Students Oppose Prop 9 in Poll

91% of UC Students Against, 84% Believe Tuition Would Result

BY CAROLYN FRIDAY
Sacramento Correspondent

A survey of UC students shows 91 percent of those polled oppose Proposition 9 and 84 percent believe that tuition would result if the tax cutting initiative passes in June.

The survey also revealed that 81 percent of UC students are registered to vote. Secretary of State March Fong Eu announced last week that 66 percent of the voting age population had registered.

A question on last week's AS ballot showed 91 percent of UCSD students voting in the election are against the initiative.

The telephone poll of 142 randomly selected students from the nine UC campuses was conducted by the California Council for Students' Educational Needs, a group of students from UC, the state and community colleges.

It was conducted one month after UC President David Saxon sent a letter to every UC student advising that tuition would probably be imposed if the voters approved Prop. 9. Saxon has been severely criticized for using $30,000 in state monies to print and mail the letters, which many Prop. 9 proponents construed as campaign material.

The result of the CCSE poll seemed to indicate that Saxon's message was effective.

"It had an impact in that it clearly brought home to the students the potential effects the passage of Prop. 9 could have on their lives," said David Shontz, UC student lobby co-director.

Don Swain, UC Vice President of academic affairs, said, "It is encouraging to learn that so many students have informed themselves about the issue, and that so large a percentage oppose the measure. The polls show that students clearly understand that tuition could result from the passage of Prop. 9."

While three percent of the students polled said they were in favor of Prop. 9, only six percent said that they were uncertain how they would vote.

In addition, the large number of students who were able to answer the detailed questions about the arguments being used in the campaign showed that UC students had heard of the issue.

Fifty-nine percent agreed that Prop. 9 would primarily benefit a few very rich taxpayers, and 78 percent thought that the measure would cause cutbacks in needed government services. Fifty-seven percent disagreed with the contention that Prop. 9 would stimulate economic growth in California.

"UC students realize this is not a good way to cut wastes in state government," said Jim Rogers, a CCSEN spokesman.

"The Prop. 9 supporters say it will give us something for nothing. UC realizes it will give us nothing for something, the something being tuition."

Rogers also credits Prop. 9 as being the principle reason for so many students registering to vote. One hundred percent of those polled have registered to vote on the Santa Barbara, Irvine, Santa Cruz and Riverside campuses. Ironically, UC Berkeley and Davis which have the most concerted registration drives, had the fewest registered voters.

According to Jim Cietz, postgraduate researcher in the UC Davis sociology department, the registration figure may be over-inflated, since a series of screening questions were not included to read out faulty answers.

'Write In Tambuzi' Drive Disallowed By Napell

BY ERIC JAYE

AS Elections Commissioner Bruce Napell announced yesterday that he would count no write-in votes in today's AS runoff election.

A campaign had recently been mounted to have Robert Cunningham-Tambuzi written in as a presidential candidate.

Tambuzi could not be reached yesterday, but Jon Bekken of the Progressive Coalition, which has led the campaign, said that Napell had "no choice but to allow the votes."

"It's in the codes; they say that the elections commissioner must provide for write-in votes."

Napell said the codes did state that the commissioner must provide for write-ins, but that they were ambiguous as to whether that meant for both the general and runoff elections.

"The codes say that those two with the most votes in the general election will have a runoff. We've taken that to mean that we should not allow write-ins," he said.

Napell admitted that he had "waffled" on the write-in question at the candidates' meeting, but that he and the elections commission had reached their decision after searching the codes.

Bekken said he plans to make a formal appeal concerning Napell's decision.

Polls for the AS runoff election will be open today from 10 am to 4 pm at locations throughout the campus.

Students will be choosing officers for six positions including president and vice-president.

President's Council And Lobby Meet Administration on Prop 9

The Student Body President's Council and student lobby representatives will meet with UC systemwide administrators today to discuss the possibility of tuition being imposed on UC students if Proposition 9 passes.

SBPC, composed of representatives from each of the nine UC campuses, is advised regularly on changes in the system that might affect students. It formally satisfied a top-level UC commitment to "student consultation."

SBPC has proposed a list of alternatives to imposition of tuition should Proposition 9 pass, including consolidation of academic programs, salary penalties to ineffective teachers, a four-day instruction week, an increase in teaching load and sale of unused UC-held land.

"There is no reason students should have to pay two-thirds of the cost of Proposition 9 cuts, which is what the university wants us to do," UC lobby co-director David Schontz argues.

AS Presidential candidate Linda Sabo will attend the meeting on behalf of UCSD, as she has been doing all year. Sabo says university rumors she hears indicate that UC President David Saxon may be planning on bypassing the Regents and going directly to the state legislature to impose tuition, a possibility "that would cause him to lose his job."

Schontz points out that while the legislature funds the university, the Regents hire and fire, and would probably do the latter if Saxon goes over their heads.

But, he added, the legislature can add "control language" to the UC budget, and has done so in the past.

"That's essentially what Ronald Reagan did with the education fee," he said. "He cut the UC budget $30 million and said students would appreciate their education more if they paid for it. That's how we got the education fee."

And, Schontz noted, the legislature has threatened to reduce UC funding on a proportionate basis to fee increases as a way of keeping fees down in some years.

Recruiting Rights

There is a basic issue of conscience on today's AS election run-off ballot. It is the initiative asking students to go on record opposing military recruiters doing their work on campus.

The issue involved the abuse of military power and the right of conflicting ideas to clash openly.

The ballot question was put forth by San Diego Students for Peace and students on the AS Council who believe that the military has engaged in and will continue to engage in actions repugnant to the student community.

These students are engaged in political action to defeat registration for the selective service system, and see this initiative as one part of that process.

But there are still many ways to fight the military without resorting to infringing on a right we see as more important than this political issue — the right of organizations to approach students on campus freely.

That right extends to the Hare Krishnas, student newspapers, AS candidates, SDSP members and military recruiters equally. It is a right that transcends this year's fight over registration for the draft. Supporting the initiative backs the belief that the nation's armed forces do not have enough moral rectitude to address the students at this university SDSP and the AS would have us believe it can be so easily corrupted.

You may not like having military recruiters on campus. They may be an uncomfortable reminder of our president's plan to begin preparations for impressment. They may be an uncomfortable reminder that several million people our age are shaving their heads and carrying rifles.

But they are a reminder that we have accepted the right to choose and discern for ourselves. We urge students to vote no.

Showing Commando Bodies Offended Moslems Deeply

BY WILLIAM O. BEEMAN
 Pacific News Service

Americans were not alone in the horror they felt at seeing the charred bodies of the US airmen killed in the hostage rescue attempt displayed before television cameras by the "hanging judge," Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali.

Beeman is a professor of Islamic studies at Brown University.

Iranians, too, far from supporting or glorying in the tasteless act, as Americans have been led to believe, reacted with anger and disgust. According to telephone interviews with officials of National Iranian Radio and Television, the switchboard at the central Teheran television station nearly exploded with indignant callers demanding to know why such a grisly and disrespectful act was put on the air.

The outpouring of Iranian public disgust following the event clearly carried the day. The previous threat to hang the bodies outside the embassy or to hold them in ransom for Iranian assets in the United States was quickly abandoned.

Still, this sad incident does have an explanation, although perhaps not one that will ever be satisfactory to Americans.

During the Iranian revolution, when the principal military officers involved in the shooting of unarmed citizens on the streets of Teheran were executed, their bodies were displayed to the public to demonstrate that they had actually been executed. That was necessary because many Iranian citizens believed that the men somehow would escape punishment.

In the case of the American rescue operation, one of the principal rumors in Teheran was that the operation had never taken place, that it was all a propaganda move on the part of the US to scare Iranians.

Furthermore, the fact that Ayatollah

Khalkhali oversaw the unloading and display of the bodies should not be taken as an Islamic sanction of the act.

Islam is quite clear about the need for respectful treatment of the dead — whether Moslem or non-Moslem. Because Moslems believe that the bodies of the dead must be carefully treated and prepared for the day of resurrection, they are lovingly washed and wrapped in a white burial shroud before interment. The thought that a person's body might be desecrated is a chilling thought for Iranians on a human level. Thus the display of the bodies of the American servicemen violated their sensibilities on almost every level.

As Americans we have a limited understanding of Islam, and it is perhaps the fact that the religion seems strange to us that makes us classify every incomprehensible act taking place in Iran as Islamic. The fact that the Iranian revolution utilized the rhetoric of Islam so heavily reinforces this impression.

In fact, Islam served primarily as a convenient symbolic umbrella which covered many of the economic and political dissatisfactions felt by the Iranian public toward the regime of the shah.

The mosque was one of the few places where people could gather legally and thus it was a natural center for assembling to marshal demonstrations in opposition to the government. Religious rhetoric and the philosophy of glorification of martyrdom served to spur the young men from the city to fight, even when unarmed, against the troops of the shah.

But there is another side to religion in Iran. Although religious ideals are glorified there, the rank and file of the Islamic clergy is viewed in a rather different light. The traditional view of the small town mullah is that of an avaricious, ambitious, grasping man looking for ways not

Spielmann Pushes Student Rights

Editor:

Next year could be either a very good or very bad year for students. The choice is partially up to them. Today they will have the opportunity, to some extent, to determine which of these two shall be the case.

One way that students could help encourage a good year, is to vote for Bob Spielmann for Student Welfare. In this capacity Bob will be responsible for advocating student rights. Already this year he has worked to develop a new approach in this area, including a large scale program to deal with grade appeals which will be openly publicized and be a permanent facility for the entire student body.

In addition to serving on the Activity Fee Board, he has coordinated a student effort to oppose the drop-date change to the fourth week.

These types of activities could make next year a better year for students. We the undersigned would like to endorse Bob Spielmann in his candidacy.

Sabo Record Includes Long List of Struggles, Services

Editor:

I remember the first time I saw Linda Sabo. She was addressing students on Revelle Plaza about draft registration. It was during the huge anti-draft rally where some 2500 students gathered. Her sincerity and enthusiasm for helping students understand the importance and immediacy of draft registration struck me. The next time I saw Linda was at an AS meeting this year; as a member of Warren College Student Government I was interested in the political issues that AS dealt with. Again Linda stood out as being very concerned about the input of students on such matters as the Chancellor Search Committee selection process.

Since that time I have spoken to Linda on many important subjects affecting all of us at UCSD. Her concern for the development of the Daycare Center, Women's Center, SAAC, and College Councils, in addition to such student organizations as the ski club, indicate an ability to get along with diversified groups, each with its own interests.

As the newly elected president of Warren College Student Government and the Warren College Council, I have discussed with Linda the importance of having input from the college councils into AS. She has been most responsive towards this, and specifically mentioned as a possible goal, more college input into the selection of Student Center Board members. We also discussed the possibility of a rotating chair on Warren College Council next year which may serve as a test for other committees and bodies of student government.

Because of Linda's immense leadership experience and her ability to represent all student interests fairly, I personally endorse her for president of the Associated Students.

Bekken Referendum Draws Criticisms

Editor:

Concerning the article by Jenifer Warren on May 1, 1980. The referendum for the May 6 ballot should not read "shall all military personnel or recruiters be denied access to UCSD for recruiting purposes," it should read, "shall Jon Bekken be allowed to deny freedom of free speech on this campus." I would gladly give Mr. Bekken the opportunity to throw me off this campus for being a military recruiter.

JAMES E. CARRAHER

Editor:

Regarding the initiative to ban military recruiters from campus: What would Jon Bekken do if a majority of students voted to ban him from campus? I admire the energy with which Bekken promotes his feelings about the draft, but by seeking to remove military recruiters from campus, Bekken is showing an intolerance for the very tolerance which allows him to be heard in the first place.

AP NEWSBRIEFS

Commandos Free Iran's UK Embassy

LONDON — British commandos stormed the Iranian Embassy at dusk yesterday, killing three of the five Iranian Arab terrorists who seized the building six days earlier and killed two of their 21 hostages, authorities reported.

They said some of the 19 rescued hostages suffered shock and cuts. Two other terrorists were captured alive, one of them wounded.

At least two explosions rocked the elegant five-story building as the Special Air Services commandos charged in. A fire followed but it was soon extinguished.

"My God, they've done it!" said a reporter for the British Broadcasting Corp., who believed as did many other journalists watching the drama from behind police barricades that the terrorists had carried out their threat to blow up the building.

Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir David McNee said the decision to launch the assault was made after the Arabs killed two of their captives Monday and threatened to kill another every half hour if their demands were not met.

Officials reported none of the commandos or police was wounded in the raid. They declined to say how many commandos were involved, and spoke only in terms of "units."

It was not known what caused the explosions. The terrorists, who seized the embassy Wednesday, had threatened to blow up the building, but police did not say how they were armed. It was believed the commandos were equipped with "stun" grenades used to immobilize victims with concussion.

One of the toughest problems facing British officials trying to negotiate an end to the siege was the Iranian government's refusal to negotiate.

The terrorists initially had said they would kill all the hostages if Iran's revolutionary Islamic government did not free 91 imprisoned Iranian Arabs.

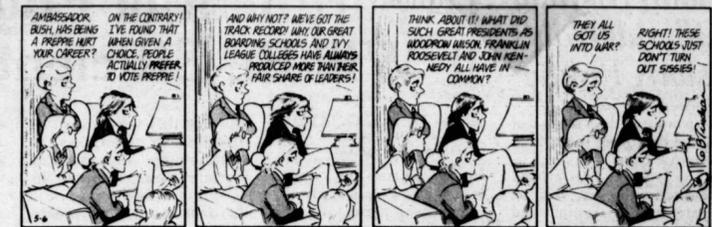

Khomeini's government had refused to negotiate and threatened to kill one of the Khuzestan prisoners for each hostage slain.

The British Foreign Ministry said it had received Iran's permission to storm the embassy "if necessary."

In Washington, the State Department expressed regret at the deaths of the hostages and said the incident "also underlines the deep concern felt by the American people and the American government for the Americans held hostage in Iran."

Weapon Buildup For Mideast

PORT HUENEME, Calif. — "A heavy concentration" of military offensive equipment, including tanks and amphibious assault vehicles capable of supporting a 12,000-man Marine brigade was being unloaded yesterday for shipment to the Mideast, a Marine spokesman said.

The buildup of weaponry, termed a preparedness move that was not a specific response to the recent attempt to rescue U.S. hostages in Iran, does not include troops. It was expected to continue through the end of the week at this port 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Flexible Interest Mortgages OK'd

SACRAMENTO — Amid warnings that home mortgage financing would vanish otherwise, the Assembly passed a bill yesterday that would allow mortgage interest rates to be periodically readjusted by as much as 5 percent during a 30-year loan.

"If we do not allow this type of financing," warned the author, Assemblyman Alister McAlister, "there is a serious question if there is going to be a home lending industry in this country."

His bill, AB3142, was approved 56-4 and sent to the Senate, which is considering another proposal to allow flexible interest rates.

Currently, a potential homeowner can get a mortgage at the prevailing interest rate, about 15 to 18 percent, or get a variable rate mortgage under which the interest rate — and thus the payments — can vary up or down 2½ percent depending on the market.

Marijuana Ends Career of Judge

OAKLAND — State Appeals Court Justice Paul Halvonik agreed to resign from the bench today in a plea-bargain in which he pleaded no contest to one count of possessing marijuana.

Halvonik, 41, had been appointed to the appeals court in 1978 by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

As part of the same plea-bargain, his wife, Oakland attorney Deborah Halvonik, pleaded guilty to the same charge — possessing more than one ounce of marijuana.

Both were sentenced by retired Supreme Court Justice

Louis H. Burke to six months in jail, but the jail time was suspended for two years and they were placed on probation for two years. She was also fined $500.

Delays Seen In Strangler Trial

LOS ANGELES — Last-minute legal tangles forced postponement yesterday of the long-awaited preliminary hearing for accused Hillside Strangler Angelo Buono.

Superior Court Judge H. Randolph Moore Jr. rescheduled testimony to begin tomorrow but a legal dispute over whether the public and press may attend the proceedings is likely to bring further delays.

Buono, the 45-year-old auto upholsterer charged with the murders of 10 young women, did not appear. After conferring with him in a holding cell, his attorneys announced he had waived his right to be present.

Court appointed defense attorney Gerald Chaleff said the delay came because two issues are still on appeal — Buono's request for public funds to pay his private attorney, James Brustman, and Brustman's request that he be named to replace Chaleff as Buono's court-appointed attorney.

to promote the ideals of religion but rather to promote his own fortune.

The great spiritual charismatic figures such as Ayatollah Khomeini and Ayatollah Shariat Madari derive their public support from the fact that they do not fit the stereotypic mode exemplified by people like Ayatollah Behesti and Ayatollah Khalkhali, both of whom are disliked and distrusted by a considerable segment of the Iranian population.

Thus, when Ayatollah Khalkhali brought out the bodies of our dead soldiers for the public to gaze at, the Iranian people turned away in revulsion.

Department of Education Vows It Will Be Efficient and Organized

FROM THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The number 13 does not seem to be carrying its usual unlucky omen when it comes to the new US Department of Education. The agency, the 13th Cabinet department, opens its doors today a month ahead of schedule and $9 million below expected costs.

The agency is starting with more than 6,000 employees and a $14 billion annual appropriation, and Education Secretary Shirley M. Hufstедler says it is ready — and able — to improve the federal government's efficiency in handling American education.

For openers, her aides point out that they were allotted six months by Congress to organize the 150 disparate agencies destined to join the department and make it a functioning unit. It has taken only five months.

The $10 million permitted for transition costs proved to be far more than needed. Departmental spokeswoman Colleen O'Connor said that when all the bills are paid, less than one-tenth of that, about $920,000, will have been spent.

The secretary has been a vocal advocate for the department in public forums since her selection by President Carter last October. With the myriad problems facing the nation's schools — among them, low public confidence, accelerating costs, lingering discrimination and assaults on standardized tests — she is asked often what difference a Department of Education will make.

Her reply emphasizes that consolidation can lead to greater efficiency and an improvement in the quality of the federal government's contribution to education. She maintains that giving education Cabinet-level status is a long-overdue acknowledgement of the importance it carries in this society.

"In retrospect, it's surprising that it took us 200 years to decide that education is as important as housing or transportation or other issues that were at the Cabinet table before us," she said last week. "I think we can give a driving force to the kind of creativity and ingenuity to be found in . . . many people who are not often heard from."

The new department is destined to grow quickly. It will be formally joined by the old Overseas Dependent Schools program, which is being removed from the Defense Department. About 11,000 personnel go with this educational segment and the department has up to three years in which to arrange the merger which will raise its employee total to 17,000.

UC Nutrition Education Program Denounced

Congressional Subcommittee Criticizes California's One-to-One System; Extension Service Defends It

BY MONICA GIEBEN

Staff Writer
The denunciation of the University of California's nutritional education program by a congressional subcommittee may lead to the suspension of its federal funding.

At a May 21 hearing in Los Angeles, a congressional agricultural subcommittee expressed dissatisfaction with the management of the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program sponsored by UC's Cooperative Extension Service, claiming that it is "probably the worst-administered program in the nation of its kind."

Cooperative Extension Service is a statewide arm of the university. By extending the facilities of on-campus university research to farmers and homemakers in the community, it links the academic researcher and the practical user.

Funds for the organization are contributed by the federal generated a program to give nutritional education aid to the poor. The thrust of the program was to get an education resource to the low income families."

The program gives selected homemakers in the community nutritional training, who are then sent to highly populated, impoverished regions. There they visit needy families and give them "basic knowledge on feeding their family and how to use their dollar most efficiently in the grocery store," according to Brown.

The subcommittee's complaint centers around this method of educating on a one-to-one basis.

"In the one-to-one process, a trained employee makes a call to a family and takes them

On UC commencement day in June, a Berkeley graduate student will make academic history when he steps forward and receives his doctorate. In fact, until several years ago, what Jefferey Mishlove had studied was considered more of a simple occult fanaticism than an involved university major.

Mishlove is the first candidate for a doctorate in parapsychology — a "science" which deals with things not ordinarily thought to be of this world.

According to the Journal of Parapsychology, the subject is the study of "behavioral or personal exchanges with the environment which are extrasensory — not dependent on senses and muscles." More simply, it is the study of ESP and psychokinesis. In the past, UC officials have not accepted it as a full-fledged science.

government in proportion to the rural population of the state, with California receiving $50 million of the share per year.

The university also contributes a certain amount, as does the county government, which provides support services for a county office. According to Victor Brown, Director of CES in San Diego County, Presidio County receives the most funds — $139,000 a year — for the program from the county level.

The Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program, one part of CES's services, is the program under question by the subcommittee.

According to Brown: "Back in 1916, when they discovered that there was malnutrition in the country, the USDA through a prescribed series of training, and then after a certain length of time, graduates that family and moves on to another needy family," Brown says.

"The technique, as I understand it, that was questioned in the hearing was this one-to-one series. We contend that, yes, it is expensive, but it is also the most effective," he adds.

However, the General Accounting Office recently conducted a nationwide survey on the "effectiveness" of the program and published a report saying that "the program's major problems appear to be weak program administration, inadequate evidence to demonstrate the program's effectiveness, and dwindling funds and human resources."

Brown, on the other hand, says, "the committee was comparing us to New York and apparently New York is conducting its program on a group basis. But, when we dig into the statistics about the cost per family, we find that our cost was cheaper than New York's."

It will be about a month before a decision is reached by the subcommittee on CES.

computer science, statistics, and perception, and his interest in the field stemmed from his own psychic abilities.

"I decided that I couldn't just dismiss them, that they were more than a chance coincidence." Mishlove doesn't consider his abilities particularly rare; he feels that psychic abilities "are more widespread than universities acknowledge. They would be distributed like athletic or music abilities."

There are over 700 published experiments with successful results of significant levels of higher than .05. Some reach levels of significance up to one in a

Critics of the validity of parapsychology as a science cite its two major drawbacks. The first flaw they note is that psychic experiments are not universally repeatable as the classic scientific experiment has been defined. Mishlove defends parapsychology here saying that it is "statistically repeatable."

"There are over 700 published experiments with successful results of significant levels of higher than .05. Some reach levels of significance up to one in a million." The second criticism is that too many of the experiments done are frauds. "Critics are quick to lump scientifically conducted experiments with fraudulent material." Although he admits that for "every case of genuine research there is one of fraud." He adds "that this is not unusual in science."

Another point of debate is parapsychology's relationship to the occult sciences. "Occult sciences are based

Abortion Bill Bad News For Unwed Teen Mothers

SACRAMENTO — Unwed minors could not get abortions in California without approval of their parents or a court if a bill sent to the Senate floor Monday becomes law.

The measure, SB1814 by Sen. John Schmitz, R-Corona del Mar, cleared the Senate Finance Committee on a 7-5 vote.

However, an amendment added by the committee would scrap the bill if Proposition 9, Howard Jarvis' income tax cut initiative, is approved by voters June 3. The committee has been adding that provision to most bills that increase government costs.

However, abortion-rights groups won on another front yesterday when Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-Whittier, withdrew a bill that would have required a 24-hour waiting period for non-emergency abortions.

The bill, SB691, also would have required the doctor to tell the woman what effects the abortion would have on her and the fetus.

Cuban Refugees Find Homes In Florida's Makeshift City

northwestern Florida tent city may begin moving into American towns by Tuesday, officials say.

"That's a darn good possibility," site director Norman Steinlauf of the Federal Emergency Management Agency said Monday. The federal agency is coordinating all federal activities in the processing.

The four-acre makeshift tent community, just a few miles from downtown Fort Walton Beach, continues to grow as hundreds of military engineers and construction workers labor around the clock to erect 18-by-52-foot tents which house 25 to 35 people.

More than 2,000 refugees were packed into the center by midday Monday and another 500 were expected by day's end, being flown from Key West, the entry point into this country.

Reportedly among the refugees at the tent city was 71-year-old Regina Antonia Juana Cugat, who said she was a sister of band leader Xavier Cugat. The slight, white-haired woman could not immediately be interviewed for details.

Janice Pittman of the US Catholic Conference said sponsors have been found for up to 15,000 refugees who may go through this center.

Mrs. Pittman said communities throughout the Southeast had contacted her office to sign up for refugee sponsorship.

"For instance, the Cuban community on Orlando has asked for 300 to 400 refugees," she said. "We expect to place about 100 to 150 in Tallahassee."
