

These two pictures represent my overall experience with the UCSD campus climate.

These two pictures could represent the light and dark sides of the campus that I have experienced, in other words, the calm and peaceful side vs the agitated and rebellious side. The picture on the left of the sunrise near the Geisel Library my friend and I took before going to the gym. To me, this picture can convey the beginning of my college experience as well as the bright outlook I have for the rest of my collegiate days (the words beginning and bright can be related to the sunrise). The picture on the right was taken while I was observing the aftermath of the 2016 presidential election near Library Walk. Although all of the participating students were together and united for one cause, it honestly scared me to be on campus during this time.
