Screening for UC Employees Tightened

By REBEKAH YOUNG and JILL COLLEY
Staff Writers

In a move that has received mixed reactions from UCSD employers, the UC system is attempting to tighten up the screening process required for employment in positions considered "sensitive."

The new screening process will involve "more than the normal background check" on people applying for or being promoted to these sensitive positions, Archie Garcia, assistant personnel manager for the UCSD Personnel Office, said.

These positions include jobs in which employees have access to master keys to on-campus residences and University buildings. Other jobs considered "sensitive" involve those handling cash, controlled substances (for example, pharmaceutical drugs), and child care.

According to Gerry Reid, manager of compensation and policy at the UCSD Personnel Office, the more extensive background checks will include confirmation of previous employment, verification of references, a credit history check, and a check for a history of any previous involvement in lawsuits, court actions and convictions, but not arrests.

Arrest records will not be checked because "an arrest doesn't mean you've been convicted of a crime; it doesn't mean you're guilty," Garcia said.

Previous employment will be verified to make sure employees possess the skills their job at UCSD requires, Garcia added.

Also under consideration is the verification of prior work performance and regulation fingerprinting.

The screening process will not include a lie detector or drug test, and the checks will apply to students who hold these positions as well as to non-students.

Key administrators here were asked by the University of California Office of the President (UCOP) to comment on the proposed policy of strengthened background checks as well as to compile a list of positions UCSD should designate as "sensitive." Administrators were also asked to indicate the level of background checks recommended for the positions.

The Personnel Office, now in the process of compiling the data, will submit the information to the UCOP. The UCOP is attempting to "standardize the approach UC campuses take" when researching employees for jobs, Paul West, spokesperson for University Relations at the UCOP said.

The strengthening of existing security policies and the proposal to apply them to more positions "is not a result of a rash of theft or drug abuse in the UC system," West explained. "It's just a periodic procedural change."

Sharks Attack Two UCLA Kayakers

LOS ANGELES — The U.S. Coast Guard ended a four-day search last Wednesday for Roy Jeffrey Stoddard, a UCLA graduate student missing since a shark attack the preceding Thursday that killed his girlfriend, UCLA graduate student Tamara McAllister.

McAllister's body, riddled with shark bites, was found on Saturday, Jan. 28, floating in the Pacific five miles off Point Mugu. Stoddard and McAllister had set off on a kayaking trip from Malibu Beach two days earlier. Their kayaks were discovered off Point Mugu on Friday, Jan. 27.

"The probability of finding a survivor at this point is minimal," Petty Officer Robert Beals said last Thursday.

The attack "was a freak thing," Ventura County Deputy Coroner Jim Wingate said, "and overreacting now wouldn't serve any purpose."

"We don't want to start a panic," he added.

Stoddard, 24, was a teaching assistant for Public Health 112, an upper-division course in epidemiology. McAllister, also 24 and a graduate student of public health, was a student in his section.

Shark expert John McCosker, director of San Francisco's Stein-hart Aquarium, described the attack as a "classic white shark scenario."

"If this was, in fact, a Great White attack, it would be the first that we know of occurring south of Santa Barbara," McCosker said.

There have only been six other fatal shark attacks in California in the past 63 years. According to an Associated Press report, authorities have not closed the beaches in areas near the attack for fear of causing a panic over a single incident.

Zuma Beach lifeguard John Baker said that Latigo Point, the area where the kayaking trip began, is not currently overseen by lifeguards.

Stoddard and McAllister were both described as responsible individuals and their absences were noticed immediately, co-workers said.

McAllister and Stoddard had been missing since the morning of Thursday, Jan. 26. Their absences were noticed at that time when Stoddard failed to proctor an exam and McAllister did not report for her job as a part-time lab assistant.

McAllister was an exceptional person and worker, according to Diane Thatcher, McAllister's supervisor in the School of Public Health's microcomputing laboratory.

Stoddard's close friend Sean Coplen called Stoddard "the basic all-around good guy, who was always helpful and supportive."

Murder Hearing Begins For Med. School Student

By SETH SLATER
News Editor

The district attorney's case against UCSD Medical School student Charlie Richardson, accused of murdering his wife, began to take shape Friday at the opening of Richardson's preliminary hearing in a San Diego municipal court.

According to the testimony of biology technician Azita Moalemi, who worked under the supervision of the defendant's wife at El Cajon Incorporated Laboratory, the body of Maria Elizabeth Richardson was found in the lab on the morning of Dec. 20 last year.

Moalemi said she arrived at work that morning to find that "the lights were on in the other rooms," and she "thought that maybe Beth [Richardson] was in."

Upon entering the lab's hematology office, Moalemi said she found her supervisor's body face down on the floor and proceeded to "touch her with my leg," and call Beth's name before seeking help from a neighboring doctor's office.

Family physician Terry L. Winegar said that when Moalemi told him that Beth Richardson was on the floor in the lab, he hurried next door thinking that Beth had fallen and cut herself.

"When I walked into the room, the door was ... about half way open," Winegar testified. "I touched her ... and turned her over very quick and, at that point, I realized she was dead. I hardly recognized her because her face was so blue," the doctor said between sobs.

Winegar said he examined the body with a stethoscope but found neither heartbeat nor respiration. At that point, the doctor said, the body was "cold and stiff" and he pronounced Beth Richardson dead.

According to a report filed by Deputy Coroner Penelope Hammerstead, the autopsy performed on Beth Richardson's body revealed that she had been "strangled by another person."

According to the testimony of Carmen Mabalot, who has worked as the Richardsons' babysitter and housekeeper, Beth and Charlie Richardson left their home together the day Beth's body was found.

"They were kind of happy," Mabalot said through court translator Ernie Flores, Jr., "and I accompanied them outside," to their car.

Mabalot further testified that in the months preceding Beth Richardson's death, she and her husband had argued on a number of occasions.

She added, though, that she recognized photos presented to her during the court proceedings as including ones of pieces of paper with the words "I love you" and "I love you very much" which Mabalot identified as being samples of Charlie Richardson's penmanship.

El Cajon police officer Mike Howard, who interviewed Charlie Richardson on Dec. 20, testified that the defendant said he dropped his wife off at work that day before heading to the UCSD library to study for a test.

UC Berkeley Lecturer Mixed-up in Plane Bomb Hoax

LOS ANGELES — Hunting for a job can be difficult, especially if you're Peter Canning. He was arrested by the FBI while trying.

Canning, a visiting lecturer at UC Berkeley, was on a flight to New Orleans, where he had scheduled job interviews. But during the flight, Canning got mixed up in a bomb hoax that put his life on hold for five days.

While on the plane, he found a note tucked in a meal tray. The note said in part, "There are bombs planted all over this airplane." But when he handed it over to the flight crew, the plane made an emergency landing. Canning, suspected as a terrorist, was arrested.

Investigation and interrogation followed. The result: the 40-year-old scholar of comparative literature was mistakenly accused of composing a note actually scribbled by an imaginative 11-year-old boy. The FBI apologized and Canning was cleared of charges.

"I'm just relieved it's over," Canning said in a telephone interview from his home in Berkeley. However, he still has some unexpected bills and an unfunded ticket.

Canning has rescheduled the interviews he was not able to keep, and he hopes to find a teaching job before his two-year contract with Berkeley expires. His last semester teaching at Berkeley starts Monday. —Eugene Ahn, Daily Bruin

Academic Senate Investigates UCD Prof's $7 Million Lawsuit

LOS ANGELES — A $7-million lawsuit against two UC Davis professors and an employee prompted a state-wide academic senate committee to re-examine University policy and seek changes Wednesday, Jan. 18.

The lawsuit's outcome raised questions about University policy on faculty research, and to what extent the University will pay for damages. The unanswered questions are causing an uneasy stir among faculty and the Academic Senate.

The suit was filed in 1979 by George Neary, a Davis cattle rancher. Neary claimed that an investigative report by two UC Davis professors, Ben Norman and Charles Hjerpe, had defamed him.

Neary, the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA), and an assemblyman had asked the UC Davis School of Veterinary Medicine to investigate how a large number of Neary's cows died. Neary claimed that toxaphene spraying by the CDFA killed the cows, and wanted UC Davis to verify this. But when the professors concluded in their study that Neary's own mismanagement killed the cows, Neary claimed that the report was false. He said that Norman and Hjerpe were partial to pesticide spraying and had friends in the CDFA.

The jury's verdict found the professors and one administrator guilty and awarded Neary $7 million on Sept. 8.

As a matter of policy, the University will pay the $7 million award which was for general damages only. The University is seeking an appeal to reduce Neary's award, but Neary may still sue for punitive damages. Although no punitive damages have been awarded in Neary's case, faculty members are wondering whether the University would pay for such damages.

The existing UC policy requires the University to conduct an independent post-trial investigation to determine if the school will pay. This is to protect the University in cases in which the professor acted with malice.

No decisions have been made as to what specific changes will be made in University policy. — T. Nhan, Daily Bruin

Turkish Paper Falsely Reports Firing of UCLA Professor

LOS ANGELES — A recent article in Turkey's largest newspaper, Hurriyet, reported that UCLA professor Stanford Shaw said he had been fired because of Armenian pressure.

But Shaw, a senior professor at UCLA for more than 20 years, has never been fired and is still teaching Ottoman history here.

Currently the target of an undergraduate government task force investigating his scholarly practices, the professor has been accused of poor research because he claims the Turkish government slaughtered no Armenians in 1915.

The task force is the second to investigate Shaw this year. The first group's report — prompted when the Armenian Student Association accused Shaw of poor scholarship last summer — was considered biased and inspired the second investigation.

The article in Hurriyet, which has a circulation of 800,000 in Turkey and also prints European and American editions, went on to say that Shaw had requested a letter-writing campaign supporting his reinstatement.

Hurriyet's Los Angeles correspondent Safer Yilmaz, who wrote the article, said the erroneous information was a simple mistake on his part. Yilmaz, who said he has been a professional journalist for over 20 years, explained that he confused a plea by Shaw to establish a Turkish language position at UCLA with what he actually reported. — Nicholas Tepper, Daily Bruin

The service is staffed with experienced tax professionals who are prepared to handle any level of tax return. The member-owned cooperative has kept the fees low, according to the service rendered.

U.S.E.'s tax preparation specialists are available by appointment Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Starting Feb. 1 through April 17, those hours will be extended from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays, and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays. Appointments can be made by calling the receptionist.

UCSD Lit Prof Donald Wayne

Literature professor Donald Wayne will give the second of three "salons" sponsored by the Friends of the UCSD Library at 5 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 7, in room 263 of the Central Library.

Wayne's topic will be "Power, Politics, and Renaissance Culture: The Case of Ben Jonson." Admission is free and the public is welcome.

Wayne will frame a discussion of the work of the 17th century poet and playwright Ben Jonson within a broader set of questions concerning the tendency of 20th century aesthetics to separate, if not to exclude, issues of political and social history from the study and appreciation of art and literature.

Those planning to attend the salon may wish to read Jonson's "Volpone" in advance. Further information may be obtained by calling the Office of the Friends of the Library, 534-2533.

LJ Committee Rejects Traffic Recommendations

By LAURA PROCTOR
Senior Staff Writer

If the recommendations of a recent traffic study are followed, La Jolla will see several "improvement strategies" implemented, including a new overpass over Ardath Road, a spotlight on Prospect street, a switch to one-way streets and the elimination of parking on Torrey Pines Road.

At a meeting last week of the La Jolla Town Council's Traffic and Transportation Committee, most members strongly opposed the recommendations of the firm which prepared the study.

The La Jolla meeting focused on the importance of pedestrian safety, maintaining "village ambience," and preventing the construction of "a highway through La Jolla."

The study in question, called the Beach Communities Traffic Congestion Study, was prepared by JHK and Associates. According to its executive summary, it was conducted "on the behalf of the City of San Diego and the residents of the Pacific Beach and La Jolla Communities...to alleviate the high level of congestion that currently exists during peak periods."

At its meeting last week, the Town Council committee revised its proposed response to the study, to be included with the report when the study is brought before the San Diego City Council.

This response would represent the opinion of the La Jolla Town Council, the La Jolla Community Planning Association, and the La Jolla Shores Association.

The proposed response is a rejection if the study's recommendations because they would "violate the La Jolla Community Plan by turning our village streets into a neighborhood-destroying highway," one committee member said.

Dave Ish, manager of the La Jolla Town Council, said it is unlikely that the San Diego City Council will blindly follow the recommendations if La Jolla opposes them.

"[The City Council is usually] very open to and interested in the community's attitude," he said.

Ish explained that the study emphasized alleviation of traffic problems through road expansion, but ignored community concerns.

"It's frustrating," he said. "You have to be willing to stand up."

Ish called the Community Plan "the overall document of what La Jolla should be," and said, "We've had some problems [in the past] with the city adhering to that plan."

of business affairs at UCSD, added that background checks are done in a "limited way" now, and on a "case by case" basis. With a new, uniform policy, there will be "less flexibility" in deciding which jobs merit a background check.

The new policies that will be handed down by the UCOP will define which positions need to be checked and to what extent.

"These positions will be identified by their responsibilities, not by their titles," Garcia stressed.

Reactions to the policy proposal from key UCSD administrators were "varied," Garcia added.

Comments included questioning how long the new policy would delay someone from beginning work. Also asked was what action an employer would take if a conviction was discovered but was in no way related to the job.

Another concern was raised regarding the checking of previous job performance. Administrators wondered if, when a previous employer gave personal information about a prospective employee, that new knowledge might influence their decision to hire that person.

Garcia explained that these questions fall under "local procedure" which is still being planned.

Josephine Foulks, director of the La Barranca Day Care Center, said that background checks were necessary, "especially in a department like ours." Background checks are already required for the licensing agency and social services, Foulks added.

She speculated that the new security measures could be a reaction to public pressure stemming from the massive publicity child

The plan, devised in 1976, states that "anything that is done to encourage and make more convenient the private automobile will be a detriment."

The proposed La Jolla response objects to an Ardath overpass because it would encourage traffic to move to and from La Jolla via Mount Soledad Park. Also, a spotlight at Girard and Prospect, it says, would "destroy village ambience" and one-way streets, it states, should be considered only on a case-by-case basis.

The response also opposes the recommendation to add more traffic lanes on Torrey Pines Road on the grounds that this would increase speeding and danger to bicyclists while eliminating "already scarce" parking.

Dan Allen, a Town Council trustee, objected to the committee's narrow view on road expansion. He claimed that the members' opinions did not represent the entire La Jolla community. If the council keeps rejecting all recommendations for expansion, he said, "Five years from now we're going to be in the worst gridlock you've ever seen."

Council President Bob Whittemore disagreed, saying, "We don't want a highway going through La Jolla" — That's the overall sentiment [in the community].

According to Whittemore, the consensus in La Jolla is, "We'd rather sit in traffic than have a big highway through La Jolla."

MURDER: Hearing Begins

According to Howard, Richardson told police investigators that he left his wife's workplace at approximately 7:45 a.m. that day and then spent a couple of hours at the UCSD library before running other errands, including the purchase of a potted rose bush for his wife.

The officer testified that Richardson returned to the El Cajon laboratory shortly after noon on Dec. 20.

Howard acknowledged, in response to defense attorney Rick Siref's questions, that Richardson asked what had happened at the lab and inquired as to the whereabouts of his wife, saying that the presence of so many police cars had given him cause for concern.

When Howard informed Richardson of his wife's death, he "immediately put his hands over his face so that they covered his eyes," the officer said. Howard said that when Richardson removed his hands, his eyes appeared "a little bit" red, but noted that he did not cry and commented that "I thought that was odd."

Howard said that he and a police agent interviewed Richardson for approximately three and a half hours and noted that, during the first hour, Richardson kept moving his hands "in a rubbing motion," but remained "calm throughout the conversation."

"[Charlie Richardson] never asked how she [Beth Richardson] died," Howard said. "At one point in the conversation, he asked, 'Did she fall?'"

According to the officer, Richardson said that his wife had no enemies.

During the interview, Howard said that he observed "a couple of scratches on [Richardson's] hands."

When asked about these scratches, Howard said Richardson explained them to be the result of a "tickling" incident with his wife earlier that day and said that he had not been scratched in any other area.

Apparently, Richardson told Howard that he had been kissing and tickling his wife prior to leaving the lab, when Beth scratched his hands while moving them.

Howard's testimony, however, indicated that there were faint scratch marks on Richardson's upper chest, forehead, left shoulder and on the bridge of his nose.

Howard said the scratches "were red" and "appeared to be fresh."

Budget Cuts Sting

Editor:

Last fall, when this year's round of federal and state education budget cuts took hold, many UCSD students took a familiar route to get those much sought-after lower division math or English courses by attempting to register at one of the local community colleges. Many students were surprised last semester when lines outside their English classes at Mesa rivaled those at SDSU business classes, and when they found that many good teachers who had been recommended to them were no longer teaching.

This semester, the scenario is even more depressing. Mass layoffs of part-time faculty at Mesa and City Colleges have gutted class offerings, leaving students scrambling or simply left out in a class crasher's no-man's land. For example, Mesa cut its part-time English teaching staff from 61 in 1987-88 to just 14 now. Over at City, English course offerings were cut over 20 percent from what appeared in the spring class schedule.

What's going on? First, nearly two-thirds of all the teachers in California's community colleges, state colleges, and universities are classed as "part-time." They are limited in the number of classes they can teach on each campus, are paid a third of what the contract faculty are paid, receive few, if any, benefits, and can be laid off at any time. During the 1970s and '80s, administrators, noticing a glut of teachers from the "Baby Boom" generation, and decreasing numbers of students from the "Baby Bust" generation, implemented a scheme to exploit this former group. Thus, the vast, expendable pool of cheap teaching labor was born.

Now, complicating this in California, has been the passage of State Assembly Bill 1725. One thing this bill is designed to do is pare down the lopsided ratio of part-time faculty to full-time faculty (in the community colleges; no such bill has been proposed to right this situation in the colleges and universities.) In short, the community colleges have run scared.

Anticipating the arrival of state regulators, these colleges quickly implemented layoffs of part-time faculty (Mesa and City), or that plus increases in class size (Grossmont). This resulted in a scaling back of course offerings and the widespread dumping of some very talented teachers. Of course, when the time comes, the administrators can proudly announce that they are in compliance with AB 1725, but look at the cost!

More evidence of cost cutting can be seen in that controversial writing program of questionable value, "Subject A." Back in 1985, it was determined that community college teachers could be used to teach those writing classes even more cheaply than could the TA's.

That explains some of the current mess, the localized portion of the vast, sorry quagmire which is the crisis situation in American education today. I wonder why undergraduates, especially, feel that they just have to accept "budget education" at far from cheap rates. Maybe a little of that old-fashioned sixties' activism is needed here — not sit-ins and demonstrations — but contacts with state and federal legislators, and the media, to let the public know just how far things have gone. Don't just complain. Start doing something!

UCSD Lacks Spirit

Editor:

David Poticha's commentary on a UCSD football team brought an important point to light, namely, the lack of spirit on the campus. (Guardian, Jan. 26 and 30) As a member of the UCSD pep band, I attend sports events at least once a week. The paltry showing of support for our athletic teams on Fridays, contrasted with the mob that shows up for TGs only emphasizes the lack of spirit.

After stepping over puddles of beer and melting ice cubes and around stragglers draining the last drops from their cups outside the Main Gym, I walk into the nearly empty Triton Pavilion each Friday night and wait for the rest of the fans to arrive. After about 15 minutes, a few people begin to file in.

To those of you, and you know who you are, who attend Triton sports events, please keep coming. To those of you who get totally trashed at 7 on Friday, maybe you should consider that getting drunk is more fun when you have something to celebrate — like a Triton victory. It's a sad situation when anywhere from 20 to 50 percent of the crowd is made up of the pep band. I've also noticed a deafening silence when the pep band is not at games because there aren't enough fans to make up for its absence.

Because, think of all of the benefits to attending sports events. There are people to scam on, it's a great way to avoid homework, it fills up those large holes in your social calendar, and above all, it's fun.

Driving

not viewed strangely, however; and many of these that I have found have been along lonely highways. Out there, the people that you meet are usually friendly, talkative, and interested in who you are, where you've come from, and where you're going. They have time to care, and seem to understand if you're by yourself.

It has been said that all roads are really one road, that the road which goes past your front door also goes to every far-off, exotic and lonely place on the continent. If this is true, perhaps it wouldn't be so hard to behave more like some of the people in those far-away places.

College is a very busy time of anyone's life. I know that I, personally, am kept almost constantly occupied by all of my different activities, classes, and of course working here at the Guardian. I wouldn't stop any of these things, nor would I expect anyone else to.

I would like to see, however, all of the busy students (and others) on this campus take just a moment to think about another person. I'm not saying that people here do not care about others, but I have heard many people say that this school lacks the facilities and infrastructure necessary to be a real college campus, necessary to give it a sense of cohesion. This is only part of the problem. Sure, we're all busy, and sure, there are problems with what sort of a campus this is, but a remedy for this situation is not beyond the reach of the students.

The next time you see a stranger, try smiling; perhaps go so far as to say "hello." I can't guarantee that you'll get a positive response, but at least you'll have taken a step toward making this a better campus. Also, I can guarantee that if the person you address happens to be a newspaper editor with a faraway look in his eyes who might have just gotten out of an old, white BMW, your effort will be sincerely appreciated.

sasso, professor of clinical psychiatry at the UCSD Medical School and Peter Smith, research director of the Center for U.S.-Mexican studies.

The study will concentrate on all angles of the drug problem. The psychological aspect of the investigation will study why people start taking drugs in the first place and why they progress from one drug to another.

The idea that some drugs serve as stepping stones and why will also be debated.

"If part of the concern is how to slow down consumption and demand, then part of the intellectual problem is what produces demand in the first place," Smith said.

"It's important to look at the project not just as research but as a broad exchange of experience and knowledge," Boeker said. "We'd like to convince the countries out there that they're not alone [in dealing with the drug problem], it's not hopeless, and that it's a common effort in which everyone needs to do more," he said.

Boeker, who was the U.S. ambassador to Bolivia from 1977-1980, said that his experience there was an impetus to start the study. He stated that 10 years ago, when he was sent to Bolivia, the U.S. government told him that cocaine was not a physically addictive drug.

"I remember coming back on my first return to Washington," Boeker said, "and seeing the head of the Drug Enforcement Agency and telling him, 'This stuff is as strongly addictive as many of the drugs you've been dealing with for a long time.' It destroys lives very quickly and I've seen people in Bolivian jails who live only for this stuff. That's their life."

Boeker stated that his experiences were a "dramatic indication" of how slow the world has been to acquire knowledge about the basic physiological effects of drugs.

Now, the three-year inquiry is in its first phases. The Institute is in the process of inviting people to join the investigation's steering committee.

People are being recruited from "key countries in the hemisphere and the U.S.," said Boeker.

"They will be a distinguished group of people who have been involved in policies regarding drug control and trafficking from both supplier countries in Latin America and the United States," he said.

Representatives from "transmission" countries that don't produce drugs but which are either places where money is laundered or through which drugs are passed en route to the United States, will also be invited, Smith said.

Describing the group as "international and far flung," Boeker added that experts in a variety of disciplines will be invited from Mexico, Columbia, Bolivia, Peru and other Latin American countries. People from the United States who have worked on drug policy questions in this country will also be asked to participate. "We'll be looking around the world for the best advice we can get," Smith stated.

Political scientists, economists, physicians, psychiatrists and social workers will be chosen so that the drug problem can be looked at "in all its significant facts," Boeker said. People will be brought in from the varying fields "to try to think of an effective mix of policy measures that will make a difference," Smith added.

Funding for the first stage of the project, a conference, will come from the Institute of the Americas and UCSD.

"The Chancellor himself feels strongly about and supports this particular issue," Boeker said. He added that the University had agreed to aid the study, but did not know from what part of the University's budget the funding would come.

Following the initial conference, the Institute will "try to get long-term financing to develop a program of study and some consultation that will produce a stream of publications," Smith said.

A later phase might include a large, "blockbusting" publication in 1990, and interim reports presented to the policymaking community between publications, he added.

"The stages build upon [each] other," Boeker said; "The first stage is to create a high powered inter-American steering group that will guide the second and

DRUGS: UCSD Research Institute Will Conduct Study

third phases of the study."
When asked about specific approaches to halt drugs the study will investigate, Boeker replied that "the idea is not to cook it too much in advance," but said one of their goals is to "produce an exchange of experience," on effective and ineffective drug control measures.
Boeker also mentioned some of the personal approaches he will bring to the study.
"There needs to be a much stronger sense of a common cause," Boeker said.
Boeker hopes that the study will "create a different kind of morale and a reinforcement among national efforts."
He added that there is currently a feeling of hopelessness about the issue of drugs in many countries, including our own. This feeling is especially strong in Latin American countries, he said.
How can these countries fight their drug problems when "the U.S. market creates such tremendous profits?" he asked.
The United States "produce[s] demands because of the way we're geared," stated Rebecca Ashby, a senior counselor and social worker at the McAllister Institute for Drug Treatment and Education.
"We take pills for anxiety, for stress, when we feel ill or depressed. It's a real cultural problem in the U.S.," she said.
When asked if he saw any viable solutions to the drug problem, Boeker replied that there were not solutions to the problem, but there are measures to control it.
He stressed the need for education about drugs and the risks associated with them.
Ann Steinhauer, a clinical dependency counselor at Scripps Memorial Hospital's McDonald Center, commented that "education, knowledge and research" are the first steps towards controlling the drug problem.
She added that a conference between South American and North American countries sounds like "a good move in the right direction."
The chairpeople of the UCSD study hope that its affects will include "jolting into action" those Latin American countries that have not acknowledged drugs as a major threat.
One of the fallacies Boeker hopes the study will get across to Latin American countries is the belief that "you can be a country that gets involved in drug production, processing, transit, or the passage of drug money, and drug use doesn't spin off of that into your own society," he said.
Boeker said that the Institute of the Americas is the home base for a study that will be international and hemispheric in scope.
"Our mission is to help UCSD reach out to the rest of the world," he said.

UCSD SPEAKERS' FORUM PRESENTS
An Evening with Malcolm X's Daughter ATTALLAH SHABAZZ "POSITIVELY YOU!"
Attallah Shabazz was a child when she witnessed the assassination of her father Malcolm X. As the eldest of Malcolm X's six daughters, she was the one who was most affected by the anguish that followed, and she is the one who now confronts and tries to correct the world's image of Malcolm X; an image that she says time and ignorance have combined to malign. Attallah Shabazz has dedicated herself to "intra-cultural and cross-cultural understanding" by focusing on the process by which personal hardship can be "transformed into something else—something wonderful."

Class Addresses Values and Environment

By ANDREA ADLEMAN
Contributing Features Editor

The issue: "There are two strands of attitudes toward the natural world running through the American mind. One is that it is the enemy to be conquered... You see that attitude coming up all the time in, say, advertisements for four-wheel drive vehicles... It's the mystique that's behind the Marlboro ads. "Then there's the romantic view that you get from John Muir and some of the English poets, and Henry Thoreau. [To them], nature is pure and unspoiled, it is Mother Nature who calms us and soothes us."

The question: "Why do we think these things? Why do we have these attitudes?"

Dr. John Stewart has outlined here one of the central questions he and his students explore in Contemporary Issues 20 (CI-20), "Wilderness and Human Values," an unusual course taught every spring quarter.

Stewart earned his B.A. at Denison College, Ohio. He did graduate work at Ohio State and taught at Dartmouth for 15 years. He founded Muir College at the request of UCSD's chancellor in the late '60s. He was Muir's first provost and held the job for 23 years. He also founded the music, drama, and visual arts departments.

Stewart, who has taught CI-20 since its inception in the spring of 1971, is teaching the course for the last time this spring quarter.

"I'll miss it," he said. "I form very close friendships with a lot of the students, especially with the discussion leaders."

The discussion leaders are one of many aspects that make CI-20 unique. They are undergraduate students who have shown a deep interest in the environment, and have met the other requirements:

"You can only talk so much about the outdoors. It's important to get out and see what we're talking about."

—Paul Fehlau
Staff Member

The discussion leaders from 1988 sharpen their skills in teamwork.

upper division standing, a 3.0 GPA by spring quarter, and completion of the two training courses, CI-96 and CI-98. Each discussion section pursues some topic in depth, such as some aspect of pollution or conservation.

Although, like many classes, "Wilderness and Human Values" involves a mid-term and a final exam, the lectures are not done in the typical format. The majority of the lectures are given by guest speakers who come from within the UCSD community and from outside organizations.

This spring, one of the more well-known speakers will be David Brower, who is, in Dr. Stewart's words, "one of the three most important figures in the history of American conservation."

The guest lecturers address a variety of environmentally-related issues while Dr. Stewart, linking the topics together, lectures during the remaining class periods.

Another unique aspect of CI-20 is its culminating backpacking trip held after finals week of spring quarter. Muir senior Paul Fehlau, who was discussion leader last year and is currently a member of CI-20's student staff, described the purpose of the trip.

"You can only talk so much about the outdoors," Fehlau said.

"It's important to us that people get out and really see what we're talking about... [The trip] gets people out together in a group that's interacting directly with the environment. Everyone goes through an experience where they learn that they're okay being outside without a lot of the amenities that they're used to."

According to Fehlau, CI-20 "is See WILDERNESS, page 11

Wilderness and Human Values

right for anyone who has an interest in it... It's [similar to] a philosophy course in that a lot of what's talked about is the value of wilderness to people. Everyone is aware of [environmental issues]. The people who find that fascinating will like this course."

Stewart added that CI-20 students "tend to be more socially conscious, more concerned about issues, and not just environmental issues, than your average university student."

Within the broad category of the environment, students study many specialized subjects: "They learn a little biology about overpopulation and population dynamics," Fehlau said. "They learn a little about evolution. They learn about the law and how that affects... the environment. They learn about ethics... and the environment."

Fehlau feels the course allows room for a variety of interests and self-direction. "Through the discussion leaders, through Dr. Stewart, and through the people who come to speak, no matter what [the student's] interest is, there's some sort of outlet for that."

"The required material of the course just makes sure that... [students] have done some serious thinking, but it doesn't really point [them] in any one direction, so students get out of it what they want to," he explained.

In terms of the purpose of CI-20, Stewart is concerned that students think about the issues and perhaps reevaluate their beliefs in the process.

"The most important thing is what they learn about their personal beliefs and values, and where these things came from," Stewart said. "In fact, what we're doing is using the problems that arise in relation to human beings and the natural world as a kind of area to explore how we make value-oriented decisions."

Stewart is impressed by the large number of students interested in exploring the complexities of "Wilderness and Human Values."

The course "has no connection with a major or a minor. It doesn't satisfy any degree requirement, and yet, it always has a very large enrollment, and it always gets very, very high praise from the students who take it," Stewart said. "Some of them even say it's the most important course they've taken on the campus."

Sperm Donors Solicited for Artificial Insemination

By MARY BETTY HEARD
Staff Writer

A few weeks ago in the front section of the Guardian, amidst the normal college paper ads for Carl's Jr. and Video Gallery, there appeared an advertisement requesting sperm donors.

The ad may seem humorous at first glance, but it raises several questions. What, for example, is the sperm used for? How much money can a man really make? How are the samples taken and stored? What are the legal responsibilities?

The answer at the phone number listed in the paper is a recorded message. It gave the name of the company (the Fertility Center of California), listed the qualifications of prospective donors, and explained that the sperm was used exclusively for artificial insemination.

According to the phone message, donors must be between 18 and 30 years of age, must be currently enrolled in a local college (or have taken two years of college), must be able to stay in the area for one-and-a-half to two years to donate, and must abstain from sex or masturbation for at least two days before donation. It also said that the donors were paid $35 per sample, but they may not be paid the first four times.

Maggie Castillo, director of the San Diego branch of the Fertility Center of California, said, "[Recipients] are concerned about [the donor's] background... these genes will be passed on to their family. Donors are required to have a college education because recipients want donors who have a good background and who are working toward a future goal."

"The donor doesn't know the recipient and the recipient doesn't know the donor."

She went on to explain that samples are taken by masturbation and put through a series of four tests. The samples must pass through "several phases of screening before [the samples] are actually used," Castillo said.

First, there is the semen testing. If the sample passes, there is the genetics testing, followed by urological screening and sexual transmitted disease testing, Castillo said. The donors aren't paid for their samples until they have passed all four tests; it may take up to four donations before a donor is paid, she continued.

Once the donor passes the testing, new samples are taken and frozen for storage (the samples are frozen as a solution of 50 percent semen, 50 percent freezing medium). The samples are then quarantined for six months. They must then pass three Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) tests. They can then be used for insemination.

All donors are required to sign a contract that protects anonymity.

"The donor doesn't know the recipient and the recipient doesn't know the donor... [the] donor is given a code [used instead of the name]," Castillo said.

UCSD men have a range of thoughts about donating sperm for artificial insemination. Would they donate sperm? (Last names have been withheld by request of the interviewees).

"I wouldn't — I think you have to look at the implications... in a sense [they're] your offspring, but you have no control over it," said Bruce (age 21) in regard to donating sperm.

"I would, for giving something... [but] at the same time, it's a part of me... somehow, either morally or legally, I'd feel partially responsible," said David (age 21).

There are other reasons for not donating. For example, one man, who requested his entire name be withheld, objected to the idea because he wasn't "sure of how it would be acquired and can't imagine a way it would be acquired that I would be [comfortable] with...."

John (age 27) would not donate unless they considered a more reasonable remuneration. "I think my bodily fluids are worth more than $35...."

One man, who also wished to remain anonymous, said he would donate his sperm. He began by saying that he was See DONORS, page 3

LESS THAN 3750 CHANCES LEFT TO CHANGE THE WORLD

Not everyone is cut out to change the world. After all, it takes education, skills and a spare two years. Also a willingness to work. Hard. This year 3,750 Americans will join the Peace Corps to do just that. They'll do things like build roads, plant forests and crops, teach English, develop small businesses, train community health workers, or even coach basketball. However, what they'll be doing isn't half as important as the fact that they'll be changing a little piece of the world ... for the better. And when they return, these 3,750 Americans will find that experience doing hard work will have another benefit. It's exactly what their next employers are looking for. So, give the Peace Corps your next two years. And while you're out changing the world, you'll also be making a place in it for yourself.

"so healthy and intelligent [that] I think there should be more people like me," but went on to admit that he had more philosophical reasons why he would donate his sperm.
The men's main overall objective was that they would feel morally responsible for an unknown child, and that their consciences would not be comfortable with the idea.

MURDER

The officer also testified that he observed a "deep abrasion" on Richardson's right pinky finger.

"I saw a mark that was indented into the finger [that] left an impression," Howard said. "It was a straight line, more or less, that appeared to curve with the finger. It was red ... like a burn."

Howard said that he observed a similar but "less pronounced" mark on Richardson's left pinky.

Richardson was said to have explained the first mark as a burn incurred while cooking the previous evening. He could not explain the second one.

Mabalot, the housekeeper, testified that on the evening of Dec. 19, the Richardsons "were happy" and said she saw both of them "working in the kitchen."

Testifying as an expert witness at the hearing was Norman Sperber, chief forensic dentist for the coroner of San Diego, who specializes in bite and skin mark identifications.

According to Sperber, his examination of Beth Richardson's body, which was found several feet from a long-wired telephone in her workplace, revealed the marks of "flexible ligatures around the neck and around the chin."

After making a model of these ligature marks from dental impression material and comparing it with a telephone wire of the type found near Beth Richardson's body, Sperber concluded that the "wire fit exactly as far as its width into the injury pattern on the neck."

Sperber explained that, to fit the injury pattern, a portion of the wire had to be turned on edge to fit the narrowing width of the right portion of the injury.

In response to queries by Siref, Richardson's lawyer, Sperber admitted that the neck injury could also have resulted from the alteration of a cord by cutting it to taper to a narrow width.

Sperber also testified that he examined Richardson's fingers while he was in the custody of the San Diego County Jail.

It was Sperber's opinion that Richardson's finger lesions could have been produced by a ligature."

A comparison of the telephone wire with a cast of Richardson's right pinky finger led Sperber to conclude that "the width of the ligature is consistent with the mark as seen on the mold of the right pinky."

Further testimony will be heard at the continuation of Richardson's preliminary hearing today in San Diego.

Richardson declined to comment on the proceedings.

Rugby

The UCSD rugby team lost its first game of the season when Cal State Fullerton came to town on Saturday and defeated the Tritons, 24-6. UCSD falls to 2-1 with the loss.

The game was close at the half when the Tritons were only down 7-3, and they inched even closer when John Tellenbach scored his second penalty kick of the day to make it 7-6 as the second half opened. But success would be short lived.

UCSD, not accustomed to trailing at the halfway point, suffered a mental lapse of sorts as Cal State Fullerton rattled off three straight tries and breezed to the 24-6 victory.

In the battle between the second sides, UCSD defeated Fullerton, 9-0.

UCSA BOARD MEETING HIGHLIGHTS

CAMPAIGN FOR HEALTH INSURANCE PROCEEDS ON MANY FRONTS Randy Giles, GSA President at UCSD; Sheila Allen, GSA Internal President at UCSF; and Lisa Adler, Chair of UCSA's Student Life and Concerns Committee will represent U.C. students on a Universitywide committee created by the Office of the President to review and make recommendations regarding student health services and insurance. The committee will explore is whether combining all campuses under a single system can bring the rates down for students. The committee will also decide whether or not the University should pay insurance premiums for student employees of the University or subsidize insurance costs for all students, both of which UCSA has urged the University to do in recent years. The committee is expected to begin its work in early February.

On the subject of how student health insurance should be financed, the Board adopted the position that student paid programs should be funded through the Registration Fee rather than through additional campus fees levied for insurance premiums. Health insurance is a traditional and appropriate area for Reg Fee funding; however, due to increasing demands on Reg Fee funds to support programs previously financed by the State, students desiring health insurance have gone outside the normal funding mechanisms in order to find money. While Ed and Reg fees are capped at 10% for any single year, campus based fees can be raised without limit. UCSA will also support AB10 by Assembly Member Hauser which would create a state administered health insurance program for all citizens. This bill is essentially a universal health insurance proposal which would require every citizen to enroll in a health insurance program. Employers would be required to pay 75% of the premium for all employees and their dependents. Unemployed and self-employed persons would pay their own premiums; however, assistance would be provided to those experiencing financial hardship. Additional funds would be obtained from a 1% tax on the gross patient revenues of hospitals, professional health care providers, health plans, and health insurers. UCSA Campus Offices will be contacting legislative District Offices in support of this bill.

LANGUAGE ADOPTED FOR UCSA LEGISLATION

UCSA has formally adopted the legislative language for the two bills that it will be sponsoring this year:

The first will be a resolution stating the intent of the Legislature that students control the use and allocation of all student fees and that students have operational control over student funded buildings. In addition, the resolution will request the University to report on the growth of campus based fees and their impact on the cost of education. The resolution also calls for the establishment of a committee under the auspices of the California Postsecondary Education Commission to submit a report to the Legislature regarding these issues.

The second UCSA legislative initiative involves student employee rights and benefits. The resolution calls upon the University to cease discriminating against student employees simply because they are part-time students and not full-time University employees. This is a particular problem in the area of health benefits since the University recently ruled that no student, regardless of what job s/he performs for the University, may receive health insurance. Approximately 900 student employees will lose their University paid health insurance due to that decision.

The resolution also seeks a study on the working conditions of academic student employees such as Teaching and Research Assistants. UCSA representatives at each campus are currently seeking individual employee grievances in areas such as pay, training, hours of work, grievance procedures, recruitment and selection, job duties, and the impact of work on academic goals.

For more information, contact Vaughn T. Rex, your UCSA rep., during his office hours every Tuesday 2:30-4:00 and Wednesday 4-6:30 at the A.S. External Affairs Office or call 534-4450.

Triton Sports Update ...

Men's Basketball

Triton forward Rick Batt, starting for the injured Gordon McNeill, scored an astounding 36 points and grabbed 13 rebounds on Friday night at the Triton Pavilion, but his feats were not enough in a 96-89 loss to Cal State San Bernardino.

UCSD (7-14) held a 48-40 lead at halftime and upped that lead to 13 points midway through the second half, but CS San Bernardino put together a 12-0 scoring run to overcome the deficit and put the game in the win column.

CSSB (15-5) made all 20 of its second half free throw attempts and 25 of 26 for the game. Gerald Duncan led CSSB with 33 points and Dave Webb added 21.

Golf

The UCSD golf team fell victim to Cal State Dominguez Hills in its first official match of the season last Friday, 390-398.

Rainy conditions at the Los Verdes Golf Club forced the match to last only nine holes, so the 195 and 199 team scores had to be doubled.

Tritons Ed Tischler and Devin Thomas finished with the top scores for UCSD, both shooting two over par with 38. The Tritons will compete against CSDH again and Cal State San Bernardino a week from today at Arrowhead Country Club.

new items, though, as team co-captain Jill Koster literally rebounded from a tough game to shine with 16 boards and 14 points, just above her team-leading average. Junior Chris Ely got into the act, canning several outside jumpers off some of Ragatz's nine assists.

The Bulldogs tried a little bit of everything to stop the Triton attack, including a full-court press, but nothing worked. UCSD succeeded in proving its superiority, eventually leading by 27 before settling on a 85-61 victory.

"At the beginning of the year, our goal was simply to work and play as hard as we can, and we've done that and we've been successful," summed up Malone on her team's 15-4 record.

Koenig, one of the three Triton seniors who finished in double figures, avowed, "I want it. My playing days are numbered, and I want to make the most of it. I want to do the best I can and help the team to be the best it can be."

As far as the playoff picture, Malone claims that, realistically, they must win the rest of their six games because there are seven teams in contention for spots in the western region. If UCSD can pull off the victories, not only would they obliterate the school record of 17 wins, but their numbers might just come up.

Lacrosse Sticks it to Claremont

By JONCARLO MARK
Staff Writer

Heading into the season, the men's lacrosse team was unsure of its destiny. The players knew they had talent and potential, yet there was some doubt that the youthful team could hold up under pressure.

However, Saturday's win could prove to be more than just the second league win for the Tritons. After UCSD whipped Claremont College 13-4, the team is realizing that playoffs are a real possibility.

"We played well as a team," stated defense person Orion Alcalay. "Our offense is really clicking and our defense is dominating all opposing attack."

It is easy to see why the Tritons was so uplifting for the Tritons because Claremont had a 2-0 record with both wins coming by more than a 10-point margin.

Leading the offensive charge for UCSD was Juan Millan, who pumped in five goals. Doug Shaddle, who scored three goals last week, had another impressive performance with a goal and an assist.

However, the goal that raised the most excitement was Dan Larsen's fast break "quick stick" score on the assist from John Rent.

Again the Triton defense, led by Sven Haynie, took apart the opposing attack. Head Coach Bruce Seitz singled out Haynie's performance as an example of how to play defense.

Goalie Joe Brown had 11 saves and received intense checking and support from Alcalay and Chuck Leslie.

The young Tritons will see if the confident enthusiasm will carry through to next week's game when they travel north to battle Occidental.

Rimas Uzgris/Guardian
Darren Gasparly and the Triton defense kept the Claremont sticks in check all day long.

PHIL'S ANALYSIS... So what if the Triton men's tennis team is 0-2 and playing this one on the road? The last two teams UCSD has been defeated by, USU and USD, are both Division I teams with excellent tennis programs. USD, who won all nine of the matches when it played UCSD, is top-ranked. But in Division III, the Tritons are top-ranked as well and have not yet had a chance to prove their high ranking against a Division III opponent. That will all change on Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m., when the Tritons travel south to face Point Loma Nazarene. Even without Hunter Galloway, UCSD's top-seeded player, this one should be an easy one for Sig Huber, Randy Mark, and company. Therefore, give two matches to Point Loma Nazarene and...

Nine Wins in a Row Sets School Record for Women's Basketball

15-4 Tritons Take Two Over the Weekend

By DANA CHAIKEN
Staff Writer

Ten, 11, 15, 21, 24, 25, and 32 may not have been the winning Lotto numbers, but they proved to be a jackpot combination for the UCSD women's basketball team in 91-74 and 85-61 victories over Cal State San Bernardino and Redlands this weekend. The Tritons (15-4) extend their winning streak to nine, a school record.

In the first half of the San Bernardino game, the squads traded the lead 18 times, with neither team opening a gap of more than six, which the host Tritons did 24-18 at the 9:15 mark. While the arch rival Coyotes relied on some fancy passing to fight back, UCSD used its bonus number to light it up and go ahead 32-29 on two consecutive long jumpers.

Twenty-one, Beth Koenig, started hot and stayed that way, tallying 12 in the half and a season-high 22 on a 9-14 shooting performance mostly from the 18-foot range.

Triton point-guard Nancy Caparaz added to her team-leading steal and assist totals in the waning moments of the half, picking off passes and dishing out others. She also scored her number, 11, and came close to a triple-double with 10 boards and nine steals.

UCSD found itself back on the court with a 41-35 lead and possession to start the second half, yet four minutes later looked up to discover a 12-point lead and a demoralized opponent that had yet to score.

Senior Tracy Ragatz burned off her first half shooting chill with a blazing run of eight consecutive points on two three-pointers and a jumper on her way to a 19-point evening. Last year's national leader in three-point percentage, she is currently ranked fifth in three-pointers made and 12th in percentage at 44.1 on 26 of 59 in Division III.

Reserve post 32, better known as Kathy Fitzpatrick, looked as if she was going to the big spin with some of her inside moves, as she tripled her scoring average with 11 and helped extend the Triton lead to 71-57.

Just when the Coyotes began a run, eventually closing within five at 71-66, UCSD repelled them with 20 points in the last four minutes. Half of those came from freshman Cari Young, the sixth Triton in double figures, along with Bernadette Diepenbrock, to close out the win 91-74.

Afterwards, Head Coach Judy Malone commented on the diversity of scoring. "We've got scoring punch from every position. They can't key on one player, like Beth [Koenig] being hot in the first half, and Tracy [Ragatz] going to work at the end."

Diepenbrock agreed, maintaining that "the inside game has developed, and we're a threat both ways [inside and outside]. They must choose who to guard."

"Kathy [Fitzpatrick] had a great game, especially when we needed it because Jill [Koster] was having an off night. She hit three against their big girl, played great defense, and hit her free throws," praised Malone about her transfer student.

Heading into Saturday night's game against the Redlands Bulldogs (5-11), Malone hoped that her guards would not be too tired, as Caparaz, Ragatz, and Koenig all played at least 35 minutes each against CSUSB.

She had no reason to worry. UCSD tallied close to the same numbers in less time against a team Malone claimed "does a lot of weird stuff."

"It's the same situation as the Smith Tournament," Malone pointed out, in reference to the tournament where UCSD rallied off a tough semi-final game to win the final the next night.

UCSD opened a bit slow, taking a minute to decipher the Bulldogs' box-and-one defense that keyed on Ragatz. After trailing 6-2, the Tritons quickly used the talents of the thankfully-not-tired group to come back and take a 9-8 lead they never relinquished.

Once again, Koenig lived up to the nickname "Swish" on her Colorado license plate, ripping 12 in the half and 21 overall, though she ended her streak of perfect free throw shooting at four games.

Luckily, the Tritons buried their outside shots because they were having difficulties on the offensive boards. Their defense, however, allowed Redlands to take three or four shots at times. "I wasn't satisfied with our defense. Essentially, we let them take every shot they wanted. If they'd shot better, it would have been a different game," stipulated Malone afterwards.

Different it wasn't, not even from the previous game, as the Tritons used the same combinations and tactics: Koenig jumpers, Fitzpatrick whirlwinds, and Caparaz and Ragatz assists to lead at the half 43-26.

The second half proved to be an instant replay of the first, as UCSD scored almost as many points using what worked in the first half. They incorporated some

Men's Tennis Attempts to Net A National Title This Year

By JORDAN KARUBIAN
Staff Writer

Head Coach John Hammermeister is engaged in the process of rebuilding UCSD's men's tennis team. Last year, the team made it to postseason play for the first time since 1984. This year, however, the team is more experienced and more capable, and its goals have risen accordingly. "This year," Hammermeister says with determination, "we are going to be a real factor in postseason play."

The players, most of whom are returning from last year's squad, have the ability to back up their coach's words. According to Hammermeister, current top-seeded player Sig Huber (25th in the country), "can play with anyone in Division III." Huber, along with Randy Mark, returning after a year at SDSU, and Chris Bello, who "takes divots out of the court on his serve," should be among the best players in Division III this year.

Other contributors to the Tritons' success include Jeff French, the only senior on the squad; Tim Ditzler, "the team's best athlete,"; Jim Elliot; Francois Monneur; and Hunter Galloway, the 10th ranked player in Division III who has recently resumed play after a leave of absence for personal reasons.

And the success seems imminent. The team is presently ranked fifth in the country by the Volvo Tennis Collegiate Rankings, and the doubles team of Huber and Galloway is also ranked fifth.

Their schedule is filled with matches against some of the top Division I teams as well as seven of the top 20 Division III teams, but UCSD is planning on beating up on Division III teams. Judging from the wealth of talent the Tritons boast, the opposition should be black and blue.

The Tritons will travel to Point Loma Nazarene on Wednesday to begin their Division III competition.

Randy Mark is currently the second-seeded player for UCSD.
