."

"In the last ten years," Keyssar continued, "there have been, I've found, fewer and fewer students who just want to learn everything they can, and many, many more students who are gearing course Wednesday afternoon, Pozner work, as well as literally what they got the opportunity to ask some of do, what they write papers about, his own questions as well as offer what they choose to read toward some answers. EAP/OAP embark on an international quest

By LISA QUINTANA

For many of us, the dream of studying abroad in a foreign country remains exactly that—a dream. Unfortunately, most students do not realize how easy it is to attend school abroad.

UCSD has 2 resources which help students realize this goal: the Opportunities Abroad Program (OAP) and the Education Abroad Program (EAP). Both programs are located in the International Center in the OAP office. According to OAP head advisor Catherine Gamon, UCSD is unique within the UC system for its OAP organization. "At UCSD we are committed to getting people abroad." she said. OAP offers alternatives to students unable to find a suitable travel abroad plan through EAP.

On Friday, Oct. 16, the OAP Office, along with Revelle Language House and the Career Services Center, is sponsoring Quest International 1987. This will be the second year UCSD has held the event. Last year's event was intended only as an experiment but was such a big success that the advisors decided it should be an annual event. From 10 am to 3 pm, representatives from organizations such as the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Semester at Sea, University of Lancaster, and the Peace Corps will be available at the information tables to answer questions. There will also be panel discussions, videotape presentations, and a luncheon. Students will be able to speak with returnees and foreign exchange students. This way students can gain more information about places of interest and can learn exactly how simple it is to visit these exotic locations.

EAP allows UC students to earn UC credit while studying in foreign universities. Currently, there are over 75 different host institutions in over 33 countries. These countries include Japan, Ireland, Denmark, and the USSR. Students wishing to participate in the EAP program must have at least junior standing at the time of departure and have a cumulative 3.0 GPA. In most cases there is a language requirement, but this can often be fulfilled through a 5-10 week intensive language program offered over the summer in certain countries. While the EAP program usually consists of a year abroad, countries like the USSR, Costa Rica, and Mexico offer special short-term

Cathy Gamon, the OAP advisor, directs students to work and study programs in all parts of the world.

EAP advisor who helps student applicants in their pursuits to study abroad. There is also a network of assistance between each UC campus and the EAP main office at UC Santa Barbara.

For students needing a more flexible program, the OAP offers many alternatives. For example, the OAP library offers reference works-"The Academic Year Abroad" being one of the more widely used-whereby students might attain a better concept of their options. Students begin by looking up the country of their choice and then finding an appropriate program for them. What OAP does is assist and advise students in finding a means to travel overseas and to keep in contact with UCSD while they are abroad. Basically, OAP helps the students find a way to go abroad as well as to make the subsequent transition smoother. Specific plans of study which suit certain majors is one study option. For example, an economics or a management science major can enroll in a business program in Tokyo. A student interested in Third World Studies or anthropology can do volunteer work on the Ivory Coast. Gamon said "It's an excellent opportunity to experience other styles of life firsthand and gain a greater perspective on one's own lifestyle." The possibilities for travel and experience through OAP are literally almost limitless.

Many students are reluctant to pursue the hope of travelling abroad because of the expense. However, EAP estimates that the expenses of being schooled in another country are comparable to the expenses of attending UCSD. They estimate that the average UCSD student spends about $7,200 to $8,100 a year total; including tuition, rent, transportation, etc. To spend the year in Ireland, for example, the figure is estimated roughly at $7,500; this includes airfare and the inevitable souvenirs. One should also realize that the EAP the low end. Most students find they can live comfortably below these figures. Because of the OAP's variety of programs, it can be misleading to quote an estimated price. These estimations do take into consideration the state of the American dollar and the cost of living in the spective country. Although students may not know.

financial aid is applicable to EAP and OAP, with the exception of the work/study supplement. Unless one receives special permission, a student is unable to work in a foreign country. OAP can help stuwork agencies, but only on a limited basis. However, for EAP students, there are additional scholarships available—primarily in Pacific Rim countries and for minority students.

Another reason why students don't pursue travel abroad is bedents get work permits or look into cause they don't think school credit will transfer. Through EAP, approved courses automatically receive UCSD credit and are transferred into applicable units. However, these classes must be approved by UCSD, and further approval is needed from a student's major/minor department if the student wishes the classes to satisfy a specific requirement. Advisors try always to make sure that students are aware of their proposed courses' academic value before they commit themselves. The transfer process through OAP is a little different, but, Gamon said, "It's only a technical difference." The credits go onto a transcript from the university attended, and from that transcript they are approved and transferred onto a UCSD transcript. Still, though in some cases classes may not be transferable, they look good on a student's record. More importantly, perhaps, is that the experience is worth it. No matter how one views it, overseas education is of benefit to all

The gallery was created as part of the newly developed Visual Arts Department in 1967. Under the guidance of department chairman and first gallery director David Antin, the gallery has, from its inception, reflected the Visual Arts Department's focus on experimen-

Present director, Gerry McAllister said, "Mandeville Gallery presents exhibitions that cover a wide range of fields, but the emphasis is on experimental works."

In the gallery's brief history, it has shown the work of some of the most influential contemporary artists in the world. An exhibit titled "Japanese Art Today," included Kazuo Kadonaga, Goro Namerikawa, Kazuo Shiraga, and Katsuro Yoshida, four of Japan's most internationally reknowned artists. Niki de Saint Phalle, an artist commissioned to do sculptures all over the world, had her art on display in the Fall of 1985. The piece most familiar to UCSD students, however, is the "Sun God" sculpture. The list of artists who have had their work displayed at the Mandeville Gallery reads like the Who's Who of contemporary art. This list includes Terry Allen, John Buck, Batye Saar, and Faiya Fredman.

Unlike its counterparts at UCB, UCLA, UCSB, the Mandeville Gallery does not have a permanent collection. As McAllister explains, "These [other] galleries collect art and are constantly adding to their permanent collections. The galleries at those schools are much more like museums. Consequently, they require enormous staffs which handle the maintenance of the collection, make arrangements to loan it out, in addition to cataloging it and insuring it. And as one would imagine," she adds, "all this requires. a great deal of money."

Whatever the UCSD gallery lacks in size and money, it makes up for in efficiency and energy. Because Mandeville does not have a permanent collection, it operates on what McAllister calls a "changing exhibition format." Each academic year, she and her staff organize six exhibitions involving painting. sculpture, video, photography, and performance art.

Many of these important new artists go unrecognized on a campus that is primarily known for its science programs and not for its art departments. "They don't even include the gallery when they take future students and the public on tours of the campus," said McAl-

One of the primary objectives of the galley has always been to stimulate interest in the arts. Some of the lack of exposure the museum gets can be attributed to a poor architectural design which put the gallery at one end of the Mandeville Center and the auditorium at the other

McAllister explained, "They should have put the two facilities right next to each other so that when people come to see a performance in the auditorium, they can peruse the art exhibitions before and after the shows!"

The Annex Gallery, which exhibits graduate students' work and occasional work of undergraduates, is even less accessible. Tucked away in the subterranean level of the center, the works are virtually unseen, "unless," McAllister said, "you have a nose like a bloodhound, a keen sense of eyesight,

Met with student comments such as, "a five year old could do the same thing as these so called artists," while the art that is on display in the Mandeville Gallery is no less revolutionary than the work being done in the laboratories in the biology and engineering buildings across the walkway, it is easy to understand McAllister's frustration. BUD LIGHT Athlete of the Month

For Susan Kramer and the UCSD women's soccer team, the 1987 season got off to a rocky start. The Tritons lost the season opener, 3-0, to a strong team from Cal State-Dominguez Hills, before bouncing back for a 2-1 win over Westmont College. Since that time, however, Kramer has led the nation's second-ranked team to ar amazing streak of seven consecutive shutouts and a record of 7-1. The junior weeper has used experience and field leadership to help the team overcome injuries to two key defensive players. She has also taken much of the pressure off of freshmar goalkeeper Julie Freiss, who has allowed just 0.5 goals per game.

"Susan's ability to read game situations and adjust not only her defense but her teammates at mid-field make her a natural on-field coach," says Triton coach Brian McManus. "We rarely substitute for Susan, as she is both physically and mentally fit to last the full game.

Streaks, such as not allowing a goal to one's opponents, cannot last forever. But the Triton's streak of six shutouts has captured the attention of the national pollsters, who rank UCSD second behind defending national champion Rochester. For her contribution to this stellar defensive performance, Susan Kramer has been named Bud Light Athlete of the Month for September.

Other nominations for September were the outstanding efforts of Janet Hughes of Women's Volleyball, David Calder of Men's Water Polo, Mike Bradley of Men' Soccer, and Denise McFayden of Cross Country

During the 14-1 run, the senior setter Lipson put on a clinic, collecting the bulk of her 33 assists on the night and toying mercilessly with the Dominican team as she faked numerous sets and proceeded to hammer speeding kills to the dismay of the Penguins.

During the intermission break contest (fans attempt to serve the ball into a basket on the other side of the net for a prize), Penguin head coach Debbie Price appeared to be studiously preparing charts and consulting game plans in an attempt to terminate the Triton onslaught. Whatever she was doing obviously had little effect, for aside from some shakiness in the early going, the Tritons showed no mercy in the final game and emerged as 15-5 victors.

There was little doubt as to who stole the show for the Tritons. The All-American Lipson not only led both teams in her customary category, assists (33), but also in serve aces (4), and led UCSD in digs with six. Furthermore, she finished with the third highest kill percentage (.556) and only botched one of her kill attempts. Freshman Stacie Sasaki led the teams with a 1.000 kill percentage (she successfully converted both of her kill attempts) while Bigelow finished behind her with a .636 percentage. Bigelow and senior Lori Luhnow, who played middle blocker in place of the injured Janet Hughes, led the teams in kills with eight a piece.

Please see V-BALL, page 19

V-ball wins 3-0

The only member of the Penguin squad to shine was Kerri Desmond, who led both teams in digs with

"It was pretty difficult because Lori had never played middle blocker before," Lipson said. "It's just too bad that they [Dominican] couldn't have been a little tougher.

Carol Lipson (#6) with the block.

UCSD head coach Doug Dannevik's feelings toward the competition his team faced were similar to Lipson's but added, "We mostly worked on tactics that we will need to use more frequently later on in the year. Monday's game will be a much tougher match."

Monday, the Tritons face Cortland College from New York, who is currently ranked 13th in the

All-American middle blocker Janet Hughes has strained ligaments in her left ankle and is not expected back in the lineup until next weekend.
